Along With Aims for Higher Living Standards

RUSS TO BEEF UP FORCES

MOSCOW, Sunday (AP) — The Soviet leadership announced today economic plans for the next five years that emphasized "a substantial rise in living standards" and stronger armed forces.

The 1960-70 development plan is intended to increase industrial production at about the same rate as the last five years, a period when Soviet economic growth slowed down from its 1950s' performance.

The military mention was not elaborated on. Earlier statements had said the Viet Nam situation forced an increase in the 1966 military budget, but it rose only as fast on the publicity disclosed part of military spending as the national income was claimed to have risen.

MORE cars, refrigerators and television sets and better diets were promised to this nation's 232 million persons. Average nonagricultural wages will rise to 114 rubles ($126.67) a month; the plan said.

A summary of it, distributed by Tass news agency, struck some informed observers as a fairly realistic document.

It contrasted sharply in its soberness with the bombastic promises made by former Premier Nikita Khrushchev in 1959 for the 1959-65 development plan. Many of those promises were not kept.

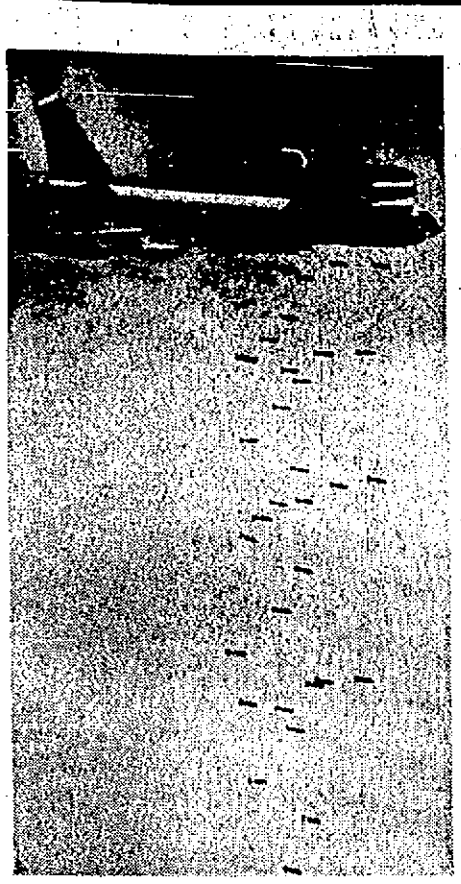

The Central Committee of the Soviet Communist Party, which lays down a policy for the government, approved the new plan at a secret meeting Saturday. The summary was made public early today as the party newspaper Pravda prepared to publish it.

PREMIER Alexei Kosygin reported to the committee on the plan, an announcement said.

He will present it March 29 to a party congress for final approval prior to its

Air Force Doubles Buildup in Viet Nam

(EDITOR'S NOTE: Ev Hosking, I. P-T Sunday Editor is in the West Pacific. This is the first of several articles dealing with air operations in that area.)

By EV HOSKING
I. P-T Sunday Editor

Buildup of U.S. forces in Southeast Asia is a lot more than political talk—it is a fact.

Pacific Air Force—the air component of the Unified Pacific Command—is a perfect example. Military personnel in August, 1964, in PACAF totaled around 47,000. Today the figure is 88,000, building toward 110,000.

The figures are for military personnel only—no civilians are included.

Now the 2nd Air Division in Viet Nam is larger than all of PACAF 18 months ago.

There isn't any discussion in the Pacific about the reasons for U.S. military personnel being here.

If South Viet Nam were to fall under Communist control, Thailand and a defenseless Laos would be exposed immediately, and left with no choice but to go along with the Communists.

It is generally believed out here that our withdrawal would signal the end of a U.S. military presence in Asia, discredit for all time the validity of our defense commitments and facilitate the Chinese Communist dominance of the entire West Pacific area.

Military and civilian leaders have pointed out that the United States is the only nation in the world with both the capacity and the willingness to side with the freedom-loving countries against a force they are powerless to oppose.

It is no paper war here. The growing might of the Pacific Air Forces is supporting other U.S. forces on an around-the-clock basis.

Tactical air strike and support units are engaged daily in just about every possible form of modern tactical air-ground warfare against a tough, capable and professionally trained enemy.

Backing up the front-line air forces are other air tactical units poised and ready on bases from Northern Japan and Korea southward to the China Sea.

Strategic Air Command B52 bombers and intercontinental missiles are lurking in the background as a strategic deterrent to unlimited warfare.

Within Pacific Air Forces there are about 60 squadrons of tactical air strike, support and defense units located on 30 air bases in seven foreign countries.

The tactical side of the war is only half the story. On the other side is the airlift where a tremendous effort is involved.

In a country where communication by road, rail and water has been reduced to a shambles, air-

Reds Attack Yanks' HQ, Driven Off

Americans Suffer Few Casualties in Sharp Fighting

SAIGON (UPI)—Communist Viet Cong, striking in the darkness early Sunday, fired small arms and 80 mortar rounds into the headquarters compound of the U.S. Army's 1st Cavalary Division. It was the first big attack by the Communists against the headquarters, 260 miles northeast of Saigon.

The guerrillas broke off the attack after 85 minutes of fighting outside An Khe town. An Khe is in an area containing a hard-surfaced airfield and a giant landing zone for helicopters of the division—the most modern ground force in the world.

A spokesman did not specify the portions of the division area brought under attack. He said the Americans suffered comparatively light casualties and material damage before the raiders were driven off.

The Viet Cong in their attack took advantage of the absence of most of the division's combat troops, who were participating in operation white wing about 300 miles northeast of Saigon.

* * * *

CAVALRYMEN in the operation reported Saturday they had boxed in a powerful Viet Cong force and that the Communists launched fanatic counterattacks in an effort to break out, braving hails of fire in some of the war's toughest fighting. The Viet Cong also shot up a flight of U.S. helicopters and hurled rockets at pursuing U.S. ground troops.

In the central highlands, the Viet Cong ambushed a Vietnamese convoy resupplying an outpost in Darlac Province. A company-size element of South Vietnamese regulars immediately was thrown into the action, killing at least 70 Communists and capturing a number of weapons.

Brown Set to Address Convention

By BOB HOUSER
I. P-T Political Editor

BAKERSFIELD — The California Democratic Council swatted its gadfly president, Simon Casady, of Grossmont, Saturday night with a 1,001-to-859, no-confidence vote.

Casady's defeat on the vote he called for and his immediate resignation cleared the way for convention appearances today by Gov. Edmund G. Brown, Lt. Gov. Glenn M. Anderson and State Controller Alan Cranston. Brown said he wouldn't make his traditional CDC appearance so long as Casady held the presidency.

Casady said he doesn't blame Brown for his defeat, although he declared it was certainly a victory for the governor. And he told a postballot news conference he had no feeling of bitterness with the success of his opponents, "only one of grudging admiration."

* * * *

AS FOR blaming Brown, Casady told reporters, "You don't blame a fox for catching a rabbit."

Casady's allusions to the animal world dotted his news conference. He spoke of Brown as a "pretty shrewd crow" and made another reference to wolves devouring caribou.

Brown and other CDC opponents had made Casady's volatile anti-Viet Nam War statements the issue in this test.

IN HIS resignation statement, Casady said the "delegates have spoken. The vote is decisive. It is your wish that I no longer remain. In keeping with my

Feel headachy, feverish and sore in the throat?

And the malady is creeping across state borders throughout the country to flatten sufferers in such widely separated areas as Alaska and Florida.

School officials in Pasadena, South Pasadena, Alhambra and San Marino are to be closed Monday, giving students a four-day weekend, counting Washington's birthday on Tuesday, to help slow the spread of flu there.

Parochial schools including Sts. Peter and Paul in Wilmington, St. Dominic Savio in Bellflower and Santa Barbara in Santa Ana also will close. Other area schools will remain open.

Absenteeism of pupils and teachers in some Los Angeles schools Friday hit 40% and health officials predict the epidemic will not even reach its peak until the middle of the week. Twenty per cent were absent in Long Beach.

The debilitating illness has struck in 24 of Califor-

Santa Ana Area Boom Top in U.S.

Garden Grove, Anaheim in Swift Growth Pattern

The U.S. Census Bureau reported Saturday that the Anaheim-Santa Ana-Garden Grove district in Orange County was the fastest-growing metropolitan area in the nation in the first half of the 1960-70 decade.

Population in this Southland district increased more than 9% to over one million, the bureau stated in a study entitled "Americans at Mid-Decade." It and three other metropolitan areas — Denver, Colo.; Miami, Fla., and New Orleans, La.—joined 22 others across the country which have populations over one million.

Another Southern California area, San Bernardino-Riverside-Ontario, was second in growth rate since 1960 with an increase of slightly less than 5% and a total population just under one million. Third was Washington, D.C., with growth rate just under 4%.

* * * *

THE federal government now lists the two Southern California areas as separate metropolitan districts, rather than combining them with the already sprawling Los Angeles area — which itself had an estimated population at mid-decade of 6.7 million and replaced Chicago, listed at 6.6 million, as second largest metropolitan area.

New York continued as the largest metropolitan area, with an estimated population at mid-decade of more than 11.3 million and a growth rate of slightly under 2%.

From its study of population patterns and trends

Academy Says 30 Fired for Infractions

WASHINGTON (AP)—The Air Force said Saturday about 30 cadets have been released from the Air Force Academy in Colorado since last April "for various reasons and infractions."

The comment was in reply to reports that several cadets were dismissed recently for violations of the honor code. It said the dismissals were no more numerous than average.

'PHONG SALY UNTOUCHED BY FIGHTING'

Peking Claim of Air Attack Doubted

TOKYO (AP)—The Embassy of Laos was puzzled today by Peking radio claims that U.S. planes fired 600 bullets at Communist China's "consulate general" in Phong Saly, Laos.

"This is the first time I have heard of a Chinese Consulate in Phong Saly," said an embassy official.

There are no Chinese diplomatic missions recognized by the government of Laos in that country, he said, except for the embassy in the capital, Vientiane.

China and North Viet Nam, however, also have diplomatic missions at Khang Kay, headquarters of the pro-Communist Pathet Lao, but these are not recognized by the royal government. These missions have been subjected before to air strikes.

Phong Saly is in a remote area and has been virtually untouched by fighting in recent years. The Chinese are reported to have a large road-building crew there as well as one or two battalions of security forces.

Phong Saly, which borders on mainland China, apparently is being used as a bridgehead for construction of strategic roads south through Laos.

The Laotian army reported capturing Chinese military personnel at Phong Saly as long as two years ago.

The area was under the nominal control of Gen. Khammouane Boupha, but he took himself and his 1,000 men over to the Communist side.

Besides the Chinese, the North Vietnamese have moved into Laos in force.

FREE AFTER 6-YEAR MURDER TERM

A 26-year-old former airman, who spent six years in prison for a murder he says he did not commit, was set free Saturday in Miami, Fla.

A 12-man jury deliberated for one hour and 40 minutes before finding Joseph Shea innocent.

Shea, a native of Woodhaven, N.Y., listened to the verdict without a flicker of emotion. Asked afterwards how he felt now, Shea said with a broad smile:

"I feel better now."

Shea was convicted six years ago of murdering a pretty, 23-year-old airline reservations clerk, Mary Meslener, largely on the basis of his own confession.

The confession was the crucial issue in the second trial. The defense contended it was obtained by trickery.

The state didn't deny it.

Ban Beaten

An American Samoan and a Baltimore white woman were married quietly Saturday in Washington, D.C., after having been denied a license in Baltimore.

Miss Jo Ann Kovacs, 25, a nurse in Baltimore General Hospital until two weeks ago, became the bride of Mekl Toalepai, a 26-year-old professional entertainer, in Episcopal rites at Washington Cathedral.

The Rev. Frederick James Hanna of Baltimore's Emmanuel Episcopal Church, performed the ceremony.

Mrs. Toalepai said "we'll go to a reception in Baltimore, then, on Wednesday, we'll fly to California." Toalepai is to join a nightclub troupe of Samoan folkdancers there.

Fan Mail at 92

Mary Garden, opera star who retired in 1934, is having a birthday today in a Scottish hospital. International reference works list her age as 89 but the hospital in Aberdeen, Scotland, said she will be 92.

Miss Garden, an Aberdeen native who went to the United States with her parents when she was 6 years old, has been in the hospital the past three years. Hospital officials described her health as good. They said she still receives fan mail.

Flea Bath Free

Thanks to Indiana Gov. Roger D. Branigin, 39 youths at Rockville Youth Camp will get to keep their mascot. They wrote Branigin Friday asking permission to keep a stray dog. They said a guard told them not to feed the dog so it would go away.

"The dog has taken all our hearts, and we would like to keep him around us," they wrote.

The governor's office granted the request and said the mascot's flea-bath and vaccination expenses could be billed to the governor's contingency fund if necessary.

Fanfani Back

'Premature'

Gov. George Wallace's news secretary, Ed Weing, called reports that Mrs. George Wallace is a certain candidate for governor of Alabama "definitely premature." A source close to the governor said Friday that Wallace's wife, Lurleen, would announce her candidacy next Thursday.

Offer Spurned

George Lincoln Rockwell, head of the American Nazi Party, said Saturday he had offered to make a $1,500 payment on a tax claim made by the Internal Revenue Service.

Rockwell's letter said he had offered previously to pay the $1,500—"all we could raise"—and to agree to additional payments.

"The department scorned this offer," Rockwell said, "and then proceeded to sell assets of the party worth thousands of dollars for approximately seven hundred dollars. . . ."

Kennedy Admits Proposal for Cong Peace Bid Risky

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Sen. Robert F. Kennedy, D-N.Y., authored his own peace plan for Viet Nam Saturday, using bits and pieces from both the Johnson administration's proposals and the Communist Viet Cong.

The brother of the late President based his plan on two key points: an advance announcement of a place at the peace table for the Viet Cong and a postwar government for South Viet Nam that would give the Viet Cong a "share of power and responsibility."

His plan is risky, Kennedy admitted at a press conference. But he said the risk was necessary. "Any negotiated settlement must accept the fact that there are discontented elements in South Viet Nam, Communist and non-Communists."

Kennedy's plan put him squarely in the middle of a fight between the administration and the Senate opponents of the war in Viet Nam, including Sens. J. William Fulbright, D-Ark., and Wayne Morse, D-Ore.

As for Fulbright's Senate Foreign Relations Committee, which is conducting hearings on the war, Kennedy had nothing but praise. He said, "There are hazards in debating American policy in the face of a stern and dangerous enemy. But that hazard is the essence of our democracy."

* * * *

THE FIRST STEP toward ending the war, Kennedy said, should be the notice from the United States that it would be willing to have the Viet Cong at peace talks.

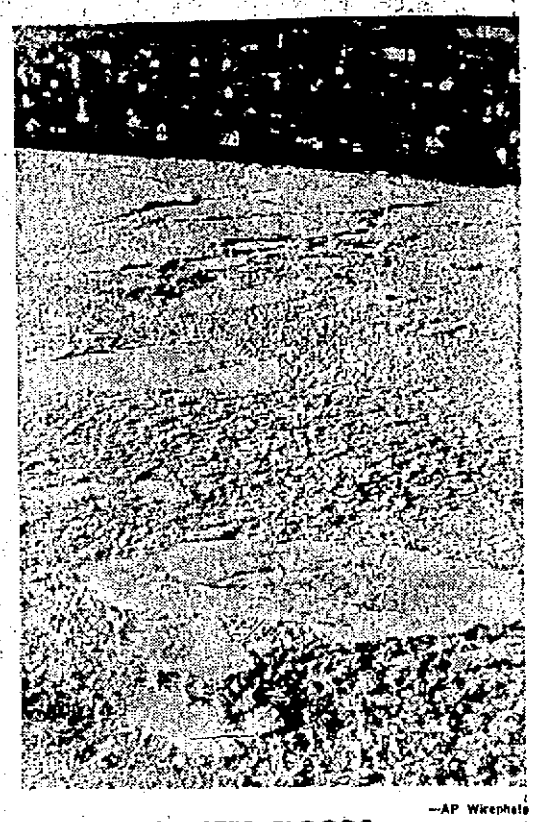

This brought Kennedy into a direct collision with South Vietnamese Premier Nguyen Cao Ky. Ky has said that he would not sit down with the National Liberation Front, which is the political arm of the Communist organization in South Viet Nam. Ky described them recently as criminals.

However, Kennedy said, "I don't think our policies in the United States should be controlled by the government in Saigon."

Despite the fact that Kennedy told newsmen with a smile that he has never been viewed as a spokesman for the Johnson administration, his peace plan contained elements the administration has proposed.

Kennedy said he favors participation by the Viet Cong as an "independent entity" in peace negotiations. Secretary of State Dean Rusk said Friday, while on the grid before Fulbright's committee, that the United States opposes a Communist demand that the Viet Cong he the "sole spokesman" for the South Vietnamese.

In his plan, Kennedy told newsmen the use of American military might should be "restricted" to what would be needed to support the limited U.S. objective. In explaining the administration position, Rusk said the United States continually has tried to avoid escalating the war and has responded only to a Communist buildup. However, the administration has not supported the idea of an advance notice of a peace table chair for the Viet Cong.

Deukmejian Hits Brown 'Legerdemain' Tax Plan

SACRAMENTO — Republican Assemblyman George Deukmejian of Long Beach sharply criticized Saturday a Senate Finance Committee proposal to avoid a state tax hike by using Gov. Edmund G. Brown's planned new accounting system.

He accused the governor of putting on "a display of legerdemain unequaled since Houdini" and charged Brown was turning the State Capitol "into a carnival sideshow in an attempt to fool the people . . ."

Deukmejian said that two months ago the Democratic administration in Sacramento announced it anticipated a need to raise $300 million or more in new or increased taxes.

"But with the wave of (Brown's) magic wand, the revenue gap has disappeared and a rabbit-like surplus of $15 million is pulled out of the hat."

First, said Deukmejian, Brown "pulled the 'now you see it—now you don't' sleight of hand trick whereby he excused $100 million of his deficit through a partial bookkeeping trick.

"For the second act," the Republican whip said, the governor "proposed to eliminate the standard deduction on our income tax for a one-time windfall of $140 million."

since the last census was taken in 1960, the bureau concluded that Americans are still flocking to metropolitan areas but the flight to the suburbs — the trend which characterized the 1940s and 1950s — may be losing some of its force.

* * * *

OTHER noteworthy changes in the national population structure since 1960 were listed:

1. The total population increased by about 2.8 million yearly, reaching 195 million last August.

2. California replaced New York as the most populous state, while Texas moved from sixth to fifth.

3. The West continued to be the fastest growing region, with Nevada showing the largest percentage increase.

4. The number of women continued to increase faster than men.

The bureau said the metropolitan areas—the nation now has 228 of them—increased twice as fast as other parts of the nation but, compared with the previous decade, the upward trend appeared to be slowing. More than three of every five Americans lived in these areas at mid-decade.

The annual rate of metropolitan area growth was 2.3% during the 1950s but had slowed to 1.9% during the first half of the 1960s.

Lynda Bird Wins On a Hunch Bet

NEW ORLEANS (AP)—Lynda Bird Johnson went to the fair grounds race track Saturday, looked over the entries in the fifth race and made a hunch bet on Texas Tea.

It was a good hunch for the President's daughter. Texas Tea galloped to a two-length victory and paid $8.40 for a $2 ticket.

Secret Service men kept the curious at a distance as Miss Johnson, Hamilton and others in the party watched the first five races from a corner table in the clubhouse.

"She is just here to have a good time, that's all," a Secret Service spokesman said. He declined further comment.

Earlier, a White House spokesman declined to discuss her holiday here from studies at the University of Texas, describing her activities as private.

Friends said Miss Johnson and Hamilton will be in New Orleans through Tuesday.

adoption as a formal government program.

The Central Committee's first secretary and party boss, Leonid Brezhnev, gave a report at its meeting and "an appropriate decision" was adopted. The announcement gave no hint what it was about.

Informed sources said it concerned arrangements for the congress. Speculation here involved personnel changes at the congress, a re-examination there of Stalin's role in Soviet history, and some move on the China dispute.

IN AN apparent reference to Chinese criticism, the plan summary emphasized that fulfilment of its goals would strengthen the Communist world in competition with the West.

It would fulfil the Soviet duty to "the world liberation movement," the summary said.

China has charged the Russians with going soft on consumer goods instead of devoting their resources to world revolution.

ONE OF THE Strategic Air Command's mighty B52 intercontinental bombers drops its weapons over a military target in South Viet Nam. The big bombers carry 750-pound "iron bombs," 27 in the bomb bay and 24 under the wings.

Air Force Doubles Buildup in Viet Nam

(EDITOR'S NOTE: Ev Hosking, I. P-T Sunday Editor is in the West Pacific. This is the first of several articles dealing with air operations in that area.)

By EV HOSKING
I. P-T Sunday Editor

Buildup of U.S. forces in Southeast Asia is a lot more than political talk—it is a fact.

Pacific Air Force—the air component of the Unified Pacific Command—is a perfect example. Military personnel in August, 1964, in PACAF totaled around 47,000. Today the figure is 88,000, building toward 110,000.

The figures are for military personnel only—no civilians are included.

Now the 2nd Air Division in Viet Nam is larger than all of PACAF 18 months ago.

There isn't any discussion in the Pacific about the reasons for U.S. military personnel being here.

If South Viet Nam were to fall under Communist control, Thailand and a defenseless Laos would be exposed immediately, and left with no choice but to go along with the Communists.

It is generally believed out here that our withdrawal would signal the end of a U.S. military presence in Asia, discredit for all time the validity of our defense commitments and facilitate the Chinese Communist dominance of the entire West Pacific area.

Military and civilian leaders have pointed out that the United States is the only nation in the world with both the capacity and the willingness to side with the freedom-loving countries against a force they are powerless to oppose.

It is no paper war here. The growing might of the Pacific Air Forces is supporting other U.S. forces on an around-the-clock basis.

Tactical air strike and support units are engaged daily in just about every possible form of modern tactical air-ground warfare against a tough, capable and professionally trained enemy.

Backing up the front-line air forces are other air tactical units poised and ready on bases from Northern Japan and Korea southward to the China Sea.

Strategic Air Command B52 bombers and intercontinental missiles are lurking in the background as a strategic deterrent to unlimited warfare.

Within Pacific Air Forces there are about 60 squadrons of tactical air strike, support and defense units located on 30 air bases in seven foreign countries.

The tactical side of the war is only half the story. On the other side is the airlift where a tremendous effort is involved.

In a country where communication by road, rail and water has been reduced to a shambles, air-

Along With Aims for Higher Living Standards

RUSS TO BEEF UP FORCES

MOSCOW, Sunday (AP) — The Soviet leadership announced today economic plans for the next five years that emphasized "a substantial rise in living standards" and stronger armed forces.

The 1960-70 development plan is intended to increase industrial production at about the same rate as the last five years, a period when Soviet economic growth slowed down from its 1950s' performance.

The military mention was not elaborated on. Earlier statements had said the Viet Nam situation forced an increase in the 1966 military budget, but it rose only as fast on the publicity disclosed part of military spending as the national income was claimed to have risen.

MORE cars, refrigerators and television sets and better diets were promised to this nation's 232 million persons. Average nonagricultural wages will rise to 114 rubles ($126.67) a month, the plan said.

A summary of it, distributed by Tass news agency, struck some informed observers as a fairly realistic document.

It contrasted sharply in its soberness with the bombastic promises made by former Premier Nikita Khrushchev in 1959 for the 1959-65 development plan. Many of those promises were not kept.

The Central Committee of the Soviet Communist Party, which lays down a policy for the government, approved the new plan at a secret meeting Saturday. The summary was made public early today as the party newspaper Pravda prepared to publish it.

PREMIER Alexei Kosygin reported to the committee on the plan, an announcement said.

He will present it March 29, to a party congress for final approval prior to its

Casady Resigns CDC Post as He Loses Poll

Brown Set to Address Convention

By BOB HOUSER
I. P-T Political Editor

BAKERSFIELD — The California Democratic Council swatted its gadfly president, Simon Casady, of Grossmont, Saturday night with a 1,001-to-859, no-confidence vote.

Casady's defeat on the vote he called for and his immediate resignation cleared the way for convention appearances today by Gov. Edmund G. Brown, Lt. Gov. Glenn M. Anderson and State Controller Alan Cranston. Brown said he wouldn't make his traditional CDC appearance so long as Casady held the presidency.

Casady said he doesn't blame Brown for his defeat, although he declared it was certainly a victory for the governor. And he told a postballot news conference he had no feeling of bitterness with the success of his opponents, "only one of grudging admiration."

* * * *

AS FOR blaming Brown, Casady told reporters, "You don't blame a fox for catching a rabbit."

Casady's allusions to the animal world dotted his news conference. He spoke of Brown as a "pretty shrewd crow" and made another reference to wolves devouring caribou.

Brown and other CDC opponents had made Casady's volatile anti-Viet Nam War statements the issue in this test.

IN HIS resignation statement, Casady said the "delegates have spoken. The vote is decisive. It is your wish that I no longer remain. In keeping with my

Reds Attack Yanks' HQ, Driven Off

Americans Suffer Few Casualties in Sharp Fighting

SAIGON (UPI)—Communist Viet Cong, striking in the darkness early Sunday, fired small arms and 80 mortar rounds into the headquarters compound of the U.S. Army's 1st Cavalary Division. It was the first big attack by the Communists against the headquarters, 260 miles northeast of Saigon.

The guerrillas broke off the attack after 85 minutes of fighting outside An Khe town. An Khe is in an area containing a hard-surfaced airfield and a giant landing zone for helicopters of the division—the most modern ground force in the world.

A spokesman did not specify the portions of the division area brought under attack. He said the Americans suffered comparatively light casualties and material damage before the raiders were driven off.

The Viet Cong in their attack took advantage of the absence of most of the division's combat troops, who were participating in operation white wing about 300 miles northeast of Saigon.

* * * *

CAVALRYMEN in the operation reported Saturday they had boxed in a powerful Viet Cong force and that the Communists launched fanatic counter-attacks in an effort to break out, braving hails of fire in some of the war's toughest fighting. The Viet Cong also shot up a flight of U.S. helicopters and hurled rockets at pursuing U.S. ground troops.

In the central highlands, the Viet Cong ambushed a Vietnamese convoy resupplying an outpost in Darlac Province. A company-size element of South Vietnamese regulars immediately was thrown into the action, killing at least 70 Communists and capturing a number of weapons.

Garden Grove, Anaheim in Swift Growth Pattern

The U.S. Census Bureau reported Saturday that the Anaheim-Santa Ana-Garden Grove district in Orange County was the fastest-growing metropolitan area in the nation in the first half of the 1960-70 decade.

Population in this Southland district increased more than 9% to over one million, the bureau stated in a study entitled "Americans at Mid-Decade." It and three other metropolitan areas — Denver, Colo.; Miami, Fla., and New Orleans, La.—joined 22 others across the country which have populations over one million.

Another Southern California area, San Bernardino-Riverside-Ontario, was second in growth rate since 1960 with an increase of slightly less than 5% and a total population just under one million. Third was Washington, D.C., with growth rate just under 4%.

* * * *

THE federal government now lists the two Southern California areas as separate metropolitan districts, rather than combining them with the already sprawling Los Angeles area — which itself had an estimated population at mid-decade of 6.7 million and replaced Chicago, listed at 6.6 million, as second largest metropolitan area.

New York continued as the largest metropolitan area, with an estimated population at mid-decade of more than 11.3 million and a growth rate of slightly under 2%.

From its study of population patterns and trends

Feel headachy, feverish and sore in the throat?

And the malady is creeping across state borders throughout the country to flatten sufferers in such widely separated areas as Alaska and Florida.

School officials in Pasadena, South Pasadena, Alhambra and San Marino are to be closed Monday, giving students a four-day weekend, counting Washington's birthday on Tuesday, to help slow the spread of flu there.

Parochial schools including Sts. Peter and Paul in Wilmington, St. Dominic Savio in Bellflower and Santa Barbara in Santa Ana also will close. Other area schools will remain open.

Absenteeism of pupils and teachers in some Los Angeles schools Friday hit 40% and health officials predict the epidemic will not even reach its peak until the middle of the week. Twenty per cent were absent in Long Beach.

The debilitating illness has struck in 24 of Califor-

Academy Says 30 Fired for Infractions

WASHINGTON (AP)—The Air Force said Saturday about 30 cadets have been released from the Air Force Academy in Colorado since last April 'for various reasons and infractions."

The comment was in reply to reports that several cadets were dismissed recently for violations of the honor code. It said the dismissals were no more numerous than average.

'PHONG SALY UNTOUCHED BY FIGHTING'

Peking Claim of Air Attack Doubted

TOKYO (AP)—The Embassy of Laos was puzzled today by Peking radio claims that U.S. planes fired 600 bullets at Communist China's "consulate general" in Phong Saly, Laos.

"This is the first time I have heard of a Chinese Consulate in Phong Saly," said an embassy official.

There are no Chinese diplomatic missions recognized by the government of Laos in that country, he said, except for the embassy in the capital, Vientiane.

China and North Viet Nam, however, also have diplomatic missions at Khang Kay, headquarters of the pro-Communist Pathet Lao, but these are not recognized by the royal government. These missions have been subjected before to air strikes.

Phong Saly is in a remote area and has been virtually untouched by fighting in recent years. The Chinese are reported to have a large road-building crew there as well as one or two battalions of security forces.

Phong Saly, which borders on mainland China, apparently is being used as a bridgehead for construction of strategic roads south through Laos.

The Laotian army reported capturing Chinese military personnel at Phong Saly as long as two years ago.

The area was under the nominal control of Gen. Khammouane Boupha, but he took himself and his 1,000 men over to the Communist side.

Besides the Chinese, the North Vietnamese have moved into Laos in force.

IT'S NO 'PAPER WAR' OUT THERE

lift has meant the difference between defeat and survival, not only for the military forces, but for the civilian population. Aircraft are the lifeline for hundreds of communities in South Viet Nam isolated by Viet Cong action.

At one time, three C123 aircraft lifted over 200,000 pounds of rice daily into Pleiku to make up for road traffic which was unable to move the 140 miles along Route 19 from Qui Nhon.

It's a weird war against a faceless foe, where it is impossible to distinguish friend from enemy, where targets are fleeting and where friends are a priceless asset.

And it is the airlift with its ceaseless efforts to get supplies through that is making friends.

The complexity of the war is almost as difficult to comprehend as is the vastness of the geography across which forces must operate and be supplied.

Pacific Air Forces area of military interest reaches from the continental United States west to the Indian Ocean and the Ural Mountains. The most striking feature is the distances involved—2,400 miles from Washington D.C. to the Pacific Coast, 2,500 miles from Long Beach to Honolulu —and another 6,000 miles to Saigon.

Constantly, while attention is being focused on Southeast Asia, PACAF must keep a wary eye on other possible trouble spots in the Far East.

As a precautionary measure, PACAF has other tactical fighter forces which could be deployed if necessary. Because of the proximity of PACAF bases to the Communist mainland, these fighter forces — always on 24-hour alert—are ideally located for any quick action that might be necessary.

The continuing buildup in Southeast Asia began with the Gulf of Tonkin incident in August 1964, with major emphasis coming a year later.

New air squadrons are arriving as airfield construction permits. In one instance it took slightly over two months to build from scratch an operational base with 10,000-foot-long, aluminum-mat runway equipped with combat fighters.

The air efforts are known to have had significant impact on the Viet Cong. Exactly how many Viet Cong have been killed by air is difficult to determine. The U. S. Military Assistance Command in Viet Nam believes that the U.S. Air Forces and the Viet Nam Air Force have killed by air strike over 20,000 Viet Cong during 1965.

The air forces have destroyed or damaged some 125,000 structures and over 3,800 sampans.

For the statistical-mind, Air Force pilots striking routes of travel in Communist North Viet Nam during 1965 destroyed 315 bridges and damaged 838. They attacked ferry complexes 243 times and cratered 106 river fords. In addition, roads were cut in 2,050 places and railroads were slashed in 286 spots. Four highway tunnels were caved in.

One thing is sure, and that is that the Viet Cong effectiveness against the armed forces of the Republic of Viet Nam has fallen off.

Throughout 1965, Air Forces pilots flew more than 11,000 strike sorties over the Communist north in A1E, B-57, F100, F104, F105 and F4C aircraft, expending about 22,000 tons of ordnance.

F105 Thunderchief pilots flew about 75% of the sorties. Of the night missions flown, most were logged by F4C pilots.

In addition to strike sorties, Air Force crews flew escort missions, providing high cover against enemy aircraft. They also flew rescue operations, psychological - warfare missions and reconnaissance sorties.

On psychological - warfare missions, F105 pilots dropped millions of leaflets over the Communist north. Air Force C130 Hercules crews dropped leaflets and gift packages to the North Vietnamese on special occasions such as Children's Day and Christmas.

Reconnaisance missions were flown in RB66 Destroyers and RF4C Phantoms as well as the RF101.

This has not been without cost.

Fifty-six Air Force pilots were listed as missing in action. Eight are known dead and six known captured.

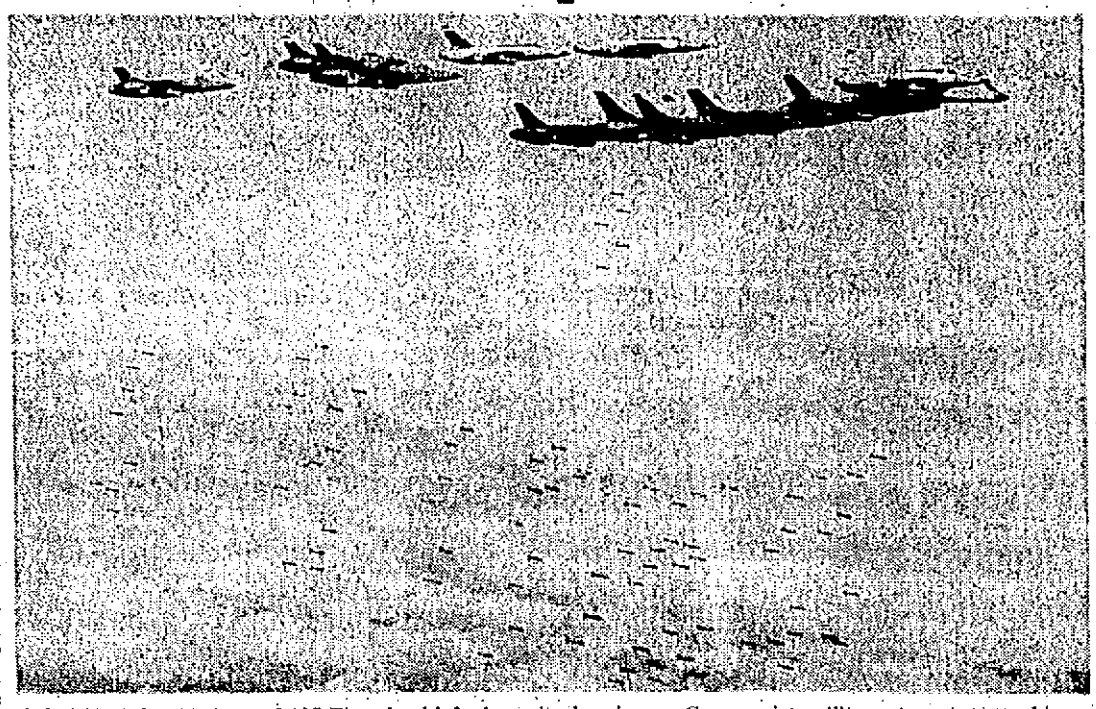

On the brighter side, rescue crews recovered 49 downed pilots from North Viet Nam during the year. Of the rescued airmen, 26 were Air Force crew members, 21 were Navy fliers and two were VNAF pilots.

Rescues in the Communist north were made by helicopter crews, and rescues from the South China sea were handled by Air Force crews flying the amphibious HU16 Albatross.

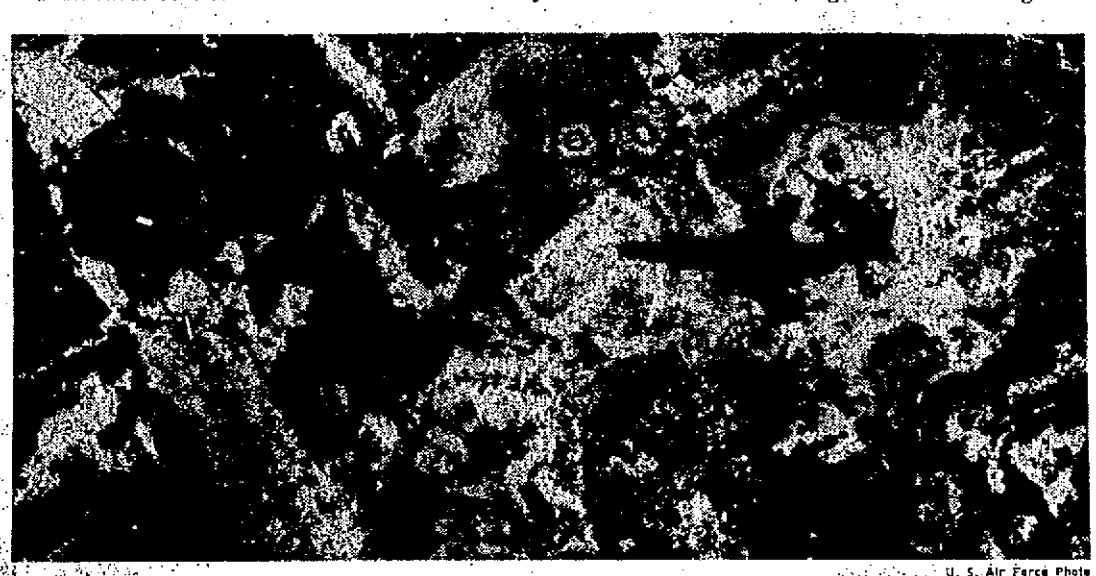

Figures just don't tell the whole story.

Yet the stakes are even greater.

A FLIGHT OF Air Force F105 Thunderchiefs drops its bombs on Communist military targets, attacking under radar control from the Air Force B66 Destroyer. Air Force now is attacking Red Viet Nam targets.

Viet War Major Issue GOP Told

A Georgia congressman predicted here Saturday that the war in Viet Nam will be a major peg in the 1966 congressional campaign and urged fellow Republicans to use the issue to the hilt.

Speaking to conference of United Republicans of California in the Lafayette Hotel, Rep. Howard H. Callaway said that handling of the war by the Johnson administration is "confusing" and open to criticism.

"We differ with him on methods," said the 38-year-old West Point graduate," although we support the objectives of the President."

Callaway called for a blockade of the North Vietnamese port of Haiphong and bombing of missile sites in that country.

* * * *

THE BOARD OF directors policy committee later tentatively approved a resolution is "apparently following a no-win policy" in the Asian country.

Influenza throughout the state decimated the representatives of the organization and resulted in no formal action because of lack of a quorum.

Callaway said that Republicans should "be prepared to exploit conduct of the war into sweeping political gains."

Toy Sticks in Throat, Kills Child

Dead on arrival at Pioneer Hospital in Artesia at 6:50 p.m. was Juan, 30-month-old son of Mr. and Mrs. Jesus Chavez, 21220 Devlin Ave.

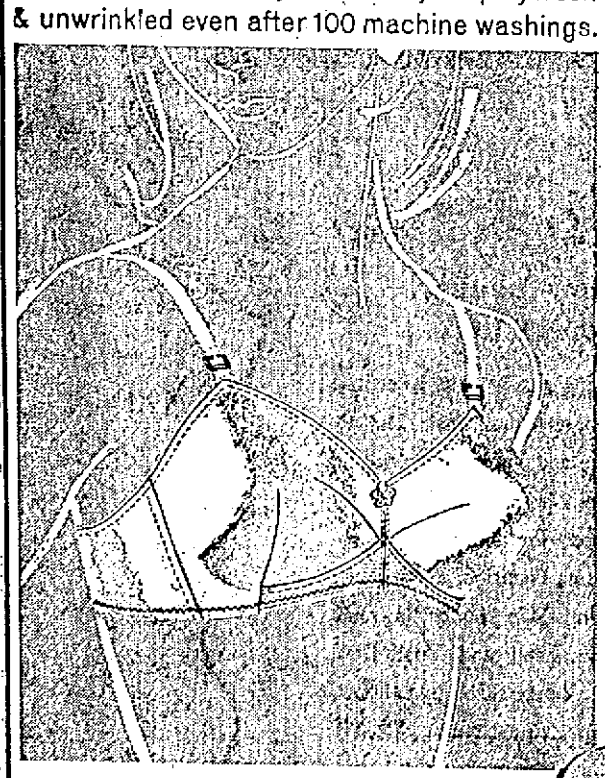

Sheriff's Deputy Jerry West said the infant had been playing with his older brothers when he swallowed the balloon. It lodged in his windpipe.

FREE AFTER 6-YEAR MURDER TERM

A 26-year-old former airman, who spent six years in prison for a murder he says he did not commit, was set free Saturday in Miami, Fla.

A 12-man jury deliberated for one hour and 40 minutes before finding Joseph Shea innocent.

Shea, a native of Woodhaven, N.Y., listened to the verdict without a flicker of emotion. Asked afterwards how he felt now, Shea said with a broad smile:

"I feel better now."

Shea was convicted six years ago of murdering a pretty, 23-year-old airline reservations clerk, Mary Meslener, largely on the basis of his own confession.

The confession was the crucial issue in the second trial. The defense contended it was obtained by trickery.

The state didn't deny it.

An American Samoan and a Baltimore white woman were married quietly Saturday in Washington, D.C., after having been denied a license in Baltimore.

Miss Jo Ann Kovacs, 25, a nurse in Baltimore General Hospital until two weeks ago, became the bride of Meki Toalepai, a 26-year-old professional entertainer, in Episcopal rites at Washington Cathedral.

The Rev. Frederick James Hanna of Baltimore's Emmanuel Episcopal Church, performed the ceremony.

Mrs. Toalepai said "we'll go to a reception in Baltimore, then, on Wednesday, we'll fly to California." Toalepai is to join a nightclub troupe of Samoan folkdancers there.

Fan Mail at 92

Mary Garden, opera star who retired in 1934, is having a birthday today in a Scottish hospital. International reference works list her age as 89 but the hospital in Aberdeen, Scotland, said she will be 92.

Miss Garden, an Aberdeen native who went to the United States with her parents when she was 6 years old, has been in the hospital the past three years. Hospital officials described her health as good. They said she still receives fan mail.

Flea Bath Free

Thanks to Indiana Gov. Roger D. Branigin, 39 youths at Rockville Youth Camp will get to keep their mascot. They wrote Branigin Friday asking permission to keep a stray dog. They said a guard told them not to feed the dog so it would go away.

"The dog has taken all our hearts, and we would like to keep him around us," they wrote.

The governor's office granted the request and said the mascot's fleabath and vaccination expenses could be billed to the governor's contingency fund if necessary.

Fanfani Back

'Premature'

Gov. George Wallace's news secretary, Ed Weing, called reports that Mrs. George Wallace is a certain candidate for governor of Alabama "definitely premature." A source close to the governor said Friday that Wallace's wife, Lurleen, would announce her candidacy next Thursday.

Offer Spurned

George Lincoln Rockwell, head of the American Nazi Party, said Saturday he had offered to make a $1,500 payment on a tax claim made by the Internal Revenue Service.

Rockwell's letter said he had offered previously to pay the $1,500 — "all we could raise"—and to agree to additional payments.

"The department scorned this offer," Rockwell said, "and then proceeded to sell assets of the party worth thousands of dollars for approximately seven hundred dollars. . . ."

Kennedy Admits Proposal for Cong Peace Bid Risky

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Sen. Robert F. Kennedy, D-N.Y., authored his own peace plan for Viet Nam Saturday, using bits and pieces from both the Johnson administration's proposals and the Communist Viet Cong.

The brother of the late President based his plan on two key points: an advance announcement of a place at the peace table for the Viet Cong and a postwar government for South Viet Nam that would give the Viet Cong a "share of power and responsibility."

His plan is risky, Kennedy admitted at a press conference. But he said the risk was necessary. "Any negotiated settlement must accept the fact that there are discontented elements in South Viet Nam, Communist and non-Communists."

Kennedy's plan put him squarely in the middle of a fight between the administration and the Senate opponents of the war in Viet Nam, including Sens. J. William Fulbright, D-Ark., and Wayne Morse, D-Ore.

As for Fulbright's Senate Foreign Relations Committee, which is conducting hearings on the war, Kennedy had nothing but praise. He said, "There are hazards in debating American policy in the face of a stern and dangerous enemy. But that hazard is the essence of our democracy."

* * * *

THE FIRST STEP toward ending the war, Kennedy said, should be the notice from the United States that it would be willing to have the Viet Cong at peace talks.

This brought Kennedy into a direct collision with South Vietnamese Premier Nguyen Cao Ky. Ky has said that he would not sit down with the National Liberation Front, which is the political arm of the Communist organization in South Viet Nam. Ky described them recently as criminals.

However, Kennedy said, "I don't think our policies in the United States should be controlled by the government in Saigon."

Despite the fact that Kennedy told newsmen with a smile that he has never been viewed as a spokesman for the Johnson administration, his peace plan contained elements the administration has proposed.

Kennedy said he favors participation by the Viet Cong as an "independent entity" in peace negotiations. Secretary of State Dean Rusk said Friday, while on the grid before Fulbright's committee, that the United States opposes a Communist demand that the Viet Cong be the "sole spokesman" for the South Vietnamese.

In his plan, Kennedy told newsmen the use of American military might should be "restricted" to what would be needed to support the limited U.S. objective. In explaining the administration position,

Rusk said the United States continually has tried to avoid escalating the war and has responded only to a Communist buildup. However, the administration has not supported the idea of an advance notice of a peace table chair for the Viet Cong.

Deukmejian Hits Brown 'Legerdemain' Tax Plan

SACRAMENTO — Republican Assemblyman George Deukmejian of Long Beach sharply criticized Saturday a Senate Finance Committee proposal to avoid a state tax hike by using Gov. Edmund G. Brown's planned new accounting system.

He accused the governor of putting on "a display of legerdemain unequaled since Houdini" and charged Brown was turning the State Capitol "into a carnival sideshow in an attempt to fool the people . . ."

Deukmejian said that two months ago the Democratic administration in Sacramento announced it anticipated a need to raise $300 million or more in new or increased taxes.

"But with the wave of (Brown's) magic wand, the revenue gap has disappeared and a rabbit-like surplus of $15 million is pulled out of the hat."

First, said Deukmejian, Brown "pulled the 'now you see it—now you don't' sleight of hand trick whereby he excused $100 million of his deficit through a partial bookkeeping trick.

"For the second act," the Republican whip said, the governor "proposed to eliminate the standard deduction on our income tax for a one-time windfall of $140 million."

since the last census was taken in 1960, the bureau concluded that Americans are still flocking to metropolitan areas but the flight to the suburbs — the trend which characterized the 1940s and 1950s — may be losing some of its force.

* * * *

OTHER noteworthy changes in the national population structure since 1960 were listed:

1. The total population increased by about 2.8 million yearly, reaching 195 million last August.

2. California replaced New York as the most populous state, while Texas moved from sixth to fifth.

3. The West continued to be the fastest growing region, with Nevada showing the largest percentage increase.

4. The number of women continued to increase faster than men.

The bureau said the metropolitan areas—the nation now has 228 of them—increased twice as fast as other parts of the nation but, compared with the previous decade, the upward trend appeared to be slowing. More than three of every five Americans lived in these areas at mid-decade.

The annual rate of metropolitan area growth was 2.3% during the 1950s but had slowed to 1.9% during the first half of the 1960s.

Elsewhere in the nation, 25% of the students in Providence, R. I., upper classes were reported ill and a 15% absentee rate was reported by both schools and industries in Worcester, Mass.

The U.S. Public Health Service acknowledged that there has been an increase in pneumonia - influenza deaths in the New England and South Atlantic area.

Lynda Bird Wins On a Hunch Bet

NEW ORLEANS (UPI)—Lynda Bird Johnson went to the fair grounds race track Saturday, looked over the entries in the fifth race and made a hunch bet on Texas Tea.

It was a good hunch for the President's daughter. Texas Tea galloped to a two-length victory and paid $8.40 for a $2 ticket.

Secret Service men kept the curious at a distance as Miss Johnson, Hamilton and others in the party watched the first five races from a corner table in the clubhouse.

"She is just here to have a good time, that's all," a Secret Service spokesman said. He declined further comment.

Earlier, a White House spokesman declined to discuss her holiday here from studies at the University of Texas, describing her activities as private.

Friends said Miss Johnson and Hamilton will be in New Orleans through Tuesday.

adoption as a formal government program.

The Central Committee's first secretary and party boss, Leonid Brezhnev, gave a report at its meeting and "an appropriate decision" was adopted. The announcement gave no hint what it was about.

Informed sources said it concerned arrangements for the congress. Speculation here involved personnel changes at the congress, a re-examination there of Stalin's role in Soviet history, and some move on the China dispute.

* * * *

IN AN apparent reference to Chinese criticism, the plan summary emphasized that fulfilment of its goals would strengthen the Communist world in competition with the West.

It would fulfil the Soviet duty to "the world liberation movement," the summary said.

China has charged the Russians with going soft on consumer goods instead of devoting their resources to world revolution.

Probe Probers Delay Caused by a Probe

NEW DELHI, India (UPI)—A new Delhi man complained that it took six weeks for a telegram he had sent to Secunderabad to be delivered. An investigation was ordered. It disclosed that the delay was caused by a telegraph agency investigation to determine if it had an office in Secunderabad.

Turkish Cypriot Officer Defects

NICOSIA, Cyprus (UPI) — A senior officer of the Turkish Cypriot police fled the Turkish enclave in Nicosia Saturday and sought political asylum in the Greek-controlled part of the capital, a government announcement said.

He was identified as former Cyprus Police Superintendent Kiazim Namik.

Casady Resigns as CDC Leader as Result of Poll

promise, I intend to resign at the close of the present session . . . I thank you all. It's been a great convention. Carry on."

Delegates then voted approval on a special by-law terminating the terms of all CDC officers and calling for immediate new nominations and elections by this convention. Most probable candidates to succeed Casady are Charles Gant, of Santa Ana, who resigned a few months ago as a result of the Casady dispute; Jerry Hill of San Francisco, and Knox Mellon ,of Claremont.

Don Bradley, Gov. Brown's past and present campaign director, showed up at the convention about 3 p.m. Saturday, looming like bad news for the pro-Casady people. To them he appeared to be the advance man for the gubernatorial team, with advance knowledge, somehow, of the confidence vote's outcome.

Bradley, however, said he was just observing.

Asked his reaction, he said, "It's kind of sad. But I guess it was necessary."

* * * *

CASADY, midway in what was to have been a two-year term at the helm of CDC, including the gubernatorial-election year, opened his news conference with a tribute to the press, "I probably got a lot further with your help than I would have otherwise. You've been more than fair, I think."

He said he didn't think the character of CDC will be much changed, noting that those who were in control before his tenure are back in control. There are no planned membership defections that he is aware of.

A strong anti-Viet Nam War policy facing convention vote possibly could be modified, Casady said, since it was drawn primarily by those sympathetic to Casady's position. He doubted that CDC will "tone down" some of its controversiaal liberal stands. "I think there'll be an effort to demonstrate they're not going moderate," he said.

He didn't apologize for hanging his philosphic criticism onto specific individuals. "It's pretty hard to find an issue floating around that's not connected with some person," he said. There's a lot of polite hypocrisy in this game that I haven't known how best to handle for my own self-preservation."

As a sidelight, state Democratic Central Committee Chairman Robert Coate confirmed to newsmen here that the committee three weeks ago had passed a resolution to withdraw the committee's executive committee memberships for representatives of both the CDC and the similarly oriented Young Democratic Federation.

* * * *

CASADY, asked his general opinion of politicians, said, "A lot of politicians are nice guys if you know them superficially."

Asked then if his knowledge of Gov. Brown would deter him from support, Casady said if Brown is endorsed by CDC and is the Democratic nominee, "I'll support him down the line."

But, he added, "The temptation is not to do any great amount of work, since I'm now a private in the rear rank."

He said he had no doubt that Brown would be the party's nominee.

Three former CDC presidents were aligned against Casady — Joseph Wyll Jr., Thomas B. Carvey, both speaking against him on the convention floor, and founding president Alan Cranston, state controller, not present.

* * * *

IN THE FORMAL presentation of his case, the 57-year-old former El Cajon newspaper publisher told the 1,858 delegates and about 1,000 alternates and spectators:

"There is no need to be coy. We are here today to settle the fate of the CDC. By your votes this afternoon, the outside world will know whether CDC is truly an independent organization controlled by membership, or whether it has become the pampered captive of outside interests who would use it to further their own ambitions."

Defending his widely attacked speeches against U.S. policy in Viet Nam, he said the 1965 CDC convention "passed a far-sighted resolution urging President Johnson to halt bombing of North Viet Nam, seek a cease-fire and take the Viet Nam war to the conference table.

"A YEAR AGO our resolution was a voice crying in the wilderness. Today, our Viet Nam position (CDC's) is the position of the leading Democrats in the Congress . . . Today the chorus of public dissent grows louder by the hour."

He said Sens. William Fulbright, Mike Mansfield, Albert Gore, Ernest Gruening, Stephen Young and Vance Hartke are among those in general concurrence with the CDC position.

Responding to charges of undue vituperation against the President and other Democrats, Casady said:

"It has never been my intent to speak with personal malice toward any public official, but issue cannot be separated from people . . . When one feels strongly, it is not always easy to speak softly. There is nothing soft or gentle about death when you step on a Viet Cong mine.

"IF YOU FEEL strongly that these things should not be happening — that war in Viet Nam is indefensible — that American boys should not be dying in Southeast Asia—then it is difficult to speak softly about the men who have decreed that these things must happen. . . .

"At times during the past year I have spoken bluntly in criticisms of President Johnson and of some Democratic congressmen. Perhaps I have been intemperate. But the indignation which prompted me was sincere. I am willing to be judged by my words."

Casady again told delegates that Gov. Edmund G. Brown's call for his resignation last Sept. 16 "had the effect of polarizing the board of directors overnight into two warring factions."

CDC'S NORTHERN vice president, Roy Greenaway, of Fresno, spokesman for the anti-Casady majority caucus, said "Casady is the issue," not CDC independence . . . "I feel that his continuing in office will split up the state organization."

Greenaway said he approves CDC's stand on Viet Nam and credited Casady with starting out "well enough talking about Viet Nam. But suddenly it isn't Viet Nam he is talking about —but his personal opinion of President Johnson's character and abilites." He said Casady consistently tried to demean the character of his opposition including alienation of the people "we are trying to influence, the Democratic congressmen from California."

LBJ Hit Anew by Morse

MADISON, Wis. (UPI) — The Johnson administration is depending on a "confused public" for support of the war in South Viet Nam, Sen. Wayne Morse, D-Ore., said Saturday.

Morse, an opponent of administration foreign policy, was in Madison to deliver an address sponsored by the Americans for Democratic Action and by the University of Wisconsin Committee to End the War in Viet Nam.

* * * *

"WE JUST don't see where this policy is leading except chaos," Morse told reporters. The public doesn't "know very much about our foreign policy, and you have a right to know all the facts," the senator said.

Morse said that while the administration claims it will negotiate unconditionally, the nation's actual policy requires that North Viet Nam and the Viet Cong come to the conference table on our terms.

Also, Morse said, the administration follows a double standard in regard to the 1954 Geneva Agreement on Southeast Asia.

"When it suited our purposes, we evaded these principles and provisions by pointing out that we did not sign the Geneva Agreement," he said, "and when it suited other of our purposes, we protested loudly that North Viet Nam was violating it."

Man, 65, Auto Crash Victim, Dies

A 65-year-old man died Saturday night from injuries suffered in a head-on collision which killed his wife and another man Friday near San Juan Capistrano.

His wife, Rae, 65, and Troy F. Robertson, 48, of San Clemente, were both killed outright in the crash on Pacific Coast Highway near Camino Capistrano.

County firemen found the body of a 30-year-old man in his burned home Saturday night in Norwalk.

The victim was identified as Billy Hamock. Sheriff's deputies said he was an employe of Metropolitan State Hospital in Norwalk.

Late Saturday, both sheriff's arson and homicide investigators were still checking the scene of the fire at 11912 Soroul St. Firemen said the blaze broke out about 8:30 p.m.

IT'S NO 'PAPER WAR' OUT THERE

lift has meant the difference between defeat and survival, not only for the military forces, but for the civilian population. Aircraft are the lifeline for hundreds of communities in South Viet Nam isolated by Viet Cong action.

At one time, three C123 aircraft lifted over 200,000 pounds of rice daily into Pleiku to make up for road traffic which was unable to move the 140 miles along Route 19 from Qui Nhon.

It's a weird war against a faceless foe, where it is impossible to distinguish friend from enemy, where targets are fleeting and where friends are a priceless asset.

And it is the airlift with its ceaseless efforts to get supplies through that is making friends.

The complexity of the war is almost as difficult to comprehend as is the vastness of the geography across which forces must operate and be supplied.

Pacific Air Forces area of military interest reaches from the continental United States west to the Indian Ocean and the Ural Mountains. The most striking feature is the distances involved—2,400 miles from Washington D.C. to the Pacific Coast, 2,500 miles from Long Beach to Honolulu —and another 6,000 miles to Saigon.

Constantly, while attention is being focused on Southeast Asia, PACAF must keep a wary eye on other possible trouble spots in the Far East.

As a precautionary measure, PACAF has other tactical fighter forces which could be deployed if necessary. Because of the proximity of PACAF bases to the Communist mainland, these fighter forces — always on 24-hour alert—are ideally located for any quick action that might be necessary.

The continuing buildup in Southeast Asia began with the Gulf of Tonkin incident in August 1964, with major emphasis coming a year later.

New air squadrons are arriving as airfield construction permits. In one instance it took slightly over two months to build from scratch an operational base with 10,000 foot-long, aluminum-mat runway equipped with combat fighters.

The air efforts are known to have had significant impact on the Viet Cong. Exactly how many Viet Cong have been killed by air is difficult to determine. The U. S. Military Assistance Command in Viet Nam believes that the U.S. Air Forces and the Viet Nam Air Force have killed by air strike over 20,000 Viet Cong during 1965.

The air forces have destroyed or damaged some 125,000 structures and over 3,800 sampans.

For the statistical-mind, Air Force pilots striking routes of travel in Communist North Viet Nam during 1965 destroyed 315 bridges and damaged 838. They attacked ferry complexes 243 times and cratered 106 river fords. In addition, roads were cut in 2,050 places and railroads were slashed in 286 spots. Four highway tunnels were caved in.

One thing is sure, and that is that the Viet Cong effectiveness against the armed forces of the Republic of Viet Nam has fallen off.

Throughout 1965, Air Forces pilots flew more than 11,000 strike sorties over the Communist north in A1E, B-57, F100, F104, F105 and F4C aircraft, expending about 22,000 tons of ordnance.

F105 Thunderchief pilots flew about 75% of the sorties. Of the night missions flown, most were logged by F4C pilots.

In addition to strike sorties, Air Force crews flew escort missions, providing high cover against enemy aircraft. They also flew rescue operations, psychological - warfare missions and reconnaissance sorties.

On psychological - warfare missions, F105 pilots dropped millions of leaflets over the Communist north. Air Force C130 Hercules crews dropped leaflets and gift packages to the North Vietnamese on special occasions such as Children's Day and Christmas.

Reconnaisance missions were flown in RB66 Destroyers and RF4C Phantoms as well as the RF101.

This has not been without cost.

Fifty-six Air Force pilots were listed as missing in action. Eight are known dead and six known captured.

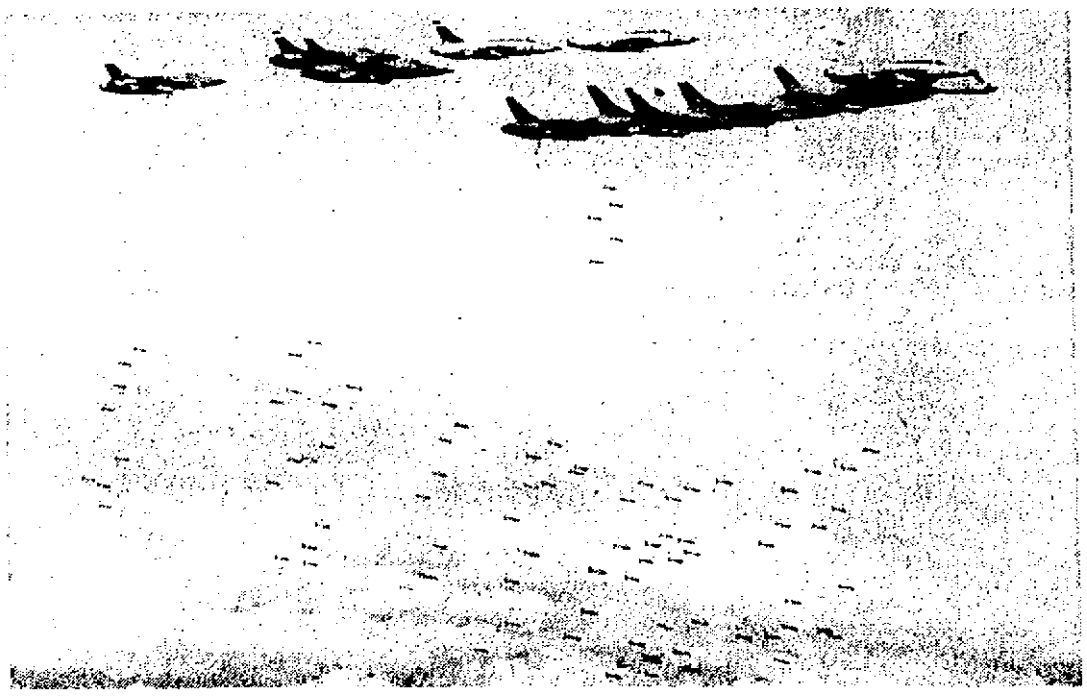

On the brighter side, rescue crews recovered 49 downed Air Force crew members, 21 were Navy fliers and two were VNAF pilots.

Rescues in the Communist north were made by helicopter crews, and rescues from the South China sea were handled by Air Force crews flying the amphibious HU16 Albatross.

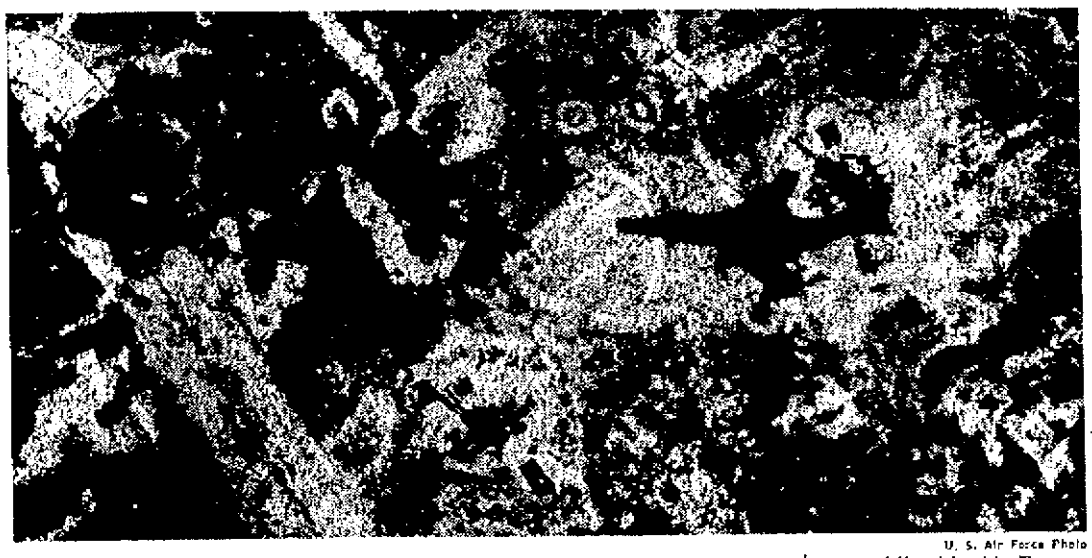

Figures just don't tell the whole story.

Yet the stakes are even greater.

A FLIGHT OF Air Force F105 Thunderchiefs drops its bombs on Communist military targets, attacking under radar control from the Air Force B66 Destroyer. Air Force now is attacking Red Viet Nam targets.

Viet War Major Issue GOP Told

A Georgia congressman predicted here Saturday that the war in Viet Nam will be a major peg in the 1966 congressional campaign and urged fellow Republicans to use the issue to the hilt.

Speaking to conference of United Republicans of California in the Lafayette Hotel, Rep. Howard H. Callaway said that handling of the war by the Johnson administration is "confusing" and open to criticism.

"We differ with him on methods," said the 38-year-old West Point graduate," although we support the objectives of the President."

Callaway called for a blockade of the North Vietnamese port of Haiphong and bombing of missile sites in that country.

THE BOARD OF directors policy committee later tentatively approved a resolution is "apparently following a no-win policy" in the Asian country.

Influenza throughout the state decimated the representatives of the organization and resulted in no formal action because of lack of a quorum.

Callaway said that Republicans should "be prepared to into sweeping political gains."

Toy Sticks in Throat, Kills Child

Dead on arrival at Pioneer Hospital in Artesia at 6:50 p.m. was Juan, 30-month-old son of Mr. and Mrs. Jesus Chavez, 21220 Devlin Ave.

Sheriff's Deputy Jerry West said the infant had been playing with his older brothers when he swallowed the balloon. It lodged in his windpipe.

promise, I intend to resign at the close of the present session . . . I thank you all. It's been a great convention. Carry on."

Delegates then voted approval on a special by-law terminating the terms of all CDC officers and calling for immediate new nominations and elections by this convention. Most probable candidates to succeed Casady are Charles Gant, of Santa Ana, who resigned a few months ago as a result of the Casady dispute; Jerry Hill of San Francisco, and Knox Mellon ,of Claremont.

Don Bradley, Gov. Brown's past and present campaign director, showed up at the convention about 3 p.m. Saturday, looming like bad news for the pro-Casady people. To them he appeared to be the advance man for the gubernatorial team, with advance knowledge, somehow, of the confidence vote's outcome.

Bradley, however, said he was just observing.

Asked his reaction, he said, "It's kind of sad. But I guess it was necessary."

* * * *

CASADY, midway in what was to have been a two-year term at the helm of CDC, including the gubernatorial-election year, opened his news conference with a tribute to the press, "I probably got a lot further with your help than I would have otherwise. You've been more than fair, I think."

He said he didn't think the character of CDC will be much changed, noting that those who were in control before his tenure are back in control. There are no planned membership defections that he is aware of.

A strong anti-Viet Nam War policy facing convention vote possibly could be modified, Casady said, since it was drawn primarily by those sympathetic to Casady's position. He doubted that CDC will "tone down" some of its controversiaal liberal stands. "I think there'll be an effort to demonstrate they're not going moderate," he said.

He didn't apologize for hanging his philosphic criticism onto specific individuals. "It's pretty hard to find an issue floating around that's not connected with some person," he said. There's a lot of polite hypocrisy in this game that I haven't known how best to handle for my own self-preservation."

As a sidelight, state Democratic Central Committee Chairman Robert Coate confirmed to newsmen here that the committee three weeks ago had passed a resolution to withdraw the committee's executive committee memberships for representatives of both the CDC and the similarly oriented Young Democratic Federation.

* * * *

CASADY, asked his general opinion of politicians, said, "A lot of politicians are nice guys if you know them superficially."

Asked then if his knowledge of Gov. Brown would deter him from support, Casady said if Brown is endorsed by CDC and is the Democratic nominee, "I'll support him down the line."

But, he added, "The temptation is not to do any great amount of work, since I'm now a private in the rear rank."

He said he had no doubt that Brown would be the party's nominee.

Three former CDC presidents were aligned against Casady — Joseph Wytt Jr., Thomas B. Carvey, both speaking against him on the convention floor, and founding president Alan Cranston, state controller, not present.

* * * *

IN THE FORMAL presentation of his case, the 57-year-old former El Cajon newspaper publisher told the 1,858 delegates and about 1,000 alternates and spectators:

"There is no need to be coy. We are here today to settle the fate of the CDC. By your votes this afternoon, the outside world will know whether CDC is truly an independent organization controlled by membership, or whether it has become the pampered captive of outside interests who would use it to further their own ambitions."

Defending his widely attacked speeches against U.S. policy in Viet Nam, he said the 1965 CDC convention "passed a far-sighted resolution urging President Johnson to halt bombing of North Viet Nam, seek a cease-fire and take the Viet Nam war to the conference table.

"A YEAR AGO our resolution was a voice crying in the wilderness. Today, our Viet Nam position (CDC's) is the position of the leading Democrats in the Congress . . . Today the chorus of public dissent grows louder by the hour."

He said Sens. William Fulbright, Mike Mansfield, Albert Gore, Ernest Gruening, Stephen Young and Vance Hartke are among those in general concurrence with the CDC position.

Responding to charges of undue vituperation against the President and other Democrats, Casady said:

"It has never been my intent to speak with personal malice toward any public official, but issue cannot be separated from people . . . When one feels strongly, it is not always easy to speak softly. There is nothing soft or gentle about death when you step on a Viet Cong mine.

"IF YOU FEEL strongly that these things should not be happening — that war in Viet Nam is indefensible — that American boys should not be dying in Southeast Asia—then it is difficult to speak softly about the men who have decreed that these things must happen. . . .

"At times during the past year I have spoken bluntly in criticisms of President Johnson and of some Democratic congressmen. Perhaps I have been intemperate. But the indignation which prompted me was sincere. I am willing to be judged by my words."

Casady again told delegates that Gov. Edmund G. Brown's call for his resignation last Sept. 16 "had the effect of polarizing the board of directors overnight into two warring factions."

CDC'S NORTHERN vice president, Roy Greenaway, of Fresno, spokesman for the anti-Casady majority caucus, said "Casady is the issue," not CDC independence . . . "I feel that his continuing in office will split up the state organization."

Greenaway said he approves CDC's stand on Viet Nam and credited Casady with starting out "well enough talking about Viet Nam. But suddenly it isn't Viet Nam he is talking about —but his personal opinion of President Johnson's character and abilites." He said Casady consistently tried to demean the character of his opposition including alienation of the people "we are trying to influence, the Democratic congressmen from California."

LBJ Hit Anew by Morse

MADISON, Wis. (UPI) — The Johnson administration is depending on a "confused public" for support of the war in South Viet Nam, Sen. Wayne Morse, D-Ore., said Saturday.

Morse, an opponent of administration foreign policy, was in Madison to deliver an address sponsored by the Americans for Democratic Action and by the University of Wisconsin Committee to End the War in Viet Nam.

* * * *

"WE JUST don't see where this policy is leading except chaos," Morse told reporters. The public doesn't "know very much about our foreign policy, and you have a right to know all the facts," the senator said.

Morse said that while the administration claims it will negotiate unconditionally, the nation's actual policy requires that North Viet Nam and the Viet Cong come to the conference table on our terms.

Also, Morse said, the administration follows a double standard in regard to the 1954 Geneva Agreement on Southeast Asia.

"When it suited our purposes, we evaded these principles and provisions by pointing out that we did not sign the Geneva Agreement," he said, "and when it suited other of our purposes, we protested loudly that North Viet Nam was violating it."

Man, 65, Auto Crash Victim, Dies

A 65-year-old man died Saturday night from injuries suffered in a head-on collision which killed his wife and another man Friday near San Juan Capistrano.

Fernando Areias died at 9:30 p.m. at the South Coast Hospital, Laguna Beach.

His wife, Rae, 65, and Troy F. Robertson, 48, of San Clemente, were both killed outright in the crash on Pacific Coast Highway near Camino Capistrano.

County firemen found the body of a 30-year-old man in his burned home Saturday night in Norwalk.

The victim was identified as Billy Hamock. Sheriff's deputies said he was an employe of Metropolitan State Hospital in Norwalk.

Late Saturday, both sheriff's arson and homicide investigators were still checking the scene of the fire at 11912 Sproul St. Firemen said the blaze broke out about 8:30 p.m.

400,000 GIs Seen for Viet Nam

LAUREL, Miss. (AP) — Sen. John Stennis, D-Miss., said Saturday night the Viet Nam war may force a callup of some National Guard units and reservists.

In a talk before a civic club, Stennis said he expects the United States to have up to 400,000 troops in the field by the end of the year.

He added, "We must not overlook the very real possibility that our Communist enemies may start additional aggression at other places around the world where our vital interests are involved."

* * * *

STENNIS, who is chairman of the Senate Armed Services Committee's preparedness subcommittee, said the costs will rise in to the tens of billions and increased taxes are certain.

It is too late, he said, to worry about whether we should be in Viet Nam.

"Our past and present commitment is such that we cannot now withdraw without dishonor to our national purpose and our national image," he said.

The United States must make a national decision to win in Viet Nam, said Stennis.

"If we cannot do this, we must either get out of Viet Nam or resign ourselves to the prospect of a long and unhappy stalemate which will be costly in both blood, money and national resources," he added.

Leprosy Facility to Open

Opening of a leprosy clinic to be operated in the Public Health Service's San Pedro out patient facility under administration of Dr. Donald A. St. Claire was announced Saturday by Washington officials.

The clinic, the department said, will provide medical service for about 200 other persons in the general area who are in close contact with the patients. Dr. St. Claire is deputy chief of medical service at the outpatient clinic.

Two dermatologists will be consultants: Dr. Norman Levan, professor of medicine and chairman of dermatology at the University of Southern California School of Medicine, and Dr. Margaret Ann Storkan, a private practitioner and consultant to several public and private hospitals in Southern California.

The new clinic will be conducted each Wednesday from 1 to 4:30 p.m. Among the patients, the announcement said, are those formerly treated by the Good Hope Clinic in Los Angeles.

Talk on Negro Freedom Monday

The Long Beach Community Improvement League will note Negro History Week with a talk Monday on "The Negro — the Winding Road Toward Freedom," at 7:30 p.m. by Ralph E. Branch.

The meeting will be held at the California Street Recreation Center, 1418 California Ave. It will be cosponsored by the Recreation Center.

Branch, a Long Beach resident, is a graduate student at the University of California, Berkeley.

Drilling Islands to Be Beautified

By MARY ELLIS CARLTON

Those might-be ugly ducklings—Long Beach's four off shore drilling islands — are in for a movie-set glamour treatment.

Borrowing techniques from the cinema world, they'll be beautiful swans, after all.

If final results are as spectacular as the technicolor sketches, the multibillion-dollar quads well may become the greatest tourist attraction this side of Disneyland.

Instead of sprouting unsightly derricks and other oil field equipment, as most expected, the islands will be turned into beauty spots harmonizing with the urban development of our coastline.

* * * *

THE FOUR DERRICKS on each of the 10-acre islands will be dressed for starring roles as high-rise structures, complete with colorful panels and balconies—presenting a play of interesting shadows by day, dramatic lighting by night.

For dramatic screening of other equipment, free-form sculpture, planting and spectacular fountains will cover the offshore tropical isles.

The plans, fresh from the drawing boards of Linesch & Reynolds, landscape architects and environmental planners of Los Angeles and Costa Mesa, were received with enthusiastic accolades from city officials, civic beautifiers and oil company personnel.

* * * *

THE FIRM WAS commissioned by THUMS (Texaco, Humble, Union, Mobil and Shell), developers of Long Beach's rich offshore oil fields, to beautify the drilling islands.

Said Harry D. Aggers, Thums vice president: "Our goal was to come up with a plan for total landscaping of the islands and complete screening of derricks and equipment.

"We were searching for a concept that not only would screen distracting ugliness, but also would add to the natural beauty of the coastline."

Plans which do that, and then some, were presented to civic leaders and city planners by Joseph H. Linesch, principal of Linesch & Reynolds, and Morgan "Bill" Evans, landscape architectural consultant to Disneyland since its opening.

* * * *

The four derricks on each of the islands will be mounted on a track for easy mobility. Some of the full-grown trees and shrubs will move, too, to carry on their camouflage roles.

Evans pointed out that in first concepts, the firm had attempted to landscape the manmade clumps of land to resemble tropical islands.

"When completed, however, they looked like tropical islands with oil derricks. So we decided to approach them as exactly what they are—manmade islands—turning them into urban beauties with high-rise glamour to match the trend along the coastline."

Structures covering the derricks will be 40 to 50 feet in height, comparable to a 16-story building. Strong structural contrasts will be easily detectable at a distance. Strong colors of high-rise structures and sculpture panels will contrast dramatically with plantings.

* * * *

WELL EQUIPMENT will be completely hidden from view—even from such heights as the new 32-story International Towers.

Many believe the concept has such dramatic appeal that it will, as one put it, "open up offshore drilling along the coast."

It is anticipated work will be completed by early 1967.

Linesch said that when THUMS has completed its operations—in about 35 years—the islands will become part of Long Beach's park system.

Aggers noted that the city and state will be receiving more than 80% of the net profits from oil-producing revenues of the islands.

* * * *

"SOME OF THE FUNDS," he added, "will be used to complete a five-mile long promenade and an elongated regional park on the beach front."

Evans and Linesch, considered tops in the country in environmental planning, will coordinate their work on the islands with City Manager John Mansell, representatives of the Engineering and Park Departments, as well as Chamber of Commerce beautification committees.

A special chamber committee, headed by Darrell Neighbors, has been appointed to assist.

It's good news which city beautifiers hope will spread to Pier J and areas where derricks and oil equipment are eyesores.

Pan-Am Hostess Contest Set

Lakewood's quest for a new Miss Pan American Festival Hostess opens officially this week.

Contestants must be single, between the ages of 17 and 21, live or attend school in the Lakewood area, and agree not to marry during the year she is hostess.

She will receive a $250 scholarship in the college of her choice, a wardrobe and other gifts.

Contest entries may be obtained at Lakewood High School, Mayfair High School, or the Pan American office, 5787 South St., Lakewood, according to Mildred Hammond, Hostess Contest chairman. Deadline for entries is March 11.

WORLD NEWS BRIEFS

Officials Doubt Cuba Missiles

WASHINGTON (UPI)—The White House said Saturday it is satisfied that no offensive missiles have been unloaded in Cuba since the 1962 crisis with Russia.

Presidential Press Secretary Bill D. Moyers made the statement in answer to a speech by Spruille Braden, former U.S. ambassador to Cuba.

SPRUILLE BRADEN
Reports Red Missiles

Braden said in a talk to Cuban exile organizations at Miami Friday night that five Russian ships "very recently" unloaded missiles in Cuba for installation there. He said he had reported this fact to President Johnson.

Moyers told newsmen:

"We continue to have sources of information adequate to inform us if offensive weapons systems have been reintroduced in Cuba. There is no evidence that this has in fact been done."

Moyers said he did not know "in what form" Braden might have passed his information to the President. But he said he had been "unable to find any report like that."

"All reports of offensive weapons systems in Cuba are very carefully and thoroughly checked by the United States intelligence community just as a matter of continuing high priority," Moyers said. He added:

"It is the judgment of the United States intelligence community that no offensive missiles have been introduced into Cuba since they were withdrawn in 1962."

Anti-Reds Jailed

Budapest (UPI)—More than seven Hungarians have been re-arrested for plotting with foreign contacts in the West to overthrow Hungary's Communist regime, the Hungarian party newspaper Nepszabadsag reported Saturday.

The arrested men had been jailed for a similar offense in the late 1950s the newspaper said, and later pardoned. They were re-arrested because they re-established foreign contacts and plotted to overthrow the government, the Nepszabadsag reported. The time of the new arrests was not disclosed.

The newspaper said the arrested persons formerly belonged to the "regnum marianum" circle, a conspirational group.

3 on Bus Killed

JOLIET, Ill. (AP)—A bus loaded with relatives on their way to visit mental patients turned over Saturday, killing three women and injuring 45 persons.

State police said the driver, John O'Connor, told them an automobile went into an out-of-control skid in his path. He tried to avoid a collision, and the big vehice skidded and turned over in a ditch.

The accident occurred on snow-slicked U.S. 66 about 10 miles north of Joliet. The Will County coroner's office listed the dead women as Margaret Skopick, 51, Jennie Treshansky, 75, and Catherine E. Dechatelets, all of Chicago.

Humphrey Lands

WELLINGTON, New Zealand, Sunday (AP) — Vice President Hubert Humphrey arrived at Chakea military airport from Australia today on an 18-hour visit to New Zealand.

He confers tonight with New Zealand Prime Minister Keith J. Holyoake about the war in Viet Nam.

Bans Opposed

WASHINGTON (AP) — Sen. Stuart Symington, D-Mo., urged Saturday the elimination of target restrictions which he said are making U.S. bombing of North Viet Nam largely ineffective.

He said U.S. pilots should be permitted to strike "such military targets as power plants, oil stores, docks, etc."

Reporting on a recent 10-day trip to Viet Nam battle areas, Symington indicated his brief skilled American pilots and costly warplanes should not be risked on targets limited bridges, highways, railroads and supply trails—a pattern the administration has been following to lessen the danger of escalating the war by inflicting heavy civilian casualties.

$500,000 Fire

Platoon Cmdr. Eric Lotz, who led nearly 100 firemen from 15 units in fighting the four-alarm blaze, estimated the loss at $500,000.

8 of Stolen, Valued, Paintings Recovered

ROME (UPI)—Eight of 15 precious Renaissance paintings stolen from the villa of a Roman prince have been found after 17 months in a farm building, badly soiled, scratched and damaged by moisture, police reported Saturday.

The investigators, still trying to find the remaining seven paintings, gave no details of the discovery. Total value of the 15 paintings stolen in September 1964 from Prince Alessandro Torlonia's Villa Albani was given at the time as $640,000.

The paintings recovered and returned to the prince are:

"La Fornarina" and "Copy of the Transfiguration in the Vatican Gallery," both of the school of Raphael; "Ecce Homo," attributed to Guido Reni; another "Ecce Homo" by Marcello Venusti; "Nativity of "Our Lord," of the Ferrara school; "Madonna with Child," attributed to Francesco Guardi; "Old Man's Head," by Jusepe de Ribera, and "Head of St. John the Evangelist," by Michele Desubleo.

Police did not say how badly damaged the paintings were, But they did say they were seriously affected by moisture, soiled and scratched. They said the thieves apparently were alarmed by the wide publicity the theft was given and dumped the paintings in the farm building.

Collegians Best 1970s Job Bets

I. P.-T. National Bureau

WASHINGTON — College graduates will find it easier to get a job in the 1970s than their contemporaries with only a high school education.

And the number of jobs available in the local, state and federal governments will increase by 50% over the present level.

Statistics in the Department of Labor's handbook show that in 1975:

—White-collar occupations will continue to grow more rapidly than blue-collar occupations.

—Professional, technical workers, service workers, and clerical workers will grow the fastest of all occupational groups.

—Semi-skilled occupations will show a below-average growth.

—Labor and unskilled occupations will show little or no growth.

—Farm workers will continue a long-term decline in number.

Persons who have received education and training in the following fields apparently will have no problem in finding a job: engineering, teaching on all levels, school, vocational and rehabilitation counseling, the earth, physical social and biological sciences, social work, and forestry.

Possibly the fastest-growing occupation available to persons without college degrees is engineering and science technology. In order to qualify as an engineering or science technician, however, a person must take a technical-training course.

The Labor Department predicted that 3,000,000 young people will enter the labor force each year over the next decade.

MARDI GRAS FROM THE BALCONY

Coed Death Suspect Held Sane

AUSTIN, Tex. (AP)—A psychiatrist testified Saturday that James C. Cross Jr. was sane the day before he allegedly admitted strangling two University of Texas coeds in a fit of passion and fear on a sultry July day last year.

The prosecution rested after Dr. David Wade of Austin told of observing and examining Cross at the Texas Department of Public Safety headquarters Aug. 5.

Cross was charged with murder Aug. 6 after signing a statement which police said was voluntary.

The state contends Cross, 23, University of Texas student from Fort Worth, is guilty and should pay with his life. The defense said it will plead insanity.

HE IS ACCUSED of slaying Susan Rigsby and Shirley Ann Stark, both 21, both of Dallas, in his apartment last July 18. He is on trial only in the death of Miss Rigsby.

Opposing lawyers spent most of Saturday arguing the admissibility of an oral statement Cross allegedly made after he signed the written statement.

Dist. Judge Mace B. Thurman Jr. overruled a defense motion to suppress the oral statement and permitted it to be introduced as evidence.

Texas Ranger Bill Wilson testified the oral statement led officers to the young women's suitcases, which the coeds allegedly had taken to Cross' apartment.

Wade said he observed Cross for three or four hours while the youth underwent police questioning. He also examined him for about 1½ hours, he said.

GUITAR CORD CALLED

Weapon for Murder in Death Trial

TUCSON, Ariz. (UPI)—A cord to an electric guitar was alleged by the state Saturday at the murder trial of Charles Schmid, 23, to have been the weapon used to kill two teenage sisters.

Schmid was accused of killing Gretchen Fritz, 17, and her sister, Wendy, 13, daughters of a Tucson surgeon. The girls' skeletons were found in the desert Nov. 10, about three months after the girls disappeared.

* * * *

THE state produced an electric guitar once owned by Schmid. Frank Ganem, co-owner of the Cash Box pawnshop, said Schmid sold him the guitar last July 20. To the best of his knowledge, Ganem said, no cord accompanied the instrument.

Homicide detective Ron Byerly testified Friday he found the cord near one of the sisters' graves. Capt. Carl Kempe, head of the city-county crime laboratory, testified the cord fit the guitar in question, adding it would fit other guitars of similar make.

Schafer claimed in his opening statement that the motive for the slayings apparently was the knowledge by the girls of other murders in which Schmid might have been involved, including the death of Aileen Rowe, 15, of Tucson and that of an unidentified 16-year-old boy.

Several teen-agers were waiting outside the courtroom of Judge Lee Garrett to be called as state witnesses during the fifth day of the trial.

Schmid also was to go on trial March 15 on a murder charge in the death of Miss Rowe.

Another witness Saturday, Dr. Clayton Hibner, family dentist of the Fritz family, said he identified the bodies of the sisters from dental charts.

* * * *

CHARLES Kessler, guitar salesman for Sears Roebuck and Co. here, identified the guitar as one sold by his company. He also said the cord was the type used on the guitar but that also could be used on others.

While awaiting trial, Schmid played a guitar and wrote love songs. He sent his wife a packet of the songs on her 18th birthday recently. Schmid married the girl in October, 22 days before his arrest.

DERRICKS ON LONGBEACH OIL ISLANDS TO BE DRESSED UP FOR STARRING ROLES

400,000 GIs Seen for Viet Nam

LAUREL, Miss. (AP) — Sen. John Stennis, D-Miss., said Saturday night the Viet Nam war may force a callup of some National Guard units and reservists.

In a talk before a civic club, Stennis said he expects the United States to have up to 400,000 troops in the field by the end of the year.

He added, "We must not overlook the very real possibility that our Communist enemies may start additional aggression at other places around the world where our vital interests are involved."

* * * *

STENNIS, who is chairman of the Senate Armed Services Committee's preparedness subcommittee, said the costs will rise in to the tens of billions and increased taxes are certain.

It is too late, he said, to worry about whether we should be in Viet Nam.

"Our past and present commitment is such that we cannot now withdraw without dishonor to our national purpose and our national image," he said.

The United States must make a national decision to win in Viet Nam, said Stennis.

"If we cannot do this, we must either get out of Viet Nam or resign ourselves to the prospect of a long and unhappy stalemate which will be costly in both blood, money and national resources," he added.

Leprosy Facility to Open

Opening of a leprosy clinic to be operated in the Public Health Service's San Pedro out patient facility under administration of Dr. Donald A. St. Claire was announced Saturday by Washington officials.

The clinic, the department said, will provide medical service for about 200 other persons in the general area who are in close contact with the patients. Dr. St. Claire is deputy chief of medical service at the outpatient clinic.

Two dermatologists will be consultants: Dr. Norman Levan, professor of medicine and chairman of dermatology at the University of Southern California School of Medicine, and Dr. Margaret Ann Storkan, a private practitioner and consultant to several public and private hospitals in Southern California.

The new clinic will be conducted each Wednesday from 1 to 4:30 p.m. Among the patients, the announcement said, are those formerly treated by the Good Hope Clinic in Los Angeles.

Talk on Negro Freedom Monday

The Long Beach Community Improvement League will note Negro History Week with a talk Monday on "The Negro — the Winding Road Toward Freedom," at 7:30 p.m. by Ralph E. Branch.

The meeting will be held at the California Street Recreation Center, 1418 California Ave. It will be cosponsored by the Recreation Center.

Branch, a Long Beach resident, is a graduate student at the University of California, Berkeley.

WITH GLAMOUR OF HIGH-RISE HOSTELRIES

Drilling Islands to Be Beautified

By MARY ELLIS CARLTON

Those might-be ugly ducklings—Long Beach's four off shore drilling islands — are in for a movie-set glamour treatment.

Borrowing techniques from the cinema world, they'll be beautiful swans, after all.

If final results are as spectacular as the technicolor sketches, the multibillion-dollar quads well may become the greatest tourist attraction this side of Disneyland.

Instead of sprouting unsightly derricks and other oil field equipment, as most expected, the islands will be turned into beauty spots harmonizing with the urban development of our coastline.

* * * *

THE FOUR DERRICKS on each of the 10-acre islands will be dressed for starring roles as high-rise structures, complete with colorful panels and balconies—presenting a play of interesting shadows by day, dramatic lighting by night.

For dramatic screening of other equipment, free-form sculpture, planting and spectacular fountains will cover the offshore tropical isles.

The plans, fresh from the drawing boards of Linesch & Reynolds, landscape architects and environmental planners of Los Angeles and Costa Mesa, were received with enthusiastic accolades from city officials, civic beautifiers and oil company personnel.

* * * *

THE FIRM WAS commissioned by THUMS (Texaco, Humble, Union, Mobil and Shell), developers of Long Beach's rich offshore oil fields, to beautify the drilling islands.

Said Harry D. Aggers, Thums vice president: "Our goal was to come up with a plan for total landscaping of the islands and complete screening of derricks and equipment.

"We were searching for a concept that not only would screen distracting ugliness, but also would add to the natural beauty of the coastline."

Plans which do that, and then some, were presented to civic leaders and city planners by Joseph H. Linesch, principal of Linesch & Reynolds, and Morgan "Bill" Evans, landscape architectural consultant to Disneyland since its opening.

* * * *

The four derricks on each of the islands will be mounted on a track for easy mobility. Some of the full-grown trees and shrubs will move, too, to carry on their camouflage roles.

Evans pointed out that in first concepts, the firm had attempted to landscape the manmade clumps of land to resemble tropical islands.

"When completed, however, they looked like tropical islands with oil derricks. So we decided to approach them as exactly what they are—manmade islands—turning them into urban beauties with high-rise glamour to match the trend along the coastline."

Structures covering the derricks will be 40 to 50 feet in height, comparable to a 16-story building. Strong structural contrasts will be easily detectable at a distance. Strong colors of high-rise structures and sculpture panels will contrast dramatically with plantings.

* * * *

WELL EQUIPMENT will be completely hidden from view—even from such heights as the new 32-story International Towers.

Many believe the concept has such dramatic appeal that it will, as one put it, "open up offshore drilling along the coast."

It is anticipated work will be completed by early 1967.

Linesch said that when THUMS has completed its operations—in about 35 years—the islands will become part of Long Beach's park system.

Aggers noted that the city and state will be receiving more than 80% of the net profits from oil-producing revenues of the islands.

* * * *

"SOME OF THE FUNDS," he added, "will be used to complete a five-mile long promenade and an elongated regional park on the beach front."

Evans and Linesch, considered tops in the country in environmental planning, will coordinate their work on the islands with City Manager John Mansell, representatives of the Engineering and Park Departments, as well as Chamber of Commerce beautification committees.

A special chamber committee, headed by Darrell Neighbors, has been appointed to assist.

It's good news which city beautifiers hope will spread to Pier J and areas where derricks and oil equipment are eyesores.

2 PRO THIEVES, 2 KILLERS

Real Cons Tell Teen-Agers How Rough a Prison Rap Is

By BASIL C. RAFFETY

BOYS TOWN, Neb. (AP)—"The real prison is loneliness—loneliness that sinks its teeth right into a man's soul . . ."

"What grinds the very life out of you is the monotony."

"I've been married three times. Every time I go to prison I lose a wife. I have seven children. They won't even acknowledge me. When I go to see my mother she keeps looking over my shoulder. I know she's looking for a cop."

"When I decided to go straight I got three good jobs but lost all three. They all called me in and explained that under company rules they weren't allowed to hire ex-convicts. After I lost my third job it was not long before I was back in the pen, so I set out to learn all I could about crime."

* * * *

THESE words weren't related by a prison warden or a chaplain recounting the anguish of the men behind bars. They came from four Nebraska Penitentiary inmates — two professional thieves and two serving life for murder.

They were addressed to an audience principally teen-aged at this world-renowned haven for homeless and neglected boys near Omaha. But there were also educators and civic leaders in the audience listening to a pilot program developed at the Nebraska penal complex to try to tell the story of crime and punishment more forcibly than a mere visit to the penitentiary could tell it.

Warden Maurice Sigler said the panel has spoken to prison visitors several times in the last several months, but this was the first time it was done outside prison walls.

Municipal Judge Eugene Leahy, who arranged the program primarily for educators, judges, lawyers and enforcement officers, said he was sorry there weren't more of them in the audience, but he planned to have the convicts appear at other Omaha gatherings.

Warden Sigler said the stories of the four convicts were entirely true and their accounts of prison life had not been censored in any way. He said they were carefully screened, however, lest some inmate appear who would make objectionable remarks before young people.

Each of the four told the sequence of events which put him behind bars. Three related stories of rebellion against discipline and established rules starting in the sub-teen and teen years which grew into contempt for law. The fourth, 32, serving life for murder, said he was so respected in his home town he was not even suspected until the weight of his guilt made him confess.

* * * *

THE other lifer, 28, said that, after a rebellious childhood, "at 18 I picked up a pistol. I shot and robbed my way into a brand new car and a fabulous wardrobe . . . once I started I couldn't stop and right behind me were the police."

Are they ready to "go straight" now? Neither of the self-styled professional thieves would say for certain. They described stealing as their life work.

"It takes a lot of guts to go straight," said one. "After lying around (in prison) doing nothing, it's hard to go to work."

When the teen-agers were free to ask questions, they kept the four an additional half hour, asking about such things as recreation, visitors, privileges and rehabilitation. One boy even asked about prison haircuts.

"We don't wear any ducktails down there," replied LaVern, who at 46 has been convicted seven times and spent 20 years behind bars.

DRAMA IN SAN DIEGO

Parents Wait Vainly for Soldier Son

SAN DIEGO (AP)—Mr. and Mrs. Preston Shackelford of Muncie, Ind., were in San Diego waiting for their son to return from Viet Nam when they received a telephone call from his Army buddy.

Mrs. Preston Shackelford of Muncie, Ind., were in San Diego waiting for their son to return from Viet Nam when they received a telephone call from his Army buddy.

"I'm taking Don's body to France for burial and I just want to extend my sympathy," said Sgt. Billy Vinson.

It was the first word the family had received concerning the death on Feb. 9 of Sgt. Don R. Shackelford, 44. Only his widow, Henrietta, who lives in France, had been told.

His parents received a letter from her Friday telling of his death.

Vinson, who was escorting the body, was unaware that the Shackelfords had not been notified when he decided to call them after he arrived in Oakland Feb. 14.

When he was unable to reach them at their Muncie home, he called police there and learned that they were visiting another son in San Diego.

With the help of a California congressman, shipment of the body was delayed and funeral services were held Saturday in San Diego.

Rep. Charles M. Teague, R-Ojai, arranged for the delay in the shipment of the body at the request of another son, Benny, who lives in Ventura County.

Vinson will accompany the body on to France for services and burial there and then return to Viet Nam where he has 42 days to serve before retirement.

Shackelford had served in World War II, Korea and Viet Nam during his 25 years in the Army.

He was killed in action just one month before he was scheduled to retire.

3 Sentenced to Death in Plot to Kill De Gaulle

PARIS (UPI)—A state security tribunal sentenced a Swiss and two Frenchmen to death Saturday on charges of attempting to assassinate president Charles de Gaulle with a powerful remote-control bomb concealed in a flower jar.

The three men were sentenced in absentia. In addition, the tribunal handed down prison sentences up to life imprisonment to 10 accomplices in the conspiracy.

Two defendants were acquitted by the tribunal.

* * * *

THE COURT pronounced the death sentence against Jean-Jacques Susini, a former leader of the French Algeria Secret Army Organization, on charges of masterminding the abortive murder attempt.

According to the prosecution, De Gaulle was to be killed by a three-pound explosive charge to be touched off by a microwave radio set while he was making a speech Aug. 15, 1964, at the Mediterranean port of Toulon.

Andre Rosfelder, a French engineer now reported to be living in the United States, received the death sentence for making the ingenious bomb.

Swiss - ex-Foreign Legionnaire Samuel Lehmann was sentenced to death as the man in charge of exploding the bomb with an impulse from a small radio-transmitter.

Lehmann, who lives in Switzerland, failed to approach the presidential party close enough to make the device work, the prosecution said.

Sugarcane Enriched, Fidel Says

HAVANA (AP)—Prime Minister Fidel Castro reported Saturday a measure of success in a sugar harvest which had been forecast as a bleak one.

He said more sugar was being refined this year per ton of cane.

Castro reported in a communique that a 170,000-man sugar-harvest force has produced 1,001,152 tons of refined sugar to date. This is 623,376 tons below the production at the same time last year, but the new tonnage was reached by milling 6.34% less cane than in 1965, Castro said.

* * * *

THUS, he claimed, efforts to boost sugar yield from small amounts of cane were paying off.

The communique, appearing in the Communist Party's newspaper Gramma, admitted this year's production will be less than last year's 6 million tons because of drought and other problems in 1965.

WORLD NEWS BRIEFS

Officials Doubt Cuba Missiles

WASHINGTON (UPI)—The White House said Saturday it is satisfied that no offensive missiles have been unloaded in Cuba since the 1962 crisis with Russia.

Presidential Press Secretary Bill D. Moyers made the statement in answer to a speech by Spruille Braden, former U.S. ambassador to Cuba.

SPRUILLE BRADEN
Reports Red Missiles

Braden said in a talk to Cuban exile organizations at Miami Friday night that five Russian ships "very recently" unloaded missiles in Cuba for installation there. He said he had reported this fact to President Johnson.

Moyers told newsmen:

"We continue to have sources of information adequate to inform us if offensive weapons systems have been reintroduced in Cuba. There is no evidence that this has in fact been done."

Moyers said he did not know "in what form" Braden might have passed his information to the President. But he said he had been "unable to find any report like that."

"All reports of offensive weapons systems in Cuba are very carefully and thoroughly checked by the United States intelligence community just as a matter of continuing high priority," Moyers said. He added:

"It is the judgment of the United States intelligence community that no offensive missiles have been introduced into Cuba since they were withdrawn in 1962."

Anti-Reds Jailed

Budapest (UPI)—More than seven Hungarians have been re-arrested for plotting with foreign contacts in the West to overthrow Hungary's Communist regime, the Hungarian party newspaper Nepszabadsag reported Saturday.

The arrested men had been jailed for a similar offense in the late 1950s the newspaper said, and later pardoned. They were re-arrested because they re-established foreign contacts and plotted to overthrow the government, the Nepszabadsag reported. The time of the new arrests was not disclosed.

The newspaper said the arrested persons formerly belonged to the "regnum marianum" circle, a conspirational group.

3 on Bus Killed

JOLIET, Ill. (AP)—A bus loaded with relatives on their way to visit mental patients turned over Saturday, killing three women and injuring 45 persons.

State police said the driver, John O'Connor, told them an automobile went into an out-of-control skid in his path. He tried to avoid a collision, and the big vehice skidded and turned over in a ditch.

The accident occurred on snow-slicked U.S. 66 about 10 miles north of Joliet. The Will County coroner's office listed the dead women as Margaret Skopick, 51, Jennie Treshansky, 75, and Catherine E. Dechatelets, all of Chicago.

Humphrey Lands

WELLINGTON, New Zealand, Sunday (AP) — Vice President Hubert Humphrey arrived at Chakea military airport from Australia today on an 18-hour visit to New Zealand.

He confers tonight with New Zealand Prime Minister Keith J. Holyoake about the war in Viet Nam.

Bans Opposed

WASHINGTON (AP) — Sen. Stuart Symington, D-Mo., urged Saturday the elimination of target restrictions which he said are making U.S. bombing of North Viet Nam largely ineffective.

He said U.S. pilots should be permitted to strike "such military targets as power plants, oil stores, docks, etc."

Reporting on a recent 10-day trip to Viet Nam battle areas, Symington indicated his brief skilled American pilots and costly warplanes should not be risked on targets limited bridges, highways, railroads and supply trails—a pattern the administration has been following to lessen the danger of escalating the war by inflicting heavy civilian casualties.

$500,000 Fire

Platoon Cmdr. Eric Lotz, who led nearly 100 firemen from 15 units in fighting the four-alarm blaze, estimated the loss at $500,000.

8 of Stolen, Valued, Paintings Recovered

ROME (UPI)—Eight of 15 precious Renaissance paintings stolen from the villa of a Roman prince have been found after 17 months in a farm building, badly soiled, scratched and damaged by moisture, police reported Saturday.

The investigators, still trying to find the remaining seven paintings, gave no details of the discovery. Total value of the 15 paintings stolen in September 1964 from Prince Alessandro Torlonia's Villa Albani was given at the time as $640,000.

The paintings recovered and returned to the prince are:

"La Fornarina" and "Copy of the Transfiguration in the Vatican Gallery," both of the school of Raphael; "Ecce Homo," attributed to Guido Reni; another "Ecce Homo" by Marcello Venusti; "Nativity of "Our Lord," of the Ferrara school; "Madonna with Child," attributed to Francesco Guardi; "Old Man's Head," by Jusepe de Ribera, and "Head of St. John the Evangelist," by Michele Desubleo.

Police did not say how badly damaged the paintings were. But they did say they were seriously affected by moisture, soiled and scratched. They said the thieves apparently were alarmed by the wide publicity the theft was given and dumped the paintings in the farm building.

Collegians Best 1970s Job Bets

I. P-T National Bureau

WASHINGTON — College graduates will find it easier to get a job in the 1970s than their contemporaries with only a high school education.

And the number of jobs available in the local, state and federal governments will increase by 50% over the present level.

Statistics in the Department of Labor's handbook show that in 1975:

—White-collar occupations will continue to grow more rapidly than blue-collar occupations.

—Professional, technical workers, service workers, and clerical workers will grow the fastest of all occupational groups.

—Semi-skilled occupations will show a below-average growth.

—Labor and unskilled occupations will show little or no growth.

—Farm workers will continue a long-term decline in number.

Persons who have received education and training in the following fields apparently will have no problem in finding a job: engineering, teaching on all levels, school, vocational and rehabilitation counseling, the earth, physical social and biological sciences, social work, and forestry.

Possibly the fastest-growing occupation available to persons without college degrees is engineering and science technology. In order to qualify as an engineering or science technician, however, a person must take a technical-training course.

The Labor Department predicted that 3,000,000 young people will enter the labor force each year over the next decade.

Coed Death Suspect Held Sane

AUSTIN, Tex. (AP)—A psychiatrist testified Saturday that James C. Cross Jr. was sane the day before he allegedly admitted strangling two University of Texas coeds in a fit of passion and fear on a sultry July day last year.

The prosecution rested after Dr. David Wade of Austin told of observing and examining Cross at the Texas Department of Public Safety headquarters Aug. 5.

Cross was charged with murder Aug. 6 after signing a statement which police said was voluntary.

The state contends Cross, 23, University of Texas student from Fort Worth, is guilty and should pay with his life. The defense said it will plead insanity.

HE IS ACCUSED of slaying Susan Rigsby and Shirley Ann Stark, both 21, both of Dallas, in his apartment last July 18. He is on trial only in the death of Miss Rigsby.

Opposing lawyers spent most of Saturday arguing the admissibility of an oral statement Cross allegedly made after he signed the written statement.

Dist. Judge Mace B. Thurman Jr. overruled a defense motion to suppress the oral statement and permitted it to be introduced as evidence.

Texas Ranger Bill Wilson testified the oral statement led officers to the young women's suitcases, which the coeds allegedly had taken to Cross' apartment.

Wade said he observed Cross for three or four hours while the youth underwent police questioning. He also examined him for about 1½ hours, he said.

GUITAR CORD CALLED Weapon for Murder in Death Trial

TUCSON, Ariz. (UPI)—A cord to an electric guitar was alleged by the state Saturday, at the murder trial of Charles Schmid, 23, to have been the weapon used to kill two teenage sisters.

Schmid was accused of killing Gretchen Fritz, 17, and her sister, Wendy, 13, daughters of a Tucson surgeon. The girls' skeletons were found in the desert Nov. 10, about three months after the girls disappeared.

* * * *

THE state produced an electric guitar once owned by Schmid. Frank Ganem, co-owner of the Cash Box pawnshop, said Schmid sold him the guitar last July 20. To the best of his knowledge, Ganem said, no cord accompanied the instrument.

Homicide detective Ron Byerly testified Friday he found the cord near one of the sisters' graves. Capt. Carl Kempe, head of the city-county crime laboratory, testified the cord fit the guitar in question, adding it would fit other guitars of similar make.

Schafer claimed in his opening statement that the motive for the slayings apparently was the knowledge by the girls of other murders in which Schmid might have been involved, including the death of Alleen Rowe, 15, of Tucson and that of an unidentified 16-year-old boy.

Several teen-agers were waiting outside the courtroom of Judge Lee Garrett to be called as state witnesses during the fifth day of the trial.

Schmid also was to go on trial March 15 on a murder charge in the death of Miss Rowe.

Another witness Saturday, Dr. Clayton Hibner, family dentist of the Fritz family, said he identified the bodies of the sisters from dental charts.

* * * *

CHARLES Kessler, guitar salesman for Sears Roebuck and Co. here, identified the guitar as one sold by his company. He also said the cord was the type used on the guitar but that also could be used on others.

While awaiting trial, Schmid played a guitar and wrote love songs. He sent his wife a packet of the songs on her 18th birthday recently. Schmid married the girl in October, 22 days before his arrest.

By BASIL C. RAFFETY

"What grinds the very life out of you is the monotony."

"I've been married three times. Every time I go to prison I lose a wife. I have seven children. They won't even acknowledge me. When I go to see my mother she keeps looking over my shoulder. I know she's looking for a cop."

"When I decided to go straight I got three good jobs but lost all three. They all called me in and explained that under company rules they weren't allowed to hire ex-convicts. After I lost my third job it was not long before I was back in the pen, so I set out to learn all I could about crime."

* * * *

THESE words weren't related by a prison warden or a chaplain recounting the anguish of the men behind bars. They came from four Nebraska Penitentiary inmates — two professional thieves and two serving life for murder.

They were addressed to an audience principally teen-aged at this world-renowned haven for homeless and neglected boys near Omaha. But there were also educators and civic leaders in the audience listening to a pilot program developed at the Nebraska penal complex to try to tell the story of crime and punishment more forcibly than a mere visit to the penitentiary could tell it.

Warden Maurice Sigler said the panel has spoken to prison visitors several times in the last several months, but this was the first time it was done outside prison walls.

Municipal Judge Eugene Leahy, who arranged the program primarily for educators, judges, lawyers and enforcement officers, said he was sorry there weren't more of them in the audience, but he planned to have the convicts appear at other Omaha gatherings.

Warden Sigler said the stories of the four convicts were entirely true and their accounts of prison life had not been censored in any way. He said they were carefully screened, however, lest some inmate appear who would make objectionable remarks before young people.

Each of the four told the sequence of events which put him behind bars. Three related stories of rebellion against discipline and established rules starting in the sub-teen and teen years which grew into contempt for law. The fourth, 32, serving life for murder, said he was so respected in his home town he was not even suspected until the weight of his guilt made him confess.

* * * *

THE other lifer, 28, said that, after a rebellious childhood, "at 18 I picked up a pistol. I shot and robbed my way into a brand new car and a fabulous wardrobe . . . once I started I couldn't stop and right behind me were the police."

Are they ready to "go straight" now? Neither of the self-styled professional thieves would say for certain. They described stealing as their life work.

"It takes a lot of guts to go straight," said one. "After lying around (in prison) doing nothing, it's hard to go to work."

When the teen-agers were free to ask questions, they kept the four an additional half hour, asking about such things as recreation, visitors, privileges and rehabilitation. One boy even asked about prison haircuts.

"We don't wear any duck-tails down there," replied La-Vern, who at 46 has been convicted seven times and spent 20 years behind bars.

DANCE IN THE AFTERNOON

DRAMA IN SAN DIEGO

Parents Wait Vainly for Soldier Son

SAN DIEGO (AP)—Mr. and Mrs. Preston Shackelford of Muncie, Ind., were in San Diego waiting for their son to return from Viet Nam when they received a telephone call from his Army buddy.

Mrs. Preston Shackelford of Muncie, Ind., were in San Diego waiting for their son to return from Viet Nam when they received a telephone call from his Army buddy.

"I'm taking Don's body to France for burial and I just want to extend my sympathy," said Sgt. Billy Vinson.

It was the first word the family had received concerning the death on Feb. 9 of Sgt. Don R. Shackelford, 44. Only his widow, Henrietta, who lives in France, had been told.

Vinson, who was escorting the body, was unaware that the Shackelfords had not been notified when he decided to call them after he arrived in Oakland Feb. 14.

When he was unable to reach them at their Muncie home, he called police there and learned that they were visiting another son in San Diego.

With the help of a California congressman, shipment of the body was delayed and funeral services were held Saturday in San Diego.

Rep. Charles M. Teague, R-Ojai, arranged for the delay in the shipment of the body at the request of another son, Benny, who lives in Ventura County.

Vinson will accompany the body on to France for services and burial there and then return to Viet Nam where he has 42 days to serve before retirement.

Shackelford had served in World War II, Korea and Viet Nam during his 25 years in the Army.

He was killed in action just one month before he was scheduled to retire.

3 Sentenced to Death in Plot to Kill De Gaulle

PARIS (UPI)—A state security tribunal sentenced a Swiss and two Frenchmen to death Saturday on charges of attempting to assassinate president Charles de Gaulle with a powerful remote-control bomb concealed in a flower jar.

The three men were sentenced in absentia. In addition, the tribunal handed down prison sentences up to life imprisonment to 10 accomplices in the conspiracy.

Two defendants were acquitted by the tribunal.

* * * *

According to the prosecution, De Gaulle was to be killed by a three-pound explosive charge to be touched off by a microwave radio set while he was making a speech Aug. 15, 1964, at the Mediterranean port of Toulon.

Andre Rosfelder, a French engineer now reported to be living in the United States, received the death sentence for making the ingenious bomb.

Swiss - ex-Foreign Legionnaire Samuel Lehmann was sentenced to death as the man in charge of exploding the bomb with an impulse from a small radio-transmitter.

Lehmann, who lives in Switzerland, failed to approach the presidential party close enough to make the device work, the prosecution said.

Sugarcane Enriched, Fidel Says

HAVANA (AP)—Prime Minister Fidel Castro reported Saturday a measure of success in a sugar harvest which had been forecast as a bleak one.

He said more sugar was being refined this year per ton of cane.

Castro reported in a communique that a 170,000-man sugar-harvest force has produced 1,001,152 tons of refined sugar to date. This is 623,376 tons below the production at the same time last year, but the new tonnage was reached by milling 6.34% less cane than in 1965, Castro said.

* * * *

THUS, he claimed, efforts to boost sugar yield from small amounts of cane were paying off.

The communique, appearing in the Communist Party's newspaper Gramma, admitted this year's production will be less than last year's 6 million tons because of drought and other problems in 1965.

Taboo, Tastes Make India Famine Relief Difficult

ROME (UPI) — An ancient taboo and native food tastes are hampering efforts to feed famine-stricken India, according to experts of the United Nations food and Agriculture Organization (FAO).

The taboo, a centuries-old belief of India's Hindus, makes the cow a sacred animal who may not be harmed and, indeed should be fed.

The tastes, strongest in southern India, demand rice as a staple food and reject wheat and other grains.

Experts at FAO headquarters here are reluctant to be quoted on the problems the cow taboo is causing them, and only slightly less reluctant on the rice problem.

"If all Indians ate wheat, instead of rice, the problem of increasing the famine would be much less difficult. The world's great wheat producers —the United States and Canada—have surpluses and are making them available," said Dr. Thomas C.M. Robinson, the American who is operations director of the FAO's world food program.

The Indian government is undertaking a massive shift of food supplies — shipping almost every grain of rice in northern Indian storehouses to the south and assigning relief shipments of wheat almost wholly to northern India, where people are less rigidly set against anything but rice, Robinson said.

The FAO has "almost given up talking to Indian officials about getting rid of their cows," said the expert, who himself spent many years in India and Pakistan. "The issue is too hot to even talk about because religion is involved."

India has an estimated cattle population of 200 million, or almost two cows for every five Indians—and this in a country where about 75% of the people do not eat beef.

Negroes in First State Office Try

By WILLIAM J. STANFIELD

FRESNO, Calif. (UPI) — California's Negroes are making their first major attempt to elect a member of their race to a statewide office.

Negro Democrats are pegging their hopes of "entering the mainstream of American political life" on William J. Williams, 35, a litt-eknown Los Angeles Negro who is a candidate for the Democratic nomination of secretary of state.

Williams, field secretary for Rep. Augustus F. Hawkins, D-Calif., who is a Negro, faces an admittedly uphill battle against California Real Estate Commissioner Milton G. Gordon, a white, in the June 7 primary.

Williams also confronts a possible "backlash" from the riots which erupted in the Watts section of Los Angeles last August and from the passage two years ago of Proposition 14, which nullified the Rumford Fair Housing Act.

* * * *

NEVERTHELESS, he is determined to conduct an all-out campaign to become the first Negro to win a spot on the Democratic statewide ticket.

"We must elect a Negro this year or remain on the outside looking in," Williams has said. "The time is now."

Democratic Gov. Edmund G. Brown has promised to remain neutral in the race between Williams and Gordon. But there is a strong feeling among the Negro leadership that Gordon was thrown into the race by the "white power structure" to keep a Negro off the Democratic ticket.

* * * *

GORDON HAS long championed civil rights causes and two years ago campaigned hard against Proposition 14, the measure to give property owners sole discretion in the sale or lease of their property. The proposition was passed by a 2 to 1 margin.

Gordon addressed the Negro Political Action Association of California (NPAAC) convention in Bakersfield and was given a courteous reception. But the convention endorsed Williams.

"If he wasn't such a nice guy," Negro Attorney Gabriel Solomon said of Gordon, "it would be a olt easier to campaign against him."

But Gordon's entry in the race makes him a "hatchetman" for the "white power structure," Solomon said.

State Assemblyman Willie Brown of San Francisco, a Negro, expressed the same opinion. He said Gordon has a good record in civil rights but "I don't understand how he hopes to erase the stigma in the minds of the masses of Negroes that he is a racist because he is running against a Negro."

Although a Negro has never been elected to a statewide office a congressman and four state assemblymen are Negroes.

But the Negro leadership made it plain at the Bakersfield convention that they feel they will never be a part of the "mainstream of American political life" until one of their race is elected to a statewide office.

* * * *

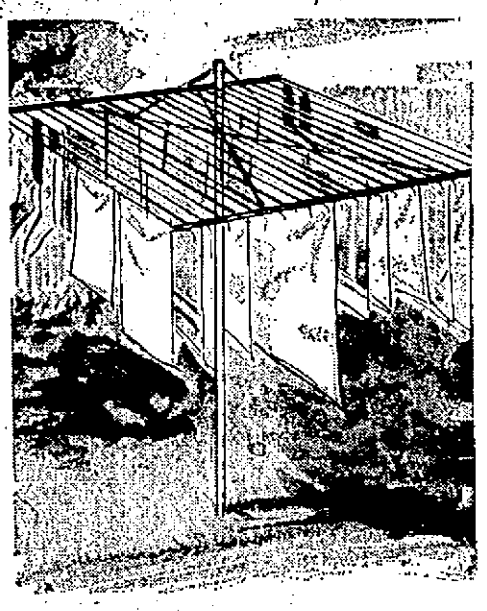

THE NPAAC, which is limited to registered Democrats, selected the office of secretary of state for its first foray into statewide politics because it is the only constitutional partisan office held by a Republican.

Jordan, 77, inherited the office from his father nearly two decades ago and has easily won re-election to succeeding terms. He defeated a in 1958.

Williams, a bachelor, is a native of Dothan, Ala., and was orphaned as an infant. Although he was a high school dropout, he entered college following military service and earned a doctor's degree in public administration from the University of Southern California.

THE NPAAC, which is limited to registered Democrats, selected the office of secretary of state for its first foray into statewide politics because it is the only constitutional partisan office held by a Republican.

Jordan, 77, inherited the office from his father nearly two decades ago and has easily won re-election to succeeding terms. He defeated a in 1958.

Williams, a bachelor, is a native of Dothan, Ala., and was orphaned as an infant. Although he was a high school dropout, he entered college following military service and earned a doctor's degree in public administration from the University of Southern California.

WEEK IN REVIEW

Firing in Capital Almost as Heavy as in Viet

Combined Wire Services

The fire was almost as heavy, if not as lethal, on Capitol Hill as it was in South Viet Nam.

President Johnson's Viet Nam policy came under heavy attack in hearings before the Senate Foreign Relations Committee, but by week's end seemed to be weathering the barrage.

On Thursday, Gen. Maxwell D. Taylor, former ambassador to Saigon, defended administration policy and ran head-on into Sen. Wayne Morse, D-Ore., a regular critic of the Viet Nam commitment. "I happen to hold to the point of view," said Morse, "that it isn't going to be too long before the American people as a people will repudiate our war in Southeast Asia."

"That, of course, is good news to Hanoi, senator," the general replied.

Retorted Morse: "I know that there is the smear artist answer that you militarists give to those of us who have honest differences of opinion with you, but I don't intend to get down in the gutter with you and engage in that kind of debate, general."

* * * *

THINGS WENT a little better for the administration the next day when Secretary of State Dean Rusk testified before the committee. He reminded the committee that the Senate in 1954 had set the course of Southeast Asia policy. That was the year the Senate approved the Southeast Asia Treaty, which binds the United States to aid any country in the area under Communist attack, such as South Viet Nam.

To those who say the American people doubt the U. S. role in Viet Nam, Rusk said, "Let us find out," let the House and Senate vote. But the secretary asked that first each senator and representative think long and deeply about the real path to peace. He added that failure to live up to treaty commitments in Southeast Asia would undermine confidence in our intent to stand by obligations elsewhere.

The committee was milder in its handling of Rusk than it had been with Taylor, and several senators came to the defense of the administration.

While Rusk was delivering his views to the committee, and to the nation on television and radio, an anonymous woman called and said she intended to shoot the secretary. Security measures were tightened and Rusk left the committee without incident. An investigation was started.

WAR GRIME
Mud-caked mother and two children wait to be taken to interrogation point after being flushed from hiring place during search for Viet Cong guerrillas in the Mekong Delta area. South Vietnamese troops found suspects and their families hiding in the mud and reeds.

* * * *

PRESIDENT Johnson defended his Viet Nam war policy in an Atlantic City, N. J., speech. He said that if Communist North Viet Nam's Viet Cong guerrillas topple South Viet Nam, they will subjugate others —at another time, at an even higher cost.

"If this 'war of liberation' triumphs," Johnson asked, "who will be liberated next?" He declared that the U. S. job in Viet Nam was to see that this does not happen and at the same time liberate the Vietnamese from terror, disease, hunger and ignorance.

* * * *

MEANTIME, Vice President Hubert Humphrey was completing a smiling but hard-hitting tour of Asia, drumming up support for American policy. Humphrey told both Pakistan and India they would get no more military aid from the United States until they reconcile their differences over Kashmir and concentrate on the real enemy, Red China.

He asked them, good-naturedly but firmly, to cease their carping criticism of United States policy in Viet Nam and Southeast Asia.

He also announced a $50 million loan to Pakistan and a $100 million loan to India, but warned them to produce well-documented plans for self-help if they expect big American aid in the future.

* * * *

AND THE American maritime unions took a stand on Viet Nam. They told President Johnson they will boycott all ships dealing with North Viet Nam unless the United States can prevail on its allies and other noncommunist nations to stop dealing with the enemy.

* * * *

AS A SIDE effect of the Viet Nam debate, Fred W. Friendly quit as president of the Columbia Broadcasting System news division. Friendly had recommended live coverage of the Senate hearings when George F. Kennan was the witness the previous week, but John A. Schneider had overruled him.

Schneider, newly named No. 3 man at CBS, was upheld by the firm's chairman and president and Friendly departed with a blast to the effect that advertising dollars had triumphed over responsibility to the public.

* * * *

THE POT was beginning to boil under President Johnson's lid on wages and prices. The presidents of unions representing 3.5 million building trades workers and 100,000 coal miners announced they would ignore the government's wage guidelines in negotiating new contracts.

The guidelines put an unofficial ceiling of 4.2% on wage increases. The complaint: No such limit on farmers' income, industrial profits or dividends, or professional income. Labor's revolt was seen as a sharp blow to the administration's thus-far "voluntary anti-inflation controls.

* * * *

THE WHITE House said the President still has "no serious proposals" for a new tax increase under consideration. The House prepared to vote Wednesday on his $4.8 billion tax package combining some increases in excise levies and a speedup in tax collections.

* * * *

THE GOVERNMENT raised the interest rate on U. S. Savings Bonds by four-tenths of 1% to help the economy and fight inflation. The new rate of 4.15% applies to series E and H bonds, the type sold to the public, as of last Dec. 1.

* * * *

THE PRESIDENT again asked Congress to approve two major projects in his Great Society program—$43.2 million to start operation of a 3,700-member Teacher Corps, and rent subsidies aimed at helping low-income families rent dwellings too costly for their own resources.

The Teacher Corps would instruct in poverty area schools. Johnson also will seek approval of a program to give breakfast to school children who otherwise would start the day hungry.

* * * *

AT THE Geneva disarmament conference, Russia accused the U. S. of violating the 1963 nuclear test ban treaty by "contaminating" the high seas with nuclear bombs. This was a reference to a search for a B52 bomb lost off Spain last month. The State Department curtly rejected the charge.

'Brain Drain' Termed Myth

PRINCETON, N.J. (AP)—The so-called "brain drain" of top students from all parts of the nation to the east is a fallacy according to a leading educator.

Dr. Hans Rosenhaupt, director of the Woodrow Wilson National Fellowship Foundation, said a study based on 2,500 Woodrow Wilson fellows showed most of them returned home after completing graduate study.

He said the "brain drain" myth was fostered by the fact that many of the better college students attend "prestigious" graduate schools on the East coast.

Bright Side

PITTSBURGH (AP)—Traffic jams have a bright side, according to Rex M. Whitton, Federal Highway Administrator.

Whitton, addressing a group of businessmen here recently, said that when city streets become choked with traffic "this is not so much a sympton of illness as it is proof that the city and its downtown are very much alive."

IMAGINARY CONVERSATION

Mom, Pop Plan a Wedding

(Editor's note — There is an ancient proverb, just invented: to imagine the conversation of the privileged few is the luxury of the unprivileged many).

By SAUL PETT

WASHINGTON (AP) — "Now, honey," she said, looking up from the list, "it's a wedding, not an election."

"I don't care," he said. "I don't see why we can't invite more friends to the reception than they do."

"But the whole congress?"

"It's their congress, too."

"And the cabinet and the Joint chiefs? Be reasonable."

"My baby daughter is getting married. I don't see why I have to be reasonable."

"It's their son who's getting married, too. Which reminds me."

"What?"

"He has to be allowed to pick his own best man."

"But Everett would be a great touch. We need him."

"But Everett may not be his choice."

"You simply can't," she said, sighing, "plan a wedding by consensus."

"Why not? It's simple arithmetic. An exact, equal number of ushers from both sides of the aisle."

"What will you do with Mansfield? You can't have two best men."

"That's an idea. I'll talk to Jack about it. I sleep better at night knowing Jack Valenti is helping plan my daughter's wedding."

"Our daughter's."

"Our daughter's."

"I think you're getting too worked up. Which reminds me; sentiment can be a dangerous thing."

"Just don't talk about your operation at the reception."

"You're beginning to sound like one of those smart-alec eastern writers."

"Well, just don't start giving them more ammunition on the difference between Boston and Austin. I suppose you have some ideas about who will deliver the toasts."

"Obviously, Hubert is a natural."

"I don't know anybody who can hold up a glass that long."

"We'll hold him to 40 minutes. If he starts shaking hands, I'll send him back to Saigon."

"Now, please remember, for heaven's sake, you can't go on the stump beforehand shouting, 'You all come to the weddin', hear?'"

"There are times I actually think you're disrespectful."

"Now, Sweetie, you know it's not that. It's just that there are limits to the space. The White House is not the Cotton Bowl."

"That may be an idea. I'll call. . . ."

"For heaven's sakes, don't call Valenti. I'll sleep better."

"It's a big ecumenical year."

"Oh, oh. I'm afraid to think."

"I think Arthur ought to lead the church choir."

"Arthur who?"

"Arthur Goldberg."

"Right."

"I wish they could just elope."

Teacher, Pupils Fight Sentry Dog Red Tape

CARMEL, Ind. (AP)—A Carmel high school home economics teacher and about 40 girl pupils, battling what the teacher says is heavy military red tape, are helping recruit sentry dogs for the United States Armed Forces.

Mrs. Irene Dailey, who has had her homemakers club girls working on the project since Christmas, said "this is the first time we've run into so much red tape."

The girls are enthusiastic about the effort, but the Air Force, which coordinates the sentry dog recruiting program, has hampered efforts with "you can't do it now," or "it will have to wait a while," Mrs. Dailey said.

"Because of the delay, we have lost at least a half dozen dogs," Mrs. Dailey said.

The girls scoured central Indiana for German shepherd dogs for candidates. They contacted the owners of about 30 dogs, then weeded the total to 8 dogs.

They took this group to the Bunker Hill Air Force Base at Peru, Ind., 70 miles north of here, for preliminary physical examinations and gun-shy tests. Five dogs were tentatively accepted.

The sentry dogs are used by security patrols at military bases.

Mrs. Dailey said she became interested in the recruiting program after seeing an Air Force appeal on a national television program.

The 53-year-old teacher, who has a son serving with the Air Force in Berlin and a career soldier cousin in Saigon, said "this project is very personal to me, besides being something the girls can enjoy."

"We plan to continue the program if we get more dog offers," she said. "This is the girls' way of showing loyalty to our soldiers in Viet Nam."

CAN'T WRITE BUT CAN PAINT

WEEK IN REVIEW

Firing in Capital Almost as Heavy as in Viet

Combined Wire Services

The fire was almost as heavy, if not as lethal, on Capitol Hill as it was in South Viet Nam.

President Johnson's Viet Nam policy came under heavy attack in hearings before the Senate Foreign Relations Committee, but by week's end seemed to be weathering the barrage.

On Thursday, Gen. Maxwell D. Taylor, former ambassador to Saigon, defended administration policy and ran head-on into Sen. Wayne Morse, D-Ore., a regular critic of the Viet Nam commitment. "I happen to hold to the point of view," said Morse, "that it isn't going to be too long before the American people as a people will repudiate our war in Southeast Asia."

"That, of course, is good news to Hanoi, senator," the general replied.

Retorted Morse: "I know that there is the smear artist answer that you militarists give to those of us who have honest differences of opinion with you, but I don't intend to get down in the gutter with you and engage in that kind of debate, general."

* * * *

THINGS WENT a little better for the administration the next day when Secretary of State Dean Rusk testified before the committee. He reminded the committee that the Senate in 1954 had set the course of Southeast Asia policy. That was the year the Senate approved the Southeast Asia Treaty, which binds the United States to aid any country in the area under Communist attack, such as South Viet Nam.

To those who say the American people doubt the U. S. role in Viet Nam, Rusk said, "Let us find out," let the House and Senate vote. But the secretary asked that first each senator and representative think long and deeply about the real path to peace. He added that failure to live up to treaty commitments in Southeast Asia would undermine confidence in our intent to stand by obligations elsewhere.

The committee was milder in its handling of Rusk than it had been with Taylor, and several senators came to the defense of the administration.

While Rusk was delivering his views to the committee, and to the nation on television and radio, an anonymous woman called and said she intended to shoot the secretary. Security measures were tightened and Rusk left the committee without incident. An investigation was started.

WAR GRIME
Mud-caked mother and two children wait to be taken to interrogation point after being flushed from hiring place during search for Viet Cong guerrillas in the Mekong Delta area. South Vietnamese troops found suspects and their families hiding in the mud and reeds.

* * * *

PRESIDENT Johnson defended his Viet Nam war policy in an Atlantic City, N. J., speech. He said that if Communist North Viet Nam's Viet Cong guerrillas topple South Viet Nam, they will subjugate others —at another time, at an even higher cost.

"If this 'war of liberation' triumphs," Johnson asked, "who will be liberated next?" He declared that the U. S. job in Viet Nam was to see that this does not happen and at the same time liberate the Vietnamese from terror, disease, hunger and ignorance.

* * * *

MEANTIME, Vice President Hubert Humphrey was completing a smiling but hard-hitting tour of Asia, drumming up support for American policy. Humphrey told both Pakistan and India they would get no more military aid from the United States until they reconcile their differences over Kashmir and concentrate on the real enemy, Red China.

He asked them, good-naturedly but firmly, to cease their carping criticism of United States policy in Viet Nam and Southeast Asia.

He also announced a $50 million loan to Pakistan and a $100 million loan to India, but warned them to produce well-documented plans for self-help if they expect big American aid in the future.

* * * *

AND THE American maritime unions took a stand on Viet Nam. They told President Johnson they will boycott all ships dealing with North Viet Nam unless the United States can prevail on its allies and other noncommunist nations to stop dealing with the enemy.

* * * *

AS A SIDE effect of the Viet Nam debate, Fred W. Friendly quit as president of the Columbia Broadcasting System news division. Friendly had recommended live coverage of the Senate hearings when George F. Kennan was the witness the previous week, but John A. Schneider had overruled him.

Schneider, newly named No. 3 man at CBS, was upheld by the firm's chairman and president and Friendly departed with a blast to the effect that advertising dollars had triumphed over responsibility to the public.

* * * *

THE POT was beginning to boil under President Johnson's lid on wages and prices. The presidents of unions representing 3.5 million building trades workers and 100,000 coal miners announced they would ignore the government's wage guidelines in negotiating new contracts.

The guidelines put an unofficial ceiling of 4.2% on wage increases. The complaint: No such limit on farmers' income, industrial profits or dividends, or professional income. Labor's revolt was seen as a sharp blow to the administration's thus-far "voluntary anti-inflation controls.

* * * *

THE WHITE House said the President still has "no serious proposals" for a new tax increase under consideration. The House prepared to vote Wednesday on his $4.8 billion tax package combining some increases in excise levies and a speedup in tax collections.

* * * *

THE GOVERNMENT raised the interest rate on U. S. Savings Bonds by four-tenths of 1% to help the economy and fight inflation. The new rate of 4.15% applies to series E and H bonds, the type sold to the public, as of last Dec. 1.

* * * *

THE PRESIDENT again asked Congress to approve two major projects in his Great Society program—$43.2 million to start operation of a 3,700-member Teacher Corps, and rent subsidies aimed at helping low-income families rent dwellings too costly for their own resources.

The Teacher Corps would instruct in poverty area schools. Johnson also will seek approval of a program to give breakfast to school children who otherwise would start the day hungry.

* * * *

AT THE Geneva disarmament conference, Russia accused the U. S. of violating the 1963 nuclear test ban treaty by "contaminating" the high seas with nuclear bombs. This was a reference to a search for a B52 bomb lost off Spain last month. The State Department curtly rejected the charge.

CROSSTOWN FREEWAY

City Moves to Speed Up Job

By GEORGE WEEKS

With Long Beach's consent to the Pacific Coast Freeway officially on record, city officials are offering technical help to the state for prompt design of the 7.3-mile, $65-million crosstown route.

Shortly after the stormy hearing last Tuesday had ended with City Council approval of the freeway agreement, City Manager John R. Mansell named a group of engineers and planners to work with the state highway division in advancing the design job. Asst. City Manager Robert C. Creighton will coordinate a committee including City Engineer Jess D. Gilkerson, Planning Director Werner Ruchti and Traffic Engineer Robert D. Dier.

* * * *

MANSELL said he will meet with Edward T. Telford, head of the highway division's district office, to agree on procedures and also to press for a quick start of construction on the long-stalled Artesia Freeway, another crosstown route near the north city boundary.

The city manager will seek assurances there will be no prolonged delays in the orderly progress of the new project. His purpose is to avoid the threat of blight conditions, a target of City Council complaints in connection with the Artesia route.

Mansell said he hopes the main decisions on the Pacific Coast design to be disposed of within three months, to the mutual satisfaction of state and city technicians.

Telford has estimated that the full design will require two years, but some purchases of right of way are expected to go ahead during that period.

* * * *

ONE CONCERN of city officials, Gilkerson said, is to assure the best integration possible of the local street system with the freeway. A question still to be decided is whether the freeway through the downtown district will be depressed well below grade level or elevated. Both alternatives appear on the freeway plan.

Arguments for a depressed freeway are that it will minimize the taking of land, reduce noise nuisance and make for more attractive landscaping.

On the other side, an elevated freeway would make parking available under the roadway and avoid disturbance of street patterns and underground utilities.

* * * *

ASIDE from the downtown district, the principal questions are in the Colorado Lagoon - East Long Beach area. City officials are looking for ways of handling traffic and design on such roadways as Colorado Street and the proposed Loynes Drive to head off congestion.

In this area the state has already decided, with city assent, to elevate the freeway from a point west of Park Avenue to the vicinity of the extension of Santiago Avenue.

The city group also expects to help settle such details as the cul de sacs where streets marked for closing reach the freeway, the layout of parallel frontage roads and the alteration of underground utility lines and storm drains.

* * * *

GILKERSON noted that he and his staff have worked with the state for the past year in determining some design features, particularly the unusually large proportion of local streets that will be carried over or under the freeway.

Actual traffic counts show that the roadways which won't be interrupted carry 88% of the affected traffic, Gilkerson said.

Further action by the City Council is not required on the details of design. In the case of major or substantial alterations from the submitted plan, the freeway agreement must be modified by state and city action. Such amendments to other freeway agreements have gone through the council with little controversy.

Council's Calendar

Because of the Washington's Birthday holiday Tuesday, this week's City Council meeting will be held Wednesday. Agenda items:

'Brain Drain' Termed Myth

PRINCETON, N. J. (UPI)—The so-called "brain drain" of top students from all parts of the nation to the east is a fallacy according to a leading educator.

Dr. Hans Rosenhaupt, director of the Woodrow Wilson National Fellowship Foundation, said a study based on 2,500 Woodrow Wilson fellows showed most of them returned home after completing graduate study.

He said the "brain drain" myth was fostered by the fact that many of the better college students attend "prestigious" graduate schools on the East coast.

Bright Side

PITTSBURGH (UPI)—Traffic jams have a bright side, according to Rex M. Whitton, Federal Highway Administrator.

Whitton, addressing a group of businessmen here recently, said that when city streets become choked with traffic "this is not so much a sympton of illness as it is proof that the city and its downtown are very much alive."

U.S. MERCHANT MARINE DILEMMA

Viet War Ship Demand Intensifies Issue

By BEM PRICE

WASHINGTON (AP) — The U. S. Merchant marine, already in danger of foundering on the rocks of high operating and construction costs, is running into more trouble because of demands of the war in Viet Nam.

Congress is already feeling the strain as the nation is forced to draw more and more on its reserve fleet, composed of ships 20 years old or older, to meet the needs of war.

The House Committee on Merchant Marine and Fisheries is now holding hearings on the plight of the merchant marine.

The 'danger signals' were there before the Vietnamese shipping needs became acute. The crisis was caused by labor disputes, cases of indifferent management and lackluster application of federal maritime policies.

Fundamentally what it all boils down to is this: Should the United States maintain a merchant marine and a commercial shipbuilding industry, and if so, what should be the size of each?

* * * *

HOW THE question is answered will affect the jobs of 98,000 men now manning or building U.S. Flag ships.

Further, the answer will have a vital effect on the nation's export-import trade, especially if the ultimate decision is to let foreign ships carry the bulk of the U.S. trade, now valued at around $30 billion annually.

The Joint Economic Committee of Congress has already asserted, that such a course contains the seeds of disaster, noting that foreign ship operators charge less to ship certain goods from Europe to the United States than from the United States to Europe.

* * * *

WHY THE maritime industry is in its present plight can be summed up in a couple of sentences.

(1) It costs, roughly, twice as much to operate a U.S. Flag ship as it does to operate an identical ship under foreign registry.

(2) It costs twice as much to build a ship in an American yard as it does in, say, Japan.

The high cost of labor is a factor, of course, but only one. There are many others. seaman often earns $10,000 a year with overtime. That is three or four times the annual earnings of a seaman on a foreign ship.

* * * *

FOR ALL practical purposes, ships built in U.S. yards are hand-crafted by men earning an average of $3 a hour, compared to an hourly wage in Swedish yards of $1.70, and .73 cents in Japan.

As for the other aspects:

There are those within the Maritime Administration who claim U.S. ships could be built 30 per cent cheaper if operators would accept standardized designs. So far the ship operators have resisted.

The engineers also maintain that labor costs could be reduced if the unions would permit—as Swedish yards do—the use of the dual craft system. Under this system, when a welder runs out of welding work, he can cross union lines and work as a steam fitter.

Only one U.S. yard uses this system, the non-union Avondale Shipyards, Inc., of New Orleans. Avondale currently has a $213 million backlog of orders, including 12 highly-automated cargo liners for private ship operators.

* * * *

IN AN EFFORT to escape high operating costs, U.S. owners have registered over 400 ships under the flags of Panama, Honduras and Liberia.

There are now 949 ships flying the U.S. flag. This total will be increased shortly to 999 as the nation taps its 2,536 ship reserve fleet to meet the increased shipping needs of the Vietnam war. The active Soviet merchant fleet approximates 1,500 ships.

Of the U.S. total, 300 ships are engaged in domestic trade, an area closed to foreign ships.

OF THE 649 American ships in world trade, 310 sidics: that is, the federal government pays the difference between U.S. operating costs and the cost of operating a similar ship under foreign registry. This subsidy now amounts to $273 million annually.

There are 270 bulk cargo carriers—tramps—which are unsubsidized. These ships, all built over 20 years ago, are now approaching the end of their useful economic life.

Included in the nation's present blue water fleet are 69 ships owned by the federal government and manned by merchant seamen. These ships are usually operated by private firms under lease from the Defense Department's Military Sea Transport Service (MSTS).

In addition, about 100 ships have been withdrawn from the reserve fleet of 2,536 ships, to carry wra cargoes to Viet Nam. The reserve fleet is mad up of World War II freighters laid up after the war ended. The cost of taking them of mothballs is about $400,000 per ship.

* * * *

AS THE war in Viet Nam began escalting, U.S. policy makers assumed foreign flag ships could be chartered to help meet the increased shipping needs. The assumption was false.

At one point last summer 50,000 tons of war materiel had piled up in West Coast ports. MSTS sought to charter a Mexican ship only to discover the Mexican Government had forbidden all ships under its registry to sail Vietnamese waters.

MSTS then turned to two Greek-owned ships, offering a Viet Nam. Three Japanese lines also declined to accept charters to carry materiel and food to Viet Nam.

In mid-1964, President Johnson directed the secretary of commerce, then Luther Hodges, to establish a Maritime Advisory Committee (MAC) to consider means of "strengthening the trade, national defense, manpower and labor relations programs of the maritime industry."

At its first meeting, MAC, whose members were drawn from unions, management, the government and the public, concluded that it could not reach any conclusions until it had some guidelines indicating national requirements and how much money the federal government wanted to spend on the industry. No guidelines were forthcoming and MAC lapsed into semi-dormancy.

When John T. Connor replaced Hodges in 1965, he set up another committee, known as the Interagency Task Force (ITF), headed by Alan S. Boyd, Undersecretary of Commerce for Transportation, and Nicholas Johnson head of the Maritime Administration.

Members of the committee were drawn from the Departments of State, Defense, Agriculture, Labor and Commerce plus the Bureau of the Budget, the Martime Administration and the Maritime Commission.

* * * *

AMONG ITF recommendations:

Abandonment by the United States of the passenger liner trade as unprofitable.

A total U.S. Flag fleet, active and reserve, of no more than 1,000 ships—500 tankers, 400 general cargo ships and 100 bulk cargo ships.

The closing of all U.S. shipyards except those determined by the Secretaries of Defense and Commerce to be essential to emergency defense and civilian needs.

Ship operators be permitted to buy foreign-made ships and register them under the U.S. Flag, something they cannot now do.

A reduction in ship operating and construction subsidies from the present $425 million to $394 million annually over the next five years.

These recommendations set off an uproar in the industry. But ITF did not stop there.

It recommended that the nine sea going unions merge into two or three. ITF noted that the federal government through subsidies pays about 72 per cent of seamen's wages.

IN ISSUING its recommendations ITF accomplished one thing: it united the unions, ship operators and ship builders in opposition.

IMAGINARY CONVERSATION

Mom, Pop Plan a Wedding

(Editor's note -- There is an ancient proverb, just invented: to imagine the conversation of the privileged few is the luxury of the unprivileged many).

By SAUL PETT

WASHINGTON (AP) — "Now, honey," she said, looking up from the list, "it's a wedding, not an election."

"I don't care," he said. "I don't see why we can't invite more friends to the reception than they do."

"But the whole congress?"

"It's their congress, too."

"And the cabinet and the Joint chiefs? Be reasonable."

"My baby daughter is getting married, I don't see why I have to be reasonable."

"It's their son who's getting married, too. Which reminds me."

"What?"

"He has to be allowed to pick his own best man."

"But Everett would be a great touch. We need him."

"But Everett may not be his choice."

"The boy is from Illinois, Isn't he? Everett's his senator, too.

"You simply can't," she said, sighing, "plan a wedding by consensus."

"Why not? It's simple arithmetic, An exact, equal number of ushers from both sides of the aisle."

"What will you do with Mansfield? You can't have two best men."

"That's an idea. I'll talk to Jack about it. I sleep better at night knowing Jack Valenti is helping plan my daughter's wedding."

"Our daughter's."

"Our daughter's."

"I think you're getting too worked up. Which reminds me; sentiment can be a dangerous thing."

"Just don't talk about your operation at the reception."

"Well, just don't start giving them more ammunition on the difference between Boston and Austin. I suppose you have some ideas about who will deliver the toasts."

"Obviously, Hubert is a natural."

"I don't know anybody who can hold up a glass that long."

"We'll hold him to 40 minutes. If he starts shaking hands, I'll send him back to Saigon."

"Now, please remember, for heaven's sake, you can't go on the stump beforehand shouting, 'You all come to the weddin', hear?'"

"There are times I actually think you're disrespectful."

"Now, Sweetie, you know it's not that. It's just that there are limits to the space. The White House is not the Cotton Bowl."

"That may be an idea. I'll call....."

"For heaven's sakes, don't call Valenti. I'll sleep better."

"It's a big ecumenical year."

"Oh, oh. I'm afraid to think."

"I think Arthur ought to lead the church choir."

"Arthur who?"

"Arthur Goldberg."

"Right."

"I wish they could just elope."

Teacher, Pupils Fight Sentry Dog Red Tape

CARMEL, Ind. (AP)—A Carmel high school home economics teacher and about 40 girl pupils, battling what the teacher says is heavy military red tape, are helping recruit sentry dogs for the United States Armed Forces.

Mrs. Irene Dailey, who has had her homemakers club girls working on the project since Christmas, said "this is the first time we've run into so much red tape."

The girls are enthusiastic about the effort, but the Air Force, which coordinates the sentry dog recruiting program, has hampered efforts with "you can't do it now," or "it will have to wait a while," Mrs. Dailey said.

"Because of the delay, we have lost at least a half dozen dogs," Mrs. Dailey said.

The girls scoured central Indiana for German shepherd dogs for candidates. They contacted the owners of about 30 dogs, then weeded the total to 8 dogs.

They took this group to the Bunker Hill Air Force Base at Peru, Ind., 70 miles north of here, for preliminary physical examinations and gun-shy tests. Five dogs were tentatively accepted.

The sentry dogs are used by security patrols at military bases.

Mrs. Dailey said she became interested in the recruiting program after seeing an Air Force appeal on a national television program.

The 53-year-old teacher, who has a son serving with the Air Force in Berlin and a career soldier cousin in Saigon, said "this project is very personal to me, besides being something the girls can enjoy."

"We plan to continue the program if we get more dog offers," she said. "This is the girls' way of showing loyalty to our soldiers in Viet Nam."

CAN'T WRITE BUT CAN PAINT

Three Unsolved Killings Haunt Town in Maine

By JACK HUBBARD

FORT FAIRFIELD, Maine (UPI) — Violence has sown suspicion and fear in this potato-growing community of 6,000 near the Canadian border.

Three violent deaths in 14 months has bred a tension that belies the town's friendly face.

Who among them is the killer or killers?

That question haunts—and horrifies—the people of the town.

The day after Christmas, 1964, a 14-year-old newsboy, Cyrus Everett, vanished while walking his route. His body was found nearly 4½ months later beneath a log in a swamp.

While Cyrus still was missing, Donna L. Mauch, 24, a waitress at a local hotel, was bludgeoned to death. She was killed last Feb. 24.

No one ever has been arrested in connection with their deaths. Cyrus' death officially was declared accidental until a private detective was called in and said it was homicide. Officials reopened the case and it is still under investigation.

* * * *

THE TOWN'S third killing occurred eight days ago when housewife Rose Jane Goodwin, 31, was beaten to death with a mop handle. Her husband was arrested as a suspect.

The violence not only has made this town jittery but has turned it into a gossip mill. Rumors flow like the waters of the nearby St. John River. Most of the rumors concern Cyrus Everett's death.

His mother, Mrs. Mary Everett, said, "There have been enough rumors to write a book." Town Councilman John Beckwith said, "They have been awful and vicious. I don't think anybody knows how they started."

A clergyman commented, "Many of the people spreading them were looking for quick conclusions, and many of the rumors were on a moronic level."

A town official who asked to remain anonymous said, "There have been a lot of rumors. The police are trying to do their job, but they need the public cooperation. I think there are people in this town who do know some things but won't say anything because they don't want to get involved."

An officer investigating Cyrus' death said "no matter who the suspect is, it won't please some of those people. If we arrested someone tomorrow, somebody would be disappointed."

* * * *

THE CASE WOULD have been dropped, according to Town Councilman Wilfred Cassidy, if it weren't for Oits N. La Bree. La Bree, a one-time policeman, was called in by the Town Council to investigate the boy's death. La Bree termed it a homicide.

La Bree's report blew the case open again. He contended that some person, or persons, placed the boy's body under the log.

With the welter of rumors, doors that never used to be locked are now tightly secured. Parents know where their children are—and who is with them.

A service station attendant said, "My father keeps my kids when I'm away. I wouldn't trust anybody else."

The town has become the butt of cruel remarks. One man said, "They call us 'sin-town' in (nearby) Presque Isle."

John McKenney, Cyrus Everett's eighth grade teacher, said that while taking advanced courses at a state teachers college at Presque Island, "people quizzed me every morning, asking 'what's going to happen over there next?'"

A hotel clerk said that during a recent visit across the border to New Brunswick a man asked him "how our new indoor sport was doing."

"I asked, what was that?," the clerk said. "The guy said 'murder.'"

SUE GALLIE . . . Miss Australia

FIRST IBC ENTRANT

Australia Beauty Is Honey-blonde

Twenty-one-year-old Sue Gallie, "Miss Australia 1966," is the first international entrant in the 1966 International Beauty Pageant, according to the Pageant's General Director, Wayne Dallard.

The Pageant, which also selects "Miss United States" from among American contestants, will be held Aug. 3-14 at the Long Beach Municipal Auditorium.

Miss Gallie, a slim, honey blonde, 5' 8", was chosen, following a series of National and State contests throughout Australia, sponsored by the Australian Cerebral Palsy Assn., Inc.

As "Miss Australia 1966," Sue will compete with contestants from nearly 50 states and 50 countries for the highly-coveted title of "International Beauty Queen," a cash prize of $10,000, plus a trophy and a number of other awards.

Rep. Tunney Asks Medical Exam for Import Labor

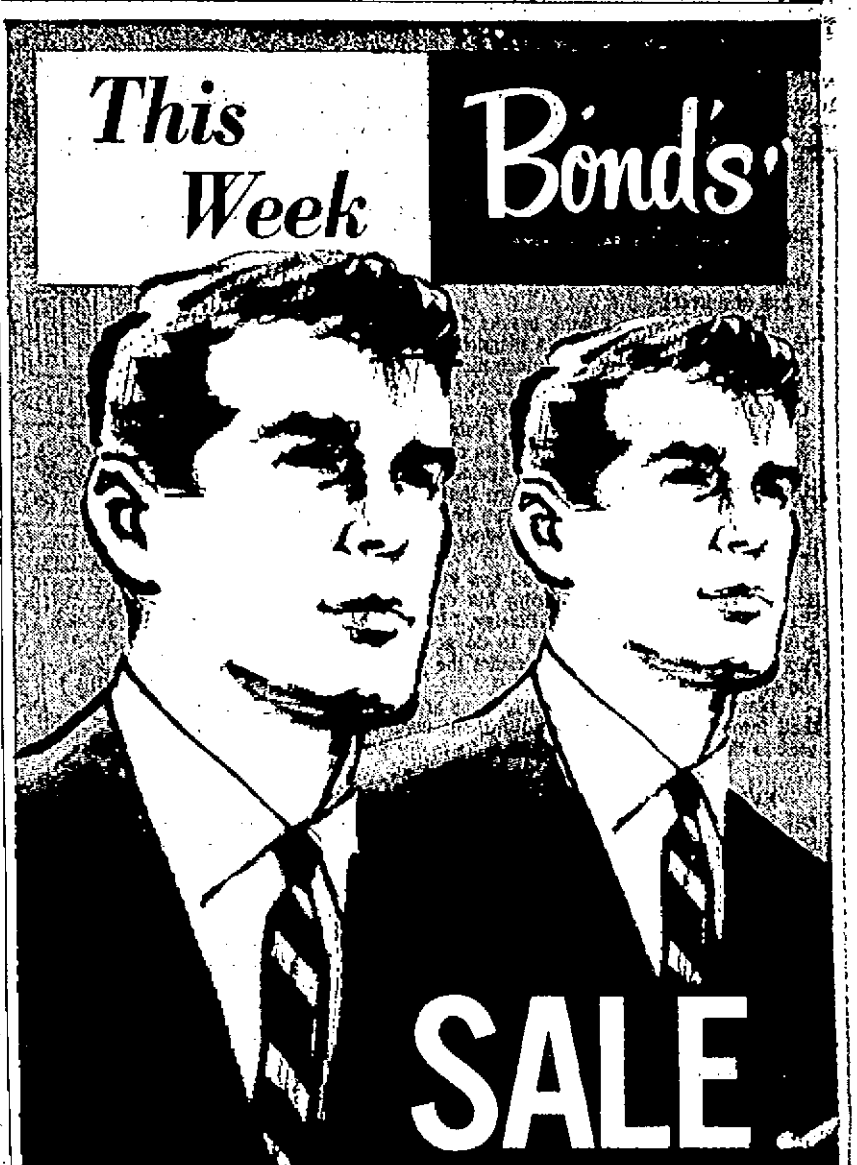

WASHINGTON (AP) — Rep. John V. Tunney, D-Calif., urged the Justice Department to enforce the immigration law requiring medical examination of temporary foreign labor entering this country.

In a letter to Attorney General Nicholas Katzenbach, Tunney said:

"It is my understanding that the Justice Department is required to enforce under the present immigration law the administration of complete medical examinations conducted by the public health service to insure that temporary foreign labor admitted to the country do not carry a dangerous contagious disease."

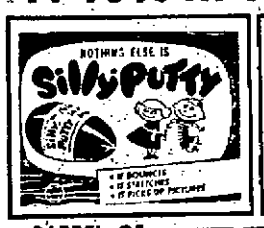

He told the attorney general that 18,400 foreign workers were admitted to California last year without disease tests.

CROSSTOWN FREEWAY

City Moves to Speed Up Job

By GEORGE WEEKS

With Long Beach's consent to the Pacific Coast Freeway officially on record, city officials are offering technical help to the state for prompt design of the 7.3-mile, $65-million crosstown route.

Shortly after the stormy hearing last Tuesday had ended with City Council approval of the freeway agreement, City Manager John R. Mansell named a group of engineers and planners to work with the state highway division in advancing the design job.

Asst. City Manager Robert C. Creighton will coordinate a committee including City Engineer Jess D. Gilkerson, Planning Director Werner Ruchti and Traffic Engineer Robert D. Dier.

* * * *

MANSELL said he will meet with Edward T. Telford, head of the highway division's district office, to agree on procedures and also to press for a quick start of construction on the long-stalled Artesia Freeway, another crosstown route near the north city boundary.

The city manager will seek assurances there will be no prolonged delays in the orderly progress of the new project. His purpose is to avoid the threat of blight conditions, a target of City Council complaints in connection with the Artesia route.

Mansell said he hopes the main decisions on the Pacific Coast design to be disposed of within three months, to the mutual satisfaction of state and city technicians.

Telford has estimated that the full design will require two years, but some purchases of right of way are expected to go ahead during that period.

* * * *

ONE CONCERN of city officials, Gilkerson said, is to assure the best integration possible of the local street system with the freeway. A question still to be decided is whether the freeway through the downtown district will be depressed well below grade level or elevated. Both alternatives appear on the freeway plan.

Arguments for a depressed freeway are that it will minimize the taking of land, reduce noise nuisance and make for more attractive landscaping.

On the other side, an elevated freeway would make parking available under the roadway and avoid disturbance of street patterns and underground utilities.

* * * *

ASIDE from the downtown district, the principal questions are in the Colorado Lagoon - East Long Beach area. City officials are looking for ways of handling traffic and design on such roadways as Colorado Street and the proposed Loynes Drive to head off congestion.

In this area the state has already decided, with city assent, to elevate the freeway from a point west of Park Avenue to the vicinity of the extension of Santiago Avenue.

The city group also expects to help settle such details as the cul de sacs where streets marked for closing reach the freeway, the layout of parallel frontage roads and the alteration of underground utility lines and storm drains.

* * * *

GILKERSON noted that he and his staff have worked with the state for the past year in determining some design features, particularly the unusually large proportion of local streets that will be carried over or under the freeway.

Actual traffic counts show that the roadways which won't be interrupted carry 88% of the affected traffic, Gilkerson said.

Further action by the City Council is not required on the details of design. In the case of major or substantial alterations from the submitted plan, the freeway agreement must be modified by state and city action. Such amendments to other freeway agreements have gone through the council with little controversy.

MEN AND MACHINES

Will the Wedding Last?

By JOHN BARBOUR

Someone jams on the brakes on a foggy Los Angeles freeway, and 100 cars pile up behind, like a nightmare in a hall of mirrors.

The computer in a bank breaks down, and $3 billion in accounts are locked in its magnetic memory. For 24 hours, even it can't say how much money you have left.

A circuit breaker fails, and most of the northeastern United States is plunged into powerless darkness, city by city, an assembly line of calamity. Dishwashers, refrigerators, the whole electric universe dies out. The most modern of worlds becomes primitive again.

And a few lonely voices warn that things have become so complex an entire city can be reduced to chaos by the failure of a handful of individuals, or a single, basic source of power.

"Ever since a man knocked two stones together to make a tool, he's been altering his environment," explained anthropologist Loren Eiseley. "But never before has he had such giant powers to do good or evil—nor has he ever been less able to predict the good or evil of his efforts."

Many social scientists feel humans are rushing pell-mell into the brave new world without considering the cost to the individual—and whether he really wants it.

EVEN THE greatest proponents of automation point out we're in a period of adjustment—a time when our society is showing some of the cracks, some of the brittleness when man and machine got out of balance.

The U.S. Mint found that out. Short on silver, it made a new quarter in a sort of copper sandwich.

All of a sudden it was bargain day at the vending machines. When a new quarter was dropped in the slot, part of the machine recognized its value, registered credit for 25 cents. But another part of the machine disagreed, returned the quarter, but failed to erase the 25 cents credit.

By the time vending machine operators caught up with this two-bit argument, reports were coming in from all over of bargain-priced cigarettes, and other items, 25 cents off.

ADULTS DON'T have a monopoly on sensing something fragile or uncertain in their new world. Half of the U.S. population now is 25 and under, it's their world, too.

One of the popular folk songs on U.S. campuses tells of box-like houses on a hillside and the people who live in them, "and they're all made of ticky-tack, and they all look just the same."

The social fragility is often grim. One minister in New York's East Harlem pointed to the frustration of his poverty-ridden parishioners who see a glittering life advertised on television, but who cannot win the economic or educational means of attaining it. And that frustration leads to violence, the minister said.

IF THIS WEDDING between man and machine has increased some social differences and tensions, it has also provided some common problems.

A thousand smokestacks and thousands of automobiles spread a haze over a city, dim out a skyline, hide the stars, make the eyes smart.

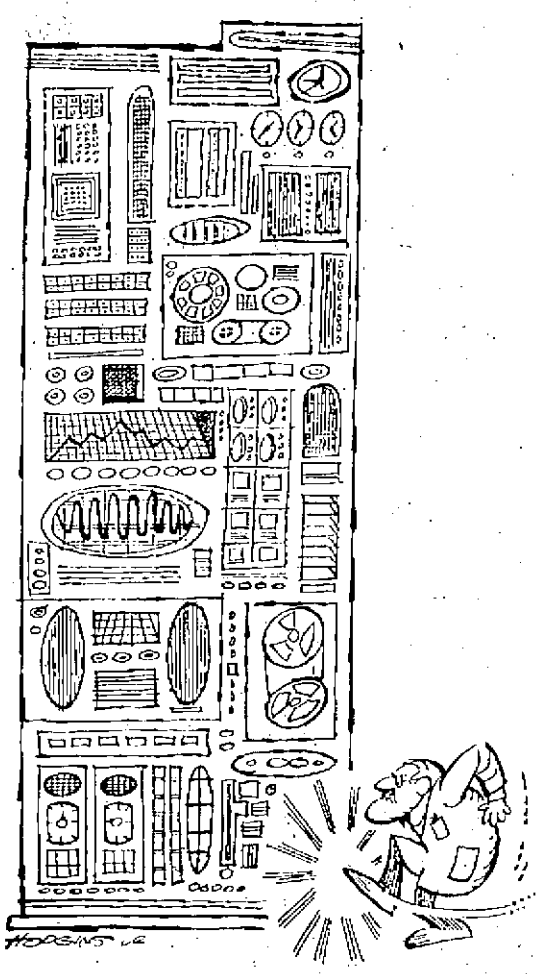

The leftovers of living and industry pour into rivers and lakes and oceans. Fish die. Beaches are closed. And nowhere is immune, not even beautiful, mountainous Lake Tahoe on the wilderness of the California-Nevada border.

When the power went out Nov. 9 and froze 80,000 square miles of the populous northeast, New Yorkers got a common, if eerie view, of their city. In those first moments of darkness, people looked around at the dead buildings, like a fossil world, and wondered at the fact that a 70-story tall building could become useless because its elevators stopped running, and its lights went out.

FEW PLACES are immune from this. Shortly after the northeast blackout, power failures hit parts of Texas. Of some 3,000 separate power companies in the United States, more than three-quarters of them are interconnected, operate in parallel, share the load.

When weak spots show up, the power industry looks for solutions. So do power users. Some neighborhoods and businesses installed generating plants of their own, gasoline driven, gas turbine driven. One company advertises "total energy" for a building or a neighborhood, a small gas turbine plant to produce heat, light, hot water, steam, air conditioning.

The computer really works quite well. It's just that when it fails, its errors are enormous. A rainstorm shut down a computer complex in New Jersey and blacked out some 800 stock brokers on the going prices of nearly 3,000 issues. In Great Britain recently, a computer overestimated how much beer a brewery should produce for the holidays, and two million pints of beer had to be thrown out unsold.

In the New York financial community, most brokers and banks share computers when one breaks down. And now everyone wants a computer. The Democratic National Committee—running the risk of being called a political machine—hired a computer to help congressmen reach their constituents. The machine can address letters personally to more than six million persons, and officials want to equip it with everyone who can vote. The computer also notes the job, nationality, sex, age and nearly 140 other items on each of its electronic prisoners.

EVEN SCIENTISTS have mixed emotions on the role of computers in research. One poll of nearly 200 scientists showed that most felt the computer had a place in scientific study. But some felt that it tempted researchers to accept numerical answers to problems instead of looking beyond the numbers of underlying scientific laws.

On the fringes of the machine revolution are some hardware items that seem to be invention for invention's sake. But they still sell—electric toothbrushes, electric shoe buffers, cigarette lighters with invisible flame, electric card shufflers, anything for the modern man who has everything.

Maybe it would be wise to give him a survival kit—should the machines of his world fail; a piece of flint, two stones to chip into tools, some shells to eat with, a few pieces of rawhide strands to make bows for his arrows.

THE PRESSURES of population on modern day society are already beginning to tell—not alone in India or China where food is the problem, but in the United States where just getting to work is a problem.

Some 35,000 transit workers in New York City struck, tying up the city's subways and buses. The result was chaos. Every morning a surge of cars, bicycles, anything with wheels, headed into Manhattan. Every night they turned for home again. The city's working population has become enormous that it is helpless without its transit system.

Dr. Simon Ramo, West Coast scientific planner, thinks that by the year 2,000, the partnership of man and electronic machine will be taken for granted. But in the final decades of this century man is faced "with a technological straitjacket of our own making." Man needs, Ramo says, the find ways of making technology work for him and not to have him working for technology.

An anthropologist once said: "Beware of the small invention—the baby bottle that takes the child away from his mother's breast, or the baby carriage that denies him the warmth of being held."

The brain of man, says Eiseley, has not changed in the last 50 to 100,000 years. The brain of that earlier time was as capable of mastering everything we have mastered. Man simply had not had time to discover. But he had a brain which could."

Only that brain which has carried him through ages of stone and iron can firm up his fragile relationship with machines and the power they have brought him in the ages of the atom and space.

David Sarnoff Biography Due

LOS ANGELES (UPI) — "David Sarnoff," a 359-page biography about the chairman of Radio Corp. of America, will be published by Harper and Row of New York on Feb. 28, the day after Sarnoff's 75th birthday, a spokesman announced.

Governmental Offices to Close on Tuesday

Most governmental offices—federal, state, county and city—will be closed Tuesday in recognition of Washington's Birthday.

Banks, public libraries and schools also will observe the holiday. Most other businesses will follow the usual work-day schedule.

There will be no regular mail deliveries, but city rubbish and garbage trucks will make their regular rounds.

Long Beach City Council will meet Wednesday instead of Tuesday.

NEW YORK (AP)—By 1975 New York State will need 10,000 more teachers than there are now for its public and private colleges.

State Education Commissioner James E. Allen Jr. said current trends indicate that by that time the state will have 540,000 students in higher education institutes, an increase of 77 per cent over present enrollment.

U.S. MERCHANT MARINE DILEMMA

Viet War Ship Demand Intensifies Issue

By BEM PRICE

WASHINGTON (AP) — The U. S. Merchant marine, already in danger of foundering on the rocks of high operating and construction costs, is running into more trouble because of demands of the war in Viet Nam.

Congress is already feeling the strain as the nation is forced to draw more and more on its reserve fleet, composed of ships 20 years old or older, to meet the needs of war.

The House Committee on Merchant Marine and Fisheries is now holding hearings on the plight of the merchant marine.

The danger signals were there before the Vietnamese shipping needs became acute. The crisis was caused by labor disputes, cases of indifferent management and lackluster application of federal maritime policies.

Fundamentally what it all boils down to is this: Should the United States maintain a merchant marine and a commercial shipbuilding industry, and if so, what should be the size of each?

* * * *

HOW THE question is answered will affect the jobs of 98,000 men now manning or building U.S. Flag ships.

Further, the answer will have a vital effect on the nation's export-import trade, especially if the ultimate decision is to let foreign ships carry the bulk of the U.S. trade, now valued at around $30 billion annually.

The Joint Economic Committee of Congress has already asserted that such a course contains the seeds of disaster, noting that foreign ship operators charge less to ship certain goods from Europe to the United States than from the United States to Europe.

* * * *

WHY THE maritime industry is in its present plight can be summed up in a couple of sentences.

(1) It costs, roughly, twice as much to operate a U.S. Flag ship as it does to operate an identical ship under foreign registry.

(2) It costs twice as much to build a ship in an American yard as it does in, say, Japan.

The high cost of labor is a factor, of course, but only one. There are many others. seaman often earns $10,000 a year with overtime. That is three or four times the annual earnings of a seaman on a foreign ship.

* * * *

FOR ALL practical purposes, ships built in U.S. yards are hand-crafted by men earning an average of $3 a hour, compared to an hourly wage in Swedish yards of $1.70, and 73 cents in Japan.

As for the other aspects:

There are those within the Maritime Administration who claim U.S. ships could be built 30 per cent cheaper if operators would accept standardized designs. So far the ship operators have resisted.

The engineers also maintain that labor costs could be reduced if the unions would permit—as Swedish yards do—the use of the dual craft system. Under this system, when a welder runs out of welding work, he can cross union lines and work as a steam fitter.

Only one U.S. yard uses this system. The non-union Avondale Shipyards, Inc., of New Orleans. Avondale currently has a $213 million backlog of orders, including 12 highly-automated cargo liners for private ship operators.

* * * *

IN AN EFFORT to escape high operating costs, U.S. owners have registered over 400 ships under the flags of Panama, Honduras and Liberia.

There are now 949 ships flying the U.S. flag. This total will be increased shortly to 999 as the nation taps its 2,536 ship reserve fleet to meet the increased shipping needs of the Vietnam war. The active Soviet merchant fleet approximates 1,500 ships.

Of the U.S. total, 300 ships are engaged in domestic trade, an area closed to foreign ships.

OF THE 648 American ships in world trade, 310 sides; that is, the federal government pays the difference between U.S. operating costs and the cost of operating a similar ship under foreign registry. This subsidy now amounts to $273 million annually.

There are 270 bulk cargo carriers—tramps—which are unsubsidized. These ships, all built over 20 years ago, are now approaching the end of their useful economic life.

Included in the nation's present blue water fleet are 69 ships owned by the federal government and manned by merchant seamen. These ships are usually operated by private firms under lease from the Defense Department's Military Sea Transport Service (MSTS).

In addition, about 100 ships have been withdrawn from the reserve fleet of 2,536 ships, to carry war cargoes to Viet Nam. The reserve fleet is made up of World War II freighters laid up after the war ended. The cost of taking them of mothballs is about $400,000 per ship.

* * * *

AS THE war in Viet Nam began escalting, U.S. policy makers assumed foreign flag ships could be chartered to help meet the increased shipping needs. The assumption was false.

At one point last summer, 50,000 tons of war materiel had piled up in West Coast ports. MSTS sought to charter a Mexican ship only to discover the Mexican Government had forbidden all ships under its registry to sail Vietnamese waters.

MSTS then turned to two Greek-owned ships, offering a Viet Nam. Three Japanese lines also declined to accept charters to carry materiel and food to Viet Nam.

In mid-1964, President Johnson directed the secretary of commerce, then Luther Hodges, to establish a Maritime Advisory Committee (MAC) to consider means of "strengthening the trade, national defense, manpower and labor relations programs of the maritime industry."

At its first meeting, MAC, whose members were drawn from unions, management, the government and the public, concluded that it could not reach any conclusions until it had some guidelines indicating national requirements and how much money the federal government wanted to spend on the industry. No guidelines were forthcoming and MAC lapsed into semi-dormancy.

When John T. Connor replaced Hodges in 1965, he set up another committee, known as the Interagency Task Force (ITF), headed by Alan S. Boyd, Undersecretary of Commerce for Transportation, and Nicholas Johnson head of the Maritime Administration.

Members of the committee were drawn from the Departments of State, Defense, Agriculture, Labor and Commerce, plus the Bureau of the Budget, the Martime Administration and the Maritime Commission.

* * * *

AMONG ITF recommendations:

Abandonment by the United States of the passenger liner trade as unprofitable.

A total U.S. Flag fleet, active and reserve, of no more than 1,000 ships—500 tankers, 400 general cargo ships and 100 bulk cargo ships.

The closing of all U.S. shipyards except those determined by the Secretaries of Defense and Commerce to be essential to emergency defense and civilian needs.

Ship operators be permitted to buy foreign-made ships and register them under the U.S. Flag, something they cannot now do.

A reduction in ship operating and construction subsidies from the present $425 million to $394 million annually over the next five years.

These recommendations set off an uproar in the industry. But ITF did not stop there.

It recommended that the nine sea going unions merge into two or three. ITF noted that the federal government through subsidies pays about 72 per cent of seamen's wages.

IN ISSUING its recommendations ITF accomplished one thing: it united the unions, ship operators and ship builders in opposition.

Wilson Going to Moscow to Grope for Agreement

By ARTHUR L. GAVSHON

LONDON (AP)—Prime Minister Harold Wilson flies to Moscow Monday for several rounds of diplomatic shadow-boxing on world problems but with little likelihood of reaching firm decisions or agreements with the Russians on matters of immediate consequence, such as peace in Viet Nam.

But he and his hosts may lay a groundwork for some future progress, and the atmosphere may be relaxed by the realization that neither side is in position, politically, to do much right now.

* * * *

WILSON CONSIDERS his encounters with Alexei Kosygin and his colleagues will produce few firm decisions or agreements because:

—Premier Kosygin, with his fellow managers, faces the 23rd Congress of the Soviet Communist Party March 29. The big theme will be the dispute with Red China. Nobody in the west expects Kosygin's men to commit themselves to a policy of accommodation over Viet Nam in advance of the congress. They already have been accused by Peking of betraying the Communist cause. Until the outcome of the congress is known, particularly the way the Chinese make out, Moscow's decision-making is likely to remain frozen.

HAROLD WILSON

—Wilson faces a big test. A British general election is deemed likely by the end of April. The Russians would not want to enter any major deals with the leader of a government facing a ballot.

It may then seem on the surface that Wilson's four-day official visit will prove little more than a fine display of little footwork.

But Wilson rarely wastes time or opportunity. He sees the journey as a chance to keep alive the sometimes faltering dialogue between East and West.

* * * *

His journey will be his 12th to Moscow since 1947.

In that year he spent many weary months negotiating Britain's first postwar trade pact with the Soviets.

At a Kremlin party celebrating the pact Wilson and Anastas I. Mikoyan joined in signing the Russian version of that trade pact to a rendition of the Russian song "Dark Eyes."

Today, nearly 20 years later, aides are wondering what tune Wilson will sing in Moscow.

German Beatles Shear Mop-Tops

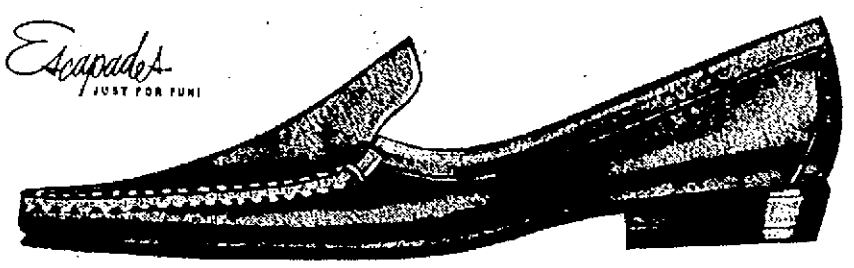

HOLZHAUSEN, Germany (AP)—Four rock 'n' roll musicians were trimmed while twanging their guitars and beating a drum for 200 hours. A barber clipped their long tresses during the 149th hour of the beat-music marathon. "Beatle haircuts are a thing of the past, we wanted to create a new style," said Erich Kirchoff, 22, manager of the German Beats.

Three Unsolved Killings Haunt Town in Maine

By JACK HUBBARD

FORT FAIRFIELD, Maine (UPI) — Violence has sown suspicion and fear in this potato-growing community of 6,000 near the Canadian border.

Three violent deaths in 14 months has bred a tension that belies the town's friendly face.

Who among them is the killer or killers?

That question haunts—and horrifies—the people of the town.

The day after Christmas, 1964, a 14-year-old newsboy, Cyrus Everett, vanished while walking his route. His body was found nearly 4½ months later beneath a log in a swamp.

While Cyrus still was missing, Donna L. Mauch, 24, a waitress at a local hotel, was bludgeoned to death. She was killed last Feb. 24.

No one ever has been arrested in connection with their deaths. Cyrus' death officially was declared accidental until a private detective was called in and said it was homicide. Officials reopened the case and it is still under investigation.

• • • •

THE TOWN'S third killing occurred eight days ago when housewife Rose Jane Goodwin, 31, was beaten to death with a mop handle. Her husband was arrested as a suspect.

The violence not only has made this town jittery but has turned it into a gossip mill. Rumors flow like the waters of the nearby St. John River. Most of the rumors concern Cyrus Everett's death.

His mother, Mrs. Mary Everett, said, "There have been enough rumors to write a book." Town Councilman John Beckwith said, "They have been awful and vicious. I don't think anybody knows how they started."

A clergyman commented, "Many of the people spreading them were looking for quick conclusions, and many of the rumors were on a moronic level."

A town official who asked to remain anonymous said, "There have been a lot of rumors. The police are trying to do their job, but they need the public cooperation. I think there are people in this town who do know some things but won't say anything because they don't want to get involved."

An officer investigating Cyrus' death said "no matter who the suspect is, it won't please some of those people. If we arrested someone tomorrow, somebody would be disappointed."

• • • •

THE CASE WOULD have been dropped, according to Town Councilman Wilfred Cassidy, if it weren't for Otis N. La Bree. La Bree, a one-time policeman, was called in by the Town Council to investigate the boy's death. La Bree termed it a homicide.

La Bree's report blew the case open again. He contended that some person, or persons, placed the boy's body under the log.

With the welter of rumors, doors that never used to be locked are now tightly secured. Parents know where their children are—and who is with them.

A service station attendant said, "My father keeps my kids when I'm away. I wouldn't trust anybody else."

The town has become the butt of cruel remarks. One man said, "They call us 'sin-town' in (nearby) Presque Isle."

John McKenney, Cyrus Everett's eighth grade teacher, said that while taking advanced courses at a state teachers college at Presque Island, "people quizzed me every morning, asking 'what's going to happen over there next'?"

A hotel clerk said that during a recent visit across the border to New Brunswick a man asked him "how our new indoor sport was doing."

"I asked, what was that?," the clerk said. "The guy said 'murder.'"

SUE GALLIE . . . Miss Australia

FIRST IBC ENTRANT

Australia Beauty Is Honey-blonde

Twenty-one-year-old Sue Gallie, "Miss Australia 1966," is the first international entrant in the 1966 International Beauty Pageant, according to the Pageant's General Director, Wayne Dallard.

The Pageant, which also selects "Miss United States" from among American contestants, will be held Aug. 3-14 at the Long Beach Municipal Auditorium.

Miss Gallie, a slim, honey blonde, 5' 8", was chosen, following a series of National and State contests throughout Australia, sponsored by the Australian Cerebral Palsy Assn., Inc.

As "Miss Australia 1966," Sue will compete with contestants from nearly 50 states and 50 countries for the highly-coveted title of "International Beauty Queen," a cash prize of $10,000, plus a trophy and a number of other awards.

Rep. Tunney Asks Medical Exam for Import Labor

WASHINGTON (AP) — Rep. John V. Tunney, D-Calif., urged the Justice Department to enforce the immigration law requiring medical examination of temporary foreign labor entering this country.

In a letter to Attorney General Nicholas Katzenbach, Tunney said:

"It is my understanding that the Justice Department is required to enforce under the present immigration law tests the administration of complete medical examinations conducted by the public health service to insure that temporary foreign labor admitted to the country do not carry a dangerous contagious disease."

He told the attorney general that 18,400 foreign workers were admitted to California last year without disease tests.

MEN AND MACHINES

Will the Wedding Last?

By JOHN BARBOUR

Someone jams on the brakes on a foggy Los Angeles freeway, and 100 cars pile up behind, like a nightmare in a hall of mirrors.

The computer in a bank breaks down, and $3 billion in accounts are locked in its magnetic memory. For 24 hours, even it can't say how much money you have left.

A circuit breaker fails, and most of the northeastern United States is plunged into powerless darkness, city by city, an assembly line of calamity. Dishwashers, refrigerators, the whole electric universe dies out. The most modern of worlds becomes primitive again.

And a few lonely voices warn that things have become so complex an entire city can be reduced to chaos by the failure of a handful of individuals, or a single, basic source of power.

"Ever since a man knocked two stones together to make a tool, he's been altering his environment," explained anthropologist Loren Eiseley. "But never before has he had such giant powers to do good or evil—nor has he ever been less able to predict the good or evil of his efforts."

Many social scientists feel humans are rushing pell-mell into the brave new world without considering the cost to the individual—and whether he really wants it.

EVEN THE greatest proponents of automation point out we're in a period of adjustment—a time when our society is showing some of the cracks, some of the brittleness when man and machine got out of balance.

The U.S. Mint found that out. Short on silver, it made a new quarter in a sort of copper sandwich.

All of a sudden it was bargain day at the vending machines. When a new quarter was dropped in the slot, part of the machine recognized its value, registered credit for 25 cents. But another part of the machine disagreed, returned the quarter, but failed to erase the 25 cents credit.

By the time vending machine operators caught up with this two-bit argument, reports were coming in from all over of bargain-priced cigarettes, and other items, 25 cents off.

ADULTS DON'T have a monopoly on sensing something fragile or uncertain in their new world. Half of the U.S. population now is 25 and under, it's their world, too.

One of the popular folk songs on U.S. campuses tells of box-like houses on a hillside and the people who live in them, "and they're all made of ticky-tack, and they all look just the same."

The social fragility is often grim. One minister in New York's East Harlem pointed to the frustration of his poverty-ridden parishioners who see a glittering life advertised on television, but who cannot win the economic or educational means of attaining it. And that frustration leads to violence, the minister said.

IF THIS WEDDING between man and machine has increased some social differences and tensions, it has also provided some common problems.

A thousand smokestacks and thousands of automobiles spread a haze over a city, dim out a skyline, hide the stars, make the eyes smart.

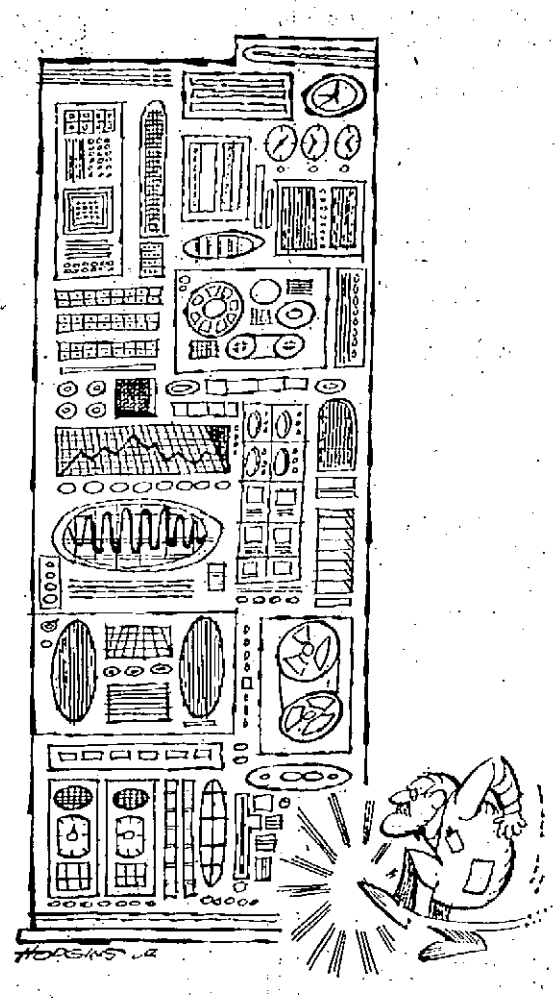

The leftovers of living and industry pour into rivers and lakes and oceans. Fish die. Beaches are closed. And nowhere is immune, not even beautiful, mountainous Lake Tahoe on the wilderness of the California-Nevada border.

When the power went out Nov. 9 and froze 80,000 square miles of the populous northeast, New Yorkers got a common, if eerie view, of their city. In those first moments of darkness, people looked around at the dead buildings, like a fossil world, and wondered at the fact that a 70-story tall building could become useless because its elevators stopped running, and its lights went out.

FEW PLACES are immune from this. Shortly after the northeast blackout, power failures hit parts of Texas. Of some 3,000 separate power companies in the United States, more than three-quarters of them are interconnected, operate in parallel, share the load.

When weak spots show up, the power industry looks for solutions. So do power users. Some neighborhoods and businesses installed generating plants of their own, gasoline driven, gas turbine driven. One company advertises "total energy" for a building or a neighborhood, a small gas turbine plant to produce heat, light, hot water, steam, air conditioning.

The computer really works quite well. It's just that when it fails, its errors are enormous. A rainstorm shut down a computer complex in New Jersey and blacked out some 800 stock brokers on the going prices of nearly 3,000 issues. In Great Britain recently, a computer overestimated how much beer a brewery should produce for the holidays, and two million pints of beer had to be thrown out unsold.

In the New York financial community, most brokers and banks share computers when one breaks down. And now everyone wants a computer. The Democratic National Committee—running the risk of being called a political machine—hired a computer to help congressmen reach their constituents. The machine can address letters personally to more than six million persons, and officials want to equip it with everyone who can vote. The computer also notes the job, nationality, sex, age and nearly 140 other items on each of its electronic prisoners.

EVEN SCIENTISTS have mixed emotions on the role of computers in research. One poll of nearly 200 scientists showed that most felt the computer had a place in scientific study. But some felt that it tempted researchers to accept numerical answers to problems instead of looking beyond the numbers of underlying scientific laws.

On the fringes of the machine revolution are some hardware items that seem to be invention for invention's sake. But they still sell—electric toothbrushes, electric shoe buffers, cigarette lighters with invisible flame, electric card shufflers, anything for the modern man who has everything.

Maybe it would be wise to give him a survival kit—should the machines of his world fail; a piece of flint, two stones to chip into tools, some shells to eat with, a few pieces of rawhide strands to make bows for his arrows.

THE PRESSURES of population on modern day society are already beginning to tell—not alone in India or China where food is the problem, but in the United States where just getting to work is a problem.

Some 35,000 transit workers in New York City struck, tying up the city's subways and buses. The result was chaos. Every morning a surge of cars, bicycles, anything with wheels, headed into Manhattan. Every night they turned for home again. The city's working population has become enormous that it is helpless without its transit system.

Dr. Simon Ramo, West Coast scientific planner, thinks that by the year 2,000, the partnership of man and electronic machine will be taken for granted. But in the final decades of this century man is faced "with a technological straitjacket of our own making." Man needs, Ramo says, the find ways of making technology work for him and not to have him working for technology.

An anthropologist once said: "Beware of the small invention—the baby bottle that takes the child away from his mother's breast, or the baby carriage that denies him the warmth of being held."

The brain of man, says Eiseley, has not changed in the last 50 to 100,000 years. The brain of that earlier time was as capable of mastering everything we have mastered. Man simply had not had time to discover. But he had a brain which could.".

Only that brain which has carried him through ages of stone and iron can firm up his fragile relationship with machines and the power they have brought him in the ages of the atom and space.

Governmental Offices to Close on Tuesday

Most governmental offices—federal, state, county and city—will be closed Tuesday in recognition of Washington's Birthday.

Banks, public libraries and schools also will observe the holiday. Most other businesses will follow the usual work-day schedule.

There will be no regular mail deliveries, but city rubbish and garbage trucks will make their regular rounds.

Long Beach City Council will meet Wednesday instead of Tuesday.

MEN AND MACHINES

Will the Wedding Last?

By JOHN BARBOUR

Someone jams on the brakes on a foggy Los Angeles freeway, and 100 cars pile up behind, like a nightmare in a hall of mirrors.

The computer in a bank breaks down, and $3 billion in accounts are locked in its magnetic memory. For 24 hours, even it can't say how much money you have left.

A circuit breaker fails, and most of the northeastern United States is plunged into powerless darkness, city by city, an assembly line of calamity. Dishwashers, refrigerators, the whole electric universe dies out. The most modern of worlds becomes primitive again.

And a few lonely voices warn that things have become so complex an entire city can be reduced to chaos by the failure of a handful of individuals, or a single, basic source of power.

"Ever since a man knocked two stones together to make a tool, he's been altering his environment," explained anthropologist Loren Eiseley. "But never before has he had such giant powers to do good or evil—nor has he ever been less able to predict the good or evil of his efforts."

Many social scientists feel humans are rushing pell-mell into the brave new world without considering the cost to the individual—and whether he really wants it.

EVEN THE greatest proponents of automation point out we're in a period of adjustment—a time when our society is showing some of the cracks, some of the brittleness when man and machine got out of balance.

The U.S. Mint found that out. Short on silver, it made a new quarter in a sort of copper sandwich.

All of a sudden it was bargain day at the vending machines. When a new quarter was dropped in the slot, part of the machine recognized its value, registered credit for 25 cents. But another part of the machine disagreed, returned the quarter, but failed to erase the 25 cents credit.

By the time vending machine operators caught up with this two-bit argument, reports were coming in from all over of bargain-priced cigarettes, and other items, 25 cents off.

ADULTS DON'T have a monopoly on sensing something fragile or uncertain in their new world. Half of the U.S. population now is 25 and under, it's their world, too.

One of the popular folk songs on U.S. campuses tells of box-like houses on a hillside and the people who live in them, "and they're all made of ticky-tack, and they all look just the same."

The social fragility is often grim. One minister in New York's East Harlem pointed to the frustration of his poverty-ridden parishioners who see a glittering life advertised on television, but who cannot win the economic or educational means of attaining it. And that frustration leads to violence, the minister said.

IF THIS WEDDING between man and machine has increased some social differences and tensions, it has also provided some common problems.

A thousand smokestacks and thousands of automobiles spread a haze over a city, dim out a skyline, hide the stars, make the eyes smart.

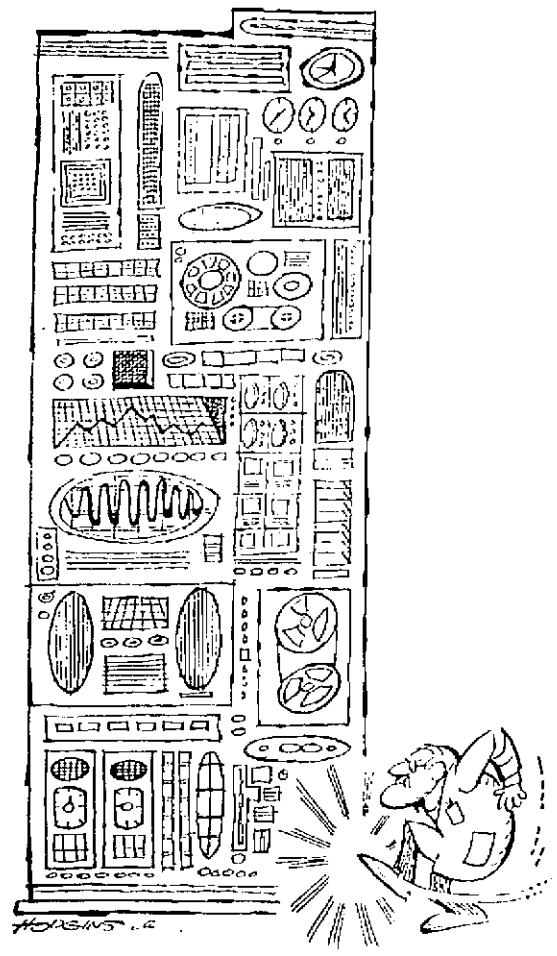

The leftovers of living and industry pour into rivers and lakes and oceans. Fish die. Beaches are closed. And nowhere is immune, not even beautiful, mountainous Lake Tahoe on the wilderness of the California-Nevada border.

When the power went out Nov. 9 and froze 80,000 square miles of the populous northeast, New Yorkers got a common, if eerie view, of their city. In those first moments of darkness, people looked around at the dead buildings, like a fossil world, and wondered at the fact that a 70-story tall building could become useless because its elevators stopped running, and its lights went out.

FEW PLACES are immune from this. Shortly after the northeast blackout, power failures hit parts of Texas. Of some 3,000 separate power companies in the United States, more than three-quarters of them are interconnected, operate in parallel, share the load.

When weak spots show up, the power industry looks for solutions. So do power users. Some neighborhoods and businesses installed generating plants of their own, gasoline driven, gas turbine driven. One company advertises "total energy" for a building or a neighborhood, a small gas turbine plant to produce heat, light, hot water, steam, air conditioning.

The computer really works quite well. It's just that when it fails, its errors are enormous. A rainstorm shut down a computer complex in New Jersey and blacked out some 800 stock brokers on the going prices of nearly 3,000 issues. In Great Britain recently, a computer overestimated how much beer a brewery should produce for the holidays, and two million pints of beer had to be thrown out unsold.

In the New York financial community, most brokers and banks share computers when one breaks down. And now everyone wants a computer. The Democratic National Committee—running the risk of being called a political machine—hired a computer to help congressmen reach their constituents. The machine can address letters personally to more than six million persons, and officials want to equip it with everyone who can vote. The computer also notes the job, nationality, sex, age and nearly 140 other items on each of its electronic prisoners.

EVEN SCIENTISTS have mixed emotions on the role of computers in research. One poll of nearly 200 scientists showed that most felt the computer had a place in scientific study. But some felt that it tempted researchers to accept numerical answers to problems instead of looking beyond the numbers of underlying scientific laws.

Maybe it would be wise to give him a survival kit—should the machines of his world fail; a piece of flint, two stones to chip into tools, some shells to eat with, a few pieces of rawhide strands to make bows for his arrows.

Wilson Going to Moscow to Grope for Agreement

By ARTHUR L. GAVSHON

LONDON (AP)—Prime Minister Harold Wilson flies to Moscow Monday for several rounds of diplomatic shadow boxing on world problems but with little likelihood of reaching firm decisions or agreements with the Russians on matters of immediate consequence, such as peace in Viet Nam.

But he and his hosts may lay a groundwork for some future progress, and the atmosphere may be relaxed by the realization that neither side is in position, politically, to do much right now.

* * * *

WILSON CONSIDERS his encounters with Alexei Kosygin and his colleagues will produce few firm decisions or agreements because:

—Premier Kosygin, with his fellow managers, faces the 23rd Congress of the Soviet Communist Party March 29. The big theme will be the dispute with Red China. Nobody in the west expects Kosygin's men to commit themselves to a policy of accommodation over Viet Nam in advance of the congress. They already have been accused by Peking of betraying the Communist cause. Until the outcome of the congress is known, particularly the way the Chinese make out, Moscow's decision-making is likely to remain frozen.

HAROLD WILSON

—Wilson faces a big test. A British general election is deemed likely by the end of April. The Russians would not want to enter any major deals with the leader of a government facing a ballot.

It may then seem on the surface that Wilson's four-day official visit will prove little more than a fine display of little footwork.

But Wilson rarely wastes time or opportunity. He sees the journey as a chance to keep alive the sometimes faltering dialogue between East and West.

* * * *

His journey will be his 12th to Moscow since 1947.

In that year he spent many weary months negotiating Britain's first postwar trade pact with the Soviets.

At a Kremlin party celebrating the pact, Wilson and Anastas I. Mikoyan joined in signing the Russian version of that trade pact to a rendition of the Russian song "Dark Eyes."

Today, nearly 20 years later, aides are wondering what tune Wilson will sing in Moscow.

German Beatles Shear Mop-Tops

HOLZHAUSEN, Germany (AP)—Four rock 'n' roll musicians were trimmed while twanging their guitars and beating a drum for 200 hours. A barber clipped their long tresses during the 149th hour of the beat-music marathon. "Beatle haircuts are a thing of the past, we wanted to create a new style," said Erich Kirchoff, 22, manager of the German Beats.

—Wilson faces a big test. A British general election is deemed likely by the end of April. The Russians would not want to enter any major deals with the leader of a government facing a ballot.

It may then seem on the surface that Wilson's four-day official visit will prove little more than a fine display of little footwork.

But Wilson rarely wastes time or opportunity. He sees the journey as a chance to keep alive the sometimes faltering dialogue between East and West.

* * * *

A FREQUENT Moscow visitor, Wilson prides himself on getting along with Russians. His journey will be his 12th to Moscow since 1947.

In that year he spent many weary months negotiating Britain's first postwar trade pact with the Soviets.

At a Kremlin party celebrating the pact Wilson and Anastas I. Mikoyan joined in signing the Russian version of that trade pact to a rendition of the Russian song "Dark Eyes."

Today, nearly 20 years later, aides are wondering what tune Wilson will sing in Moscow.

German Beatles Shear Mop-Tops

HOLZHAUSEN, Germany (AP)—Four rock 'n' roll musicians were trimmed while twanging their guitars and beating a drum for 200 hours. A barber clipped their long tresses during the 149th hour of the beat-music marathon. "Beatle haircuts are a thing of the past, we wanted to create a new style," said Erich Kirchoff, 22, manager of the German Beats.

Tax-Exempt Foundations Probe Asked

By GEORGE J. MARDER

WASHINGTON (UPI) — President Johnson has called upon congress to get tough with private tax-exempt foundations which have little to do with charity.

The Treasury Department and the House Small Business Committee have found that some foundations use the tax exemptions for financial empire building rather than benevolence.

The President wants congress to end the exemptions for those foundations which practice philanthropy only as a sideline.

The Treasury Department has drafted six major changes in the tax laws affecting private foundations which, a survey several years ago showed, had assets worth $16 billion and were still growing.

* * * *

THE CHANGES are designed to end abuse of the tax laws but still leave the benefits available for true philanthropists and foundations dedicated to public, rather than private, welfare.

A gift to a foundation offers a double tax benefit. The giver can deduct his contribution from his taxable income and the receiver—the foundation—pays no taxes on its operations even though they may be very profitable. In many cases, foundation operations are identical with a private enterprise and, in fact, compete with private enterprise.

The treasury found that a majority of the private foundations were free of abuse but that "serious faults" were sufficiently widespread to require major overhaul of the tax-exemption provisos.

* * * *

HERE ARE the basic changes recommended:

Prohibit financial dealings between a foundation and its contributors, officers, directors or trustees. This is designed to end what is known as "self-dealing." Self-dealing occurs when the foundation organizers take literally the motto that charity begins at home and are charitable mostly to themselves by diverting the foundation assets for private advantage.

Insist that the foundations give for charity shortly after they receive, instead of socking away contributions to pile up year after year.

Limit to 20% ownership by a foundation in a private business. Rep. Wright Patman, D-Texas, chairman of the House Small Business Committee, believes that is too high: that many businesses can be controlled with much less a concentration of power. He urges that the figure be set at closer to 5%.

Divorce "family" control of corporation assets turned over to foundations so that the tax-exemption cannot be used as a dodge to avoid gift or estate taxes. This would be done by disallowing the charitable deduction on gifts of family corporation stock until the foundation sells the stock or turns it over to a public charity or until the family loses control of it.

Outlaw speculation, risk loans and investment borrowing by foundations. Some private foundations were found to be financing security purchases on a heads-you-win-tails-I-lose basis. The borrower could be the only gainer and the charity the only loser.

Weaken the ties which bind the foundation to its organizers. After a quarter of a century, the original donors or related parties could not make up more than 25% of the foundation's governing body.

* * * *

CHANCES FOR early house action are uncertain. The House Ways and Means Committee, where all tax laws originate, is tied up with President Johnson's proposed tax changes to combat inflation. After that, it takes up a proposed overhaul of the unemployment compensation system.

For the past few months, the committee has been assembling comments from private foundations on the proposed tax changes. Some congressional sources say the committee may be ready for hearings on the legislation this spring.

2,400-Pound Killer Smart, Gentle

Shamu Bites No One in Two

SHAMU SHOWS TONGUE AND 'BETTER-TO-BITE-YOU' TEETH

By TERRY SATTORIA

Take 2,400 pounds of awesome and powerful muscle and blubber, add 23 pairs of three-inch teeth, stuff it all into 14 feet of piebald rubbery hide, dump the whole thing into a tankful of water —and you have San Diego Sea World's star attraction.

It's Shamu the killer whale — one of the world's most dangerous animals.

But Shamu hasn't turned out to be the killer she's supposed to be—at least so far.

The reputation of the killer whale is based partly on fact and partly on fancy, and it all reflects nothing but ruthless ferocity.

The stories about their attacks on everything from man to walruses are legendary. And, with their "better-to-bite-you-with" teeth arrangement, they stand as the unchecked and unchallenged kings of the sea.

Most terrible predators, these vicious and fearsome creatures reputedly have snatched full-grown walruses off floes and devoured them in one or two mouthfuls.

Although considerable knowledge has been collected about these mysterious sea mammals—their feeding habits, anatomy, swimming speeds and other physical characteristics — almost nothing is known about their behavior and intelligence.

It was with some trepidation that Sea World's animal trainer Kent Burgess, agreed to undertake the task of training an animal about which nothing was known other than the fact that these whales are thought to be among the most intelligent animals in the world—and that was speculation.

Sea World acquired Shamu, a cow calf about 4 years old, three months ago after she was captured in a net from a purse seiner off the coast of Oregon.

She was flown to San Diego and thence to her home in an 85,000-gallon tank on the confined grounds of Sea World at Mission Beach.

When the big day came, after Shamu had become accustomed to her tank, it was with resolute bravery that Burgess, an unassuming 37-year-old psychologist from Arkansas, crawled into the tank with her.

The result—she didn't offer to take even one bite of him.

With that cautious beginning, Shamu has proved that she learns at a fantastic rate. In the month she has been in training, she has learned to jump at varying heights out of the water, to stick out her tongue, and to retrieve a barbell.

In fact she is learning so fast that Sea World is building a set of grandstands around her training tank for spectators.

Burgess feels that her potential learning capacity is unlimited.

"She can be taught any trick that is feasible under the circumstances," he says.

Killer whales, Burgess feels, probably are the brightest animals in the ocean—even smarter than the renowned porpoise which is, in fact, a small whale—both belong to the same zoological order, cetacea.

Shamu never has shown any propensity to be anything but gentle. After a few minutes watching her go through her paces under the able guidance of Burgess, one is persuaded that she is as docile as a puppy.

"I was a little cautious," Burgess says of that first experience with Shamu in the tank. "It was rather like playing with an elephant in a 12-foot walled stall—she gets a little too pushy for real comfort."

The big, lovable, killer of the oceans has given no indication at this point that she will ever be anything

FERVENT indeed was the tone of the thank-you note which Dianne Martin received after she sent a couple of paperback books to her brother in Viet Nam. They not only provided some reading but saved his life.

Marine PFC Edwart T. Martin, 18, son of Mr. and Mrs. Spears Martin who operate the Heartwell Park golf course coffee shop, was on a routine patrol out of the Danang base in Viet when a sniper's bullet knocked him down.

He got up unhurt. The bullet had struck the two books his sister had sent him and which he had in his pocket over his heart. The bullet went through the books but didn't penetrate his skin.

The books, sent to Viet Nam just a week before the incident by Dianne, were authored by John D. McDonald, and one of them was titled "The Death Trap."

His story provides another good reason for sending reading material to our men in Viet.

AMERICANS can be proud over those public Senate committee hearings on the Viet Nam situation. When I wrote a spoof the other day illustrating the "do but don't" angles of some of the testimony, I certainly didn't mean it to be an overall evaluation of the hearings, as a reader or two seem to think. I feel it's great we've got the courage to air the ins and outs of this difficult affair that troubles so many people.

Star of the event so far, it seems to me, was Sec. of State Dean Rusk. I personally thought he was magnificent and he did a lot to straighten out thinking on this issue.

He put it up to the Senators and the country when he declared for a Congressional vote on whether to support the administration policy on Viet Nam.

Such a vote should go far in dispelling doubts in this country and abroad. It might not be a bad idea for citizens to inform their senators and congressmen on how they feel about it. Senators can be addressed at the Senate Office Building and Congressmen at the House Office Building, Washington, D.C.

AFTER a long controversy the cross-town (Pacific Coast) freeway routing through Long Beach apparently has been settled, but don't expect to be using that artery next year or anything like that.

Best information is that it will be six or seven years before construction starts, and possibly nine or 10 years before the freeway will be in use. A good many of the people who have been healed up about this may not be around.

But certainly the sooner the job is done the better for the community and it would be good policy to press for action as fast as possible. Had there not been the long delay in getting to the routing decision, caused in part by the controversy, we might even already have the eastern section which would have eliminated some of the serious traffic bottlenecks out there.

ANOTHER interesting example of what has happened to land values around here was related the other day by the head of a construction firm of the area.

He said that a few years ago his firm obtained a 10-acre parcel in Orange County to excavate for construction material. The purchase price was $1000 an acre.

The material is out now and they're considering disposing of the property. They have received an offer of $28,000 an acre for the hole.

OFFSHORE EXPLORATION CONFERENCE

Tell Sea Secrets, Treasure

By JACK BALDWIN

An estimated 50,000 knowledge-hungry persons are expected to attend the three-day Offshore Exploration Conference beginning Tuesday in Long Beach to see and hear the nation's top technical talent describe techniques for wresting from the sea its secrets and treasures.

More than 40 technical papers will be delivered by experts in oceanography, electronics, subsea systems, fixed and floating platforms and management, said M. J. Richardson, conference coordination chairman.

To be seen will be closed circuit telecasts of undersea equipment and men working on the bottom, submarines and mechanical manipulators, subsea wellheads and remote controlled valves. Motion pictures will show submarine manipulators at work, diving bell operations, offshore platform operations, and deep diving experiments, according to Richardson.

* * * *

ASTRONAUT-AQUANAUT M. Scott Carpenter, who spent 30 days beneath the surface of the ocean in the Navy's Sealab II Project, will report on the Navy's five-year Man-in-the-Sea program at 10 a.m., Thursday.

Events are scheduled for the Lafayette Hotel, the Long Beach Arena and along the waterfront.

Among the new products to be demonstrated is a flying saucer-shaped all enclosed glass lifeboat developed by Life Spheres Co. of Long Beach. The survival capsule will be on display in the exhibit hall, according to Milton Brucker, the developer.

Submarines to be demonstrated include one and two-man subs. Diving bells to be seen include conventional, single-sphere, and double sphere submersibles, the conference official claims.

* * * *

RICHARDSON SAID the conference, the nation's first, includes scientific and technical exhibits and demonstrations in the 68,000 square foot Long Beach Arena and from a crane barge moored nearby and represents the most complete collection of ocean surface and subsea exploration equipment ever assembled at one place.

On display will be large scale models of offshore drilling platforms including a "Monopod" — a single-pillar platform and a model platform of the type under construction in San Diego for the National Science Foundation's "Project Mohole."

M. SCOTT CARPENTER
To Speak Here

Demonstrations and exhibits will be open from 4:30 to 10 p.m. opening day; from 9:30 a.m. to 11:30 a.m. and from 4:30 p.m. until 10 p.m. on Feb. 25, the sponsors said.

"The technical papers to be given by the scientists, engineers and technicians from the petroleum, aerospace and oceanographic industries will accent the interchangeable applications of the technologies of the three fields in subsurface exploration for petroleum and solid materials," Richardson stated.

* * * *

RAY WALKER, chairman of the Technical Papers Committee, said:

"A number of the papers to be delivered during the conference are certain to attract worldwide acclaim and recognition."

Walker cited as an example a paper to be given by L. J. Danforth of Northrop Nortronics of Anaheim on "The Feasibility of an Offshore Deep Submergence Underwater Oil Drilling Platform." Danforth's treatise explores the possibilities of an ocean bottom capsule capable of housing 50 oil workers operating oil drilling equipment within the submerged chamber.

* * * *

AN ESTIMATED 4,500 students from 50 area high schools are expected to attend one or more of the sessions.

Attendance at sessions during which the various papers will be delivered will be limited to members of the industry who have registered for the conference at the Lafayette Hotel Tuesday. Registration fee is $20.

Charge for admittance to the exhibits on display in the Arena is $1.50 for adults and 75 cents for children, the coordination chairman said.

Among the subjects to be covered by those presenting technical papers are "Exploration for and Production og Solid Minerals from the Offshore Area," "Determination of Design, Wind, Wave and Current Conditions for Offshore Structures," "Ship Positioning with Acoustic Distance Measuring Equipment," "Nuclear Power Sources for Underwater Applications," "Practical Deep Diving the Next Step," "Design and Development of a Submersible Work Chamber," "Motions of Ship-Shaped Vessels in Surface - Wave Environments," and "Market Analysis on Under Water Completions."

JACK RUSSELL, president of THUMS Long Beach Co., field contractor for the development of the offshore East Wilmington oil field, announced that oilmen attending the conference will be given the opportunity to tour the THUMS facilities.

Keynote speaker at the luncheon opening day will be A. C. Rubel, past chairman of the board of directors of Union Oil Co., who will talk on the tidelands development in California.

Wednesday's luncheon keynote speaker is A. W. Rose, president of Byron Jackson, Division of Borg Warner Corp., who will examine offshore exploration from the manufacturer's viewpoint.

On Thursday Dr. N. F. Parker, executive vice-president-operations, North American Aviation, Inc., will deliver the noontime keynote address discussing the aerospace industry's capabilities for offshore exploration activities.

Blood Drive at State Monday

A blood donation drive will be conducted at Long Beach State College Monday designed to replenish American Red Cross supplies being used in the Viet Nam conflict.

The Red Cross bloodmobile will be stationed at the Soroptimist House on campus between 11 a.m. and 3 p.m.

Diana Mandic is coordinating chairman for the drive. Other committee members are Bill Burnham, Ted Sempliner, Barbara Madsen and Anita Henry.

United Crusade Over the Top

Long Beach area United Crusade campaign has passed 102% of its goal, with a final total of $1,186,341, produced by the five-city effort and the area's share of the county United Crusade pool.

Making his final production report, area campaign chairman Malcolm Epley said that the results assure a full distribution to the 33 United Way agencies and the American Red Cross which receive financing from this key drive.

Epley expressed appreciation to the tens of thousands of contributors and the campaign workers who brought success to the months-long effort covering Long Beach, Signal Hill, Lakewood, Paramount and Bellflower.

The chairman said that four major area-wide solicitation divisions boomed over 100%. These were military units, 137.2; public employes, 114.6; residential, 104, and business, 100.4. Others, all approaching goals, were commerce and industry, 91.8; schools, 87.1; advanced gifts and professional, 92.1.

HE NOTED among outstanding percentage-of-goal results in separate community campaigns:

Long Beach—Public employes, 130.5; schools, 101.8; residential, 103.7; business, 107.3.

Bellflower—Residential, 135.

Paramount—Big industry, 113.7; small industry, 133.8; public employes, 134; residential, 175.6; business 101.5.

Signal Hill—Big industry, 141.3; small industry, 104.8; professional, 121.6; residential, 102.8.

In the percentage-of-goal column, Signal Hill topped the five communities. Final standings with chairman, goal, production and percentage in that order:

Signal Hill (Fred Baxter), $9,014; $9,915; 110.

NOT ALLOCATED to any particular community was the big production from the combined federal campaign. This included post office, VA Hospital and other federal employes, whose contributions Epley noted were substantial this year.

Also under the combined federal campaign were the Navy, Coast Guard, shipyard and other military groups and installations. The military phase of the campaign produced $115,996, or 137.2 of goal of $84,492 for the Long Beach area United Crusade.

Adm. Carleton B. Jones of the Navy Base headed the military campaign countywide, and Capt. Chet Heffner handled the successful solicitation here. "Needless to say," remarked Epley, "this effort was a major factor in the happy result of our campaign and civilians of the area should be forever grateful for what the military people have done to help us finance our community services."

Further reviewing the campaign, Epley said especially gratifying was the success of the residential campaign

2,400-Pound Killer Smart, Gentle

Shamu Bites No One in Two

SHAMU SHOWS TONGUE AND 'BETTER-TO-BITE-YOU' TEETH

By TERRY SATTORIA

Take 2,400 pounds of awesome and powerful muscle and blubber, add 23 pairs of three-inch teeth, stuff it all into 14 feet of piebald rubbery hide, dump the whole thing into a tankful of water —and you have San Diego Sea World's star attraction.

It's Shamu the killer whale — one of the world's most dangerous animals.

But Shamu hasn't turned out to be the killer she's supposed to be—at least so far.

The reputation of the killer whale is based partly on fact and partly on fancy, and it all reflects nothing but ruthless ferocity.

The stories about their attacks on everything from man to walruses are legendary. And, with their "better-to-bite-you-with" teeth arrangement, they stand as the unchecked and unchallenged kings of the sea.

Tag Tax--for Prestige

From Our State Bureau

SACRAMENTO — A fee on a status symbol—personalized license plates—has become the most popular revenue proposal of the 1966 budget session.

Californians, unlike residents of some Eastern States, never had the option of paying a prestige-symbol tax on personalized license plates. But the idea is catching on.

In an election-year when legislators are trying to duck other revenue programs, 62 legislators have co-authored a bill making available personalized license plates in 1967.

For a fee of $10 plus an estimated special-handling charge of $4, an auto-ist at his option could order a personalized license plate.

The upshot could be some zany California plates in 1967. Only limitations are bad taste and duplication. Any combination of six letters and/or digits would be permitted.

"LYNDON," "123456," "SPY007," "BETTIE," "BATMAN" and "2N2AR4" are some of the possibilities. Names, addresses and phone numbers are expected to be the most frequent requests.

Request would be by application with second and third choices also listed in case the favored plate is snagged earlier by some one else.

The director of California Department of Motor Vehicles also would be authorized to use a special color for the personalized plates. The director would handle the thorny problem on duplicate requests for the same personalized plate.

Assemblyman Milton Marks, R-San Francisco, the author, is confident his measure has excellent chances for passage this session. State agencies dragged their heels when Marks first aired the proposal a few years ago, and a similar bill died in the Senate in 1965.

But this time, both California Department of Motor Vehicles and California Highway Patrol are expected to favor the bill.

And in a year in which the state faces a budget pinch, the Marks bill will raise an estimated $2 million to $10 million.

Economy-minded autoists needn't pay the special fees for the special plates. Repular plates also will be available at the old cost.

It is an optional tax—the kind least painful to lawmakers.

Long Beach Assemblymen Joseph Kennick and George Deukmejian are co-authors of the measure. Among the other co-authors: Vincent Thomas of San Pedro, Robert Badham of Newport Beach, Charles Chapel of Palos Verdes, William Dannemeyer of Fullerton and Joe Gonsalves of Norwalk.

The backlog of 62 co-authors virtually guarantees that California soon will be taxing a prestige symbol.

32nd Senate District 'Has Everything'

CANDIDATES telling voters that the new Los Angeles County 32nd State Senate District is a "sadly neglected" area could only feel their claim was sustained in the legal description of the district.

It said the 32nd shall be constituted of all that portion of the county not included in the other 14 districts.

It's not all that nondescript. Dudley Gray, one of several Democrats seeking the senatorial seat, has provided a rather romantic sketch of the area, "Gray's Anatomy of the 32nd Senatorial District."

BOB HOUSER

One of the most important in the state, he says, for the reason that it has jurisdiction over nearly all of the tidelands, including San Clemente and Santa Catalina Islands; it has both Long Beach and Los Angeles Harbors, "undoubtedly the greatest in the world"; it contains large refineries, large manufacturing plants and represents employment for thousands.

"It contains two junior colleges and, I am confident, in the near future at least one state college with an enrollment of approximately 20,000 to 25,000 students. Within its boundaries are the Long Beach, San Pedro and South Bay Municipal Courts, the Long Beach Superior Court and before this campaign is over the district will have a new superior court located in the South Bay judicial district."

THE DISTRICT is 71% Democratic in registration, covers all of the 68th Assembly District, most of the 67th, the southern and eastern sections of the 55th and part of downtown Long Beach (south of Broadway and west of Atlantic) which is part of the 44th.

Most interesting, says Gray, is the area's wide diversion of cultural backgrounds, incomes, religious beliefs and interests.

In the southwestern section, including Milareste and the highlands of San Pedro, he reports, incomes range from $25,000 a year upward. Opposed to this are 20,000 families with incomes of $4,000 or less.

In the south are cultures of Yugoslavians and Croatians, springing from the same general portion of Europe and yet persisting in old feuds and disputes. Estimates of the district's Mexican-American population range upward of 20,000, much of it in the Torrance, Gardena, Wilmington and San Pedro area. Club Social Gomez Palacio, one of the largest Mexican-American social clubs in the nation, is in San Pedro. A North Torrance area known variously as "Larona," "Old Town" or "Pueblo" is 100% Mexican-American and Mexican nationalist.

"It was originated,' says Gray, "for the purpose of importing cheap labor to work in the steel mills when Columbia Steel first began operation in Torrance."

A STILL LARGER culture, Afro-Americans, is located primarily in the district's northeast section but spotted also throughout Wilmington, San Pedro and Harbor City—a group representing about 18% of the district or, in numbers, an estimate up to 80,000.

A portion of the Gardena area, Lawndale and North Redondo represents substantially a settlement of immigrants from the Dust Bowl area and the states of Arkansas, Oklahoma, Texas, Kansas, parts of Nebraska, Iowa and Missouri. Gray says these people, "historically, at least, are in conflict with the Afro-American society."

The largest segment of Japanese-Americans in the world, outside of Japan and the Hawaiian Islands, is located primarily in Gardena and North Torrance. They have adapted to our society "undoubtedly more so than any other group of people" and are well accepted, highly respected and great assets to community, district and state.

Gray's anatomy concludes that upon reflection on the district's complexities, "it indeed represents a challenge to any politician to attempt to communicate with the various segments in a manner designed to carry a message of good representation to all concerned and at the same time to attempt to avoid upsetting or outraging another portion of the community."

160-Acre Water Limit Needs Study

A LITTLE NOTICED water dispute is gradually coming to a head in California and other western irrigation states and the results could have a profound effect on food prices.

The dispute revolves around the federal Reclamation Act of 1902 which established a 160-acre limitation on the size of farms that can receive water through water reclamation projects.

The purpose of the act was to prevent speculation. The 160-acre figure was taken from an 1865 Homestead act in which someone decided that 160 acres was the proper size of a farm.

AT STAKE in the present dispute is a major part of the state's $3.7 billion farm industry. Farmers in California are contending that a new interpretation of the act by Secretary of Interior Stewart Udall upsets the original intent of Congress, violates long-standing rules under which farmers have operated and in at least one instance attempts to destroy vested water rights in Imperial Valley.

Among the questions raised by the dispute are these:

—Can the government take water rights held privately for many years without condemnation and compensation?

—Is 160 acres the ideal size of a farm? Nationally the trend is toward large farms due to the costs of mechanization. There are only a few crops which can be grown profitably on 160 acres.

—Should farmers who have worked for more than 30 years under a written policy of the Interior Department be forced to sell their land because of a change in administrative policy? The DiGiorgio Corp., Kern County fruit growers, were ordered to sell 4,400 acres in 160-acre parcels. In the first year only three parcels were sold and the government had to extend the time for sale. Obviously prospective buyers were not interested in such small farms.

—Why was the administrative policy changed? Robert. W. Nelson, deputy assistant secretary of Interior, recently made the point that the average farm size has increased from 195 acres to 303 acres and then said: "Efficiency is triumphing over welfare values that have traditionally been ascribed to wide ownership of land. This is the result of economic forces operating in our economy."

WILL THE NEW UDALL policy save water for home and industrial use? Apparently not, since there is no attempt to withdraw land from irrigation. The policy is just to limit ownership.

—Finally how much will food prices rise if farmers are required to farm on costly and inefficient size farms?

The search for answers to the above questions is complex and difficult. No one should be allowed to unduly profit from federal projects. On the other hand an artificial social reform should not be allowed to upset the free economic forces which have made our farm industry so effective.

Clearly Congress needs to take a good look at the problem.

'Things Haven't Changed Much'

No Weapons Against This Foe

THE CALIFORNIA Asian flu epidemic points up the unpleasant fact that medical science has no weapons against many diseases.

Doctors give victims grandmotherly advice: Get plenty of bed rest, drink lots of liquids, take aspirin for pain. If the patient doesn't die of it, he will presently recover.

Fortunately this flu is thus far of the mild type. It has hit the state annually since 1957, perhaps causing a measure of immunity. If it were a more deadly virus, California would be in trouble.

In war-wracked 1918 flu spread throughout the world. An estimated 20 million died, including a half million Americans.

Doctors worked around the clock, achieving little. Funeral homes overflowed. Everyone lived in mortal terror. Millions almost died of the disease. Public meetings were canceled. Many persons wore masks and tried to avoid contact with others. Finally the epidemic spent itself. It has never recurred with such virulence.

But it could.

However, there is a gleam of hope. Medical scientists are working on a flu-prevention drug, an experimental compound called amantadine (Symmetrel). Extensive trials of the drug, one of them in this community, have been most heartening. In the future people may be spared the misery and danger of flu.

Some Bad Apples in Barrel--but Most Congressmen Honest and Able

WASHINGTON—Many Congressmen who get their names in this column operate on the shady side of Capitol Hill. This column tries to splash a little sunlight on them, which is the best disinfectant against corruption.

The readers occasionally need to be reminded, however, that the majority of congressment are honest. They work longer hours and give more dedicated service than do most of the people who elect them. They also probably adhere to higher standards than their critics do.

Private citizens, free to pursue their private ambitions, expect their elected representatives to put the public good ahead of personal welfare. It is heartening how many do.

Unfortunately, the everyday stories of congressional courage and integrity, lacking news punch, seldom make the headlines.

IT TOOK POLITICAL courage, for example, for Southerners to stand up and be counted in favor of the voting rights bill.

The evening before the vote, Rep. Hale Boggs, D-La., told a few friends he had decided to vote for the bill. His daughter, Cokie, walked over to her father and kissed him, saying she was proud of him.

"I'm not only going to vote for it," said Boggs, "I'm going to make a speech for it."

Next day, his colleague from Louisiana, Rep. Joe Waggonner Jr., leaped into the debate on the side of the segregationists, declaring that Louisiana was being maligned by this legislation and that there was little discrimination in his state.

Rep. Boggs, born in Mississippi, reared in Louisiana, rose to reply.

"I wish I could stand here as a man who loves his state, who has spent every year of his life in Louisiana since he was 5 years old, and say there has not been discrimination," he declared. "But unfortunately, it is not so. . . .

"I shall support this bill because I believe the fundamental right to vote must be a part of this great experiment in human progress under freedom, which is America."

JACK ANDERSON

Another who has a rugged and dedicated approach to public service is Rep. Carl Perkins, D-Ky. He not only puts postage stamps on all personal letters but has been known to track down a letter at the House post office that mistakenly went out with the official mail and return it for a 5-cent stamp.

He also makes it a practice never to accept gifts of any kind, no matter how well-intentioned. Once he helped a disabled veteran with three children obtain a disability allowance. The grateful vet knitted a white shawl and brought it to Perkins' office in a wheel chair.

When Perkins later was shown the shawl, he smiled appreciatively but told an aide: "We'll have to send it back with a note of thanks."

There is no lack of worthy men on Capitol Hill. The great weakness in Congress is its unwritten code, requiring the good men to cover up for the bad. Thus Congress continues to demand the highest standards of others while permitting its own members to cheat.

There are dozens who deserve to be mentioned. Here are just a few:

Senate Majority Leader Mike Mansfield, D-Mont.—His mild manner is the moss on a character of granite. His word is as good as scripture, his integrity as solid as the Montana mountains. He will do what he thinks is right no matter what the consequences.

Sen. Tom Kuchel, R-Calif.—When an unspeakable smear was circulated against him, accusing him of sex perversion, he was told that he would only advertise the charge by answering it. Yet he dared to fight back, as he has dared to stand up to the extremists in a state where they have a clamorous voice.

Sen. Paul Douglas, D-Ill.—At age 50, he gave up a professor's post to become a private in the Marines and slog through some of the Pacific's most ferocious fighting. Then he jumped into politics to continue fighting for the little people who have no lobbyists nor influence in Washington. There have been fewer victories for Douglas, the politician. Yet he stands unbowed against the pressures, untouched by the corruptors. He returns all gifts over $2.50 in value, refuses campaign contributions from anyone with an interest in Senate legislation.

SEN. GEORGE AIKEN, R-VT.—The Dean of Senate Republicans, he is as unaffected by pomp and power as the Vermont farmer he has always remained. In the Viet Nam debate between the doves and the hawks, Aiken has become known as the owl for his quiet, common-sense wisdom. He, too, is incorruptible.

Sen. Clifford Case, R-N.J.—Rather than risk the slightest obligation that might conflict with his duty, he has turned down favors even from friends who might have an interest in Senate legislation. It has cost him money, taken from dwindling holdings he had built up as an attorney, to be a Senator.

Rep. Charles Bennett, D-Fla.—Crippled by polio while serving in the infantry in the Philippines during World War II, he has renounced claim to more than $60,000 in veterans' disability benefits, turning the proceeds over to help develop Fort Caroline, Fla., as a park. He politely returns all gifts and gratuities, or turns them over, in the case of fruit and flowers, to a hospital.

Takes Exceptions

EDITOR:

I am writing to take exceptions to the column of L. A. Collins, Sr., in a recent issue.

First of all Mr. Collins unfairly couples the unions and the bargaining rights they enjoy to public employes who have no such rights.

Mr. Collins complains that the "average" 5% pay increases annually to state employes are excessive because of the fringe benefits they receive. Unfortunately we do not all get a 5% increase.

Last year, clerical and technical classes (25% of the civil service system) received a 2.5% increase. Moreover, state employes have been refused raises so that the line could be held on taxes on many occasions.

To the point of fringe benefits, the California State Personnel Board, a constitutional agency that reports to the governor and the legislature, concluded in its study last year that state civil service employes are now behind private industry by almost 4%. And this study was made before the latest round of union contracts were signed!

Tag Tax--for Prestige

From Our State Bureau

SACRAMENTO — A fee on a status symbol—personalized license plates—has become the most popular revenue proposal of the 1966 budget session.

Californians, unlike residents of some Eastern States, never had the option of paying a prestige-symbol tax on personalized license plates. But the idea is catching on.

In an election-year when legislators are trying to duck other revenue programs, 62 legislators have co-authored a bill making available personalized license plates in 1967.

For a fee of $10 plus an estimated special-handling charge of $4, an autoist at his option could order a personalized license plate.

The upshot could be some zany California plates in 1967. Only limitations are bad taste and duplication. Any combination of six letters and/or digits would be permitted.

"LYNDON," "123456," "SPY007," "BETTIE," "BATMAN" and "2N2AR4" are some of the possibilities. Names, addresses and phone numbers are expected to be the most frequent requests.

Request would be by application with second and third choices also listed in case the favored plate is snagged earlier by some one else.

The director of California Department of Motor Vehicles also would be authorized to use a special color for the personalized plates. The director would handle the thorny problem on duplicate requests for the same personalized plate.

Assemblyman Milton Marks, R-San Francisco, the author, is confident his measure has excellent chances for passage this session. State agencies dragged their heels when Marks first aired the proposal a few years ago, and a similar bill died in the Senate in 1965.

L. A. C. SAYS

Life Insurance

THE LIFE Insurance Institute says the rule of thumb for the amount of life insurance the breadwinner should carry is equal to four or five times his annual income. But it says the average for all families is less than two times. This means a large proportion of all families would be left with inadequate coverage should the father be taken away when the family needs are the greatest.

IT IS, OF COURSE, natural that the life insurance companies want to sell as much insurance as possible. But it is also a fact many family providers give a minimum amount of attention to protecting the family from the tragic changes that come about when the family income is cut off by death.

Social Security payment for minor children is a great help. But it does not provide the protection most of us want for our families. For the younger families an insurance program is the one way to establish an estate with the first premium paid for an insurance program. For the amount of the monthly payments for a television set such a program can be in effect—and family protection assured. But it takes a realistic attitude of the family to take such precautions.

IF THE breadwinner dies, with the wife left with their children, the over-all costs of the family living is not greatly reduced. Housing, medical costs and food are about the same. One of the great faults of the head of families is the refusal to face these facts and prepare for them. So-called good businessmen are careful to see they are insured against fire, automobile accidents and most of the hazards they directly face. But in far too many cases the man is callous as concerns his greatest obligation —that of protecting the family should he be taken away. How will the mortgage be paid—or other debts he has incurred?

There are today many forms of insurance that automatically help the families, such as workman's compensation, which is paid when the death is caused by on-the-job accidents. Then there is Social Security paid to a widow with dependent children. But if all these are added up they are usually half or less than the minimum needs for those left behind. If the father sat down to estimate what the family would need without him, he would realize life insurance is the only sure protection he can give them until he has accumulated other assets to take its place.

THERE ARE many types of life insurance policies. They vary from the low premium term policies that provide say $10,000 of insurance—but which have little or no cash value until death—to the family income policy that protects the family for 20 years from date of policy with monthly payments and also builds up cash value that can later be converted into annuities. Or which can be borrowed on at any time if needed.

There is a policy for every income and family need. But the only way to have one is to sit down with a competent insurance agent and carefully analyze needs and ability to save. Today there is time, but tomorrow it may be too late. It is a responsibility each family head should not avoid. He should protect his family should he be taken away—just as much as he protects himself while he is here. I use the term save because that is what investment in a life insurance policy means. As Life Insurance Week is observed this week it should impress every family with the urgency of providing such protection and savings.

Oats Not a Feed Grain? Explain That to a Mule!

From Our National Bureau

WASHINGTON—The House Republican task force on agriculture cited a letter from an irate farmer last week as it called for clearing up the legal mumbo jumbo of farm regulations.

The fuming farmer complained to his congressman that he had visited an agricultural advisory committee and

CAPITAL CHATTER

"Some ninny down there told me that oats wasn't a feed grain . . . Would you please explain that to my mule, I sure can't."

Task force chairman Odin Langen, R-Minn., also noted that one provision of agricultural law mentions "corn" eight times—and then a footnote explains that the word "corn" really means "wheat."

THE BUFFALO, once the major provider of food and clothing for the American plains Indian, is still part of his diet, but the method of obtaining bison meat has undergone a drastic change from the old days.

Paleface hunters from the National Park Service, which administers the few remaining large herds in South Dakota and Wyoming, periodically kill off portions of the herds to keep them to a manageable size.

Then the Bureau of Indian Affairs has the animals butchered and the meat stored. Tribal councils are given slips authorizing them to pick up the meat, which they do—in pickup trucks.

The buffalo herds are also reduced in size by selling them, mostly to cattle breeders, tourist attraction promoters and ranchers. A recent sale of 100 heifers and 20 bulls from the Custer State Park herd in South Dakota brought $64,125.

THE Interstate Commerce Commission last week approved a midwestern truck company's application for what could be the makings of the world's biggest martini.

The firm was given approval to haul truck loads of gin. The company explained that distillers often ship thousands of gallons of gin to local bottlers. ICC staffers now are wondering if someone is going to ask for permission to ship large quantities of vermouth.

Japan Has Special Kind of Problems

IN DISCUSSING MOVES to "improve" U.S.-Japanese relations on both sides of the Pacific, Kiyoaki Murata, writing in the Japan Times weekly, said:

"Epistemology is an almost totally neglected branch of human knowledge in international politics."

"Epistemology" is defined as a study of the methods and grounds of knowledge with emphasis on its limits and validity. (The root word is the Greek "episteme" meaning knowledge or understanding.)

RALPH McGILL

Mr. Murata says further that it is more difficult to obtain the facts in international politics than in domestic. One of the difficulties in reaching agreement on facts or data for judgment is "the indirectness of approach." He is quite correct to say:

"A seeker of international information does not always have access to the sources because of geographical and other limitations. One of the most important kinds of factors in international politics—the intentions of policy makers—is usually kept in secrecy. What is 'officially' disclosed as speeches by national leaders, furthermore, are designed for effects on their audiences, which in itself is a factor in international politics. Hence, the difficulty of properly evaluating public statements."

AT THIS PRESENT MOMENT in history, for example, the Communist Chinese are more busy with continued political statements than other nations. China is being slowly isolated from the rest of the world because of her widening rift with the Soviets. Peiping must make statements politically contrived about the Russians, Americans, British, Japanese and others.

Japan, an Asian nation committed to a future without vast outlays in arms and aircraft, would like to play a larger role in Asian leadership.

She could do soif her immense and less educated and less progressive neighbor, China, were not already adventuring with nuclear weapons.

Japan now experiences textile competition from China's low-wage productive centers. Will she, in time, find herself under political and economic blackmail-coercion of the nuclear weapons? Liberal-Democratic party members in Japan plan to send a delegation to Peiping sometime in April or May. But there is hesitancy. They would like more accurately to know the epistemology of the overall situation.

JAPAN HAS A TREATY with the United States and with Korea. Signing of the latter caused anger in Peiping. What is the next direction?

Japan has friendly relationships with the Soviet Union. But there is an irritant. Japan seeks to have Moscow return the Kunashiri and Etorof islands of the Southern Kuriles, held by the USSR after the war. The Soviets have been adamant in refusal. But Japan persists.

Mr. Murata is accurate to say that evaluations of certain issues differ from nation to nation. This, too, makes difficult the practice of epistemology. Japan's evaluation of Soviet communism differs from that of this country.

Johnson's Headstrong Actions Cause Concern

From Our National Bureau

WASHINGTON—In a sense, much of the concern being expressed here and elsewhere about where the war in Viet Nam is going is really a concern about where President Johnson is going.

One of the central reasons for this concern is a mounting supply of evidence that Mr. Johnson, after striving mightily to stamp the word "consensus" on his administration as its primary identification, is engaged in tossing consensus out of the window when it comes to making decisions on matters of greatest gravity.

This would not of itself be a matter for great concern except for one other circumstance. Mr. Johnson seems so far to have fallen short of establishing a unanimous conviction that his judgment is so good it can operate all by itself.

Doubts on this score are reinforced by a feeling that he does not have men in his immediate entourage who either know enough or have guts enough to hold a bridle on his impulses and make him wait for second thoughts on snap decisions.

THERE ARE THOSE who firmly believe that the continuing record of Mr. Johnson's performance in conducting the United States operation in Viet Nam is much better than it is made to seem by what can be publicly seen of how he goes about the task. But there is much more involved here than concern over style.

The concern is whether headstrong impulse, undisciplined by him and beyond restraint by others, might carry him beyond where he really wants to go.

Mr. Johnson has contributed to this concern. The public exhibition of the presidential decision process in connection with the resumption of bombing in North Viet Nam, his sudden-summit rendezvous with Saigon officials at Honolulu, and his private expressions of utter contempt for some of his senatorial questioners are all part of a recent record tending to aggravate the concern.

The unseen part of the performance provides some reassurance. It is impossible to know all of the processes by which a president or any other top official arrives at a decision. He himself might be hard put to re-trace the links in his train of thought with absolute precision and with true weight attributed to each factor.

It is true, however, that Mr. Johnson does consult at length with persons he trusts, listens to the cons as well as the pros, even encourages detailed exposition of opposing viewpoints, and puts in a lot of hours of study before making up his mind.

SECRETARY RUSK and Secretary McNamara, Under Secretary Ball, and General Taylor are of course among those who have an effective voice in discussions with the President.

Doubts as to the supply of knowledge and guts in his entourage relate more to those just around him in the White House.

It is an inescapable reality of life that not even the highest qualities of mind and character can, overnight, make a man useful as an adviser on matters as complex and esoteric as those the President is dealing with in Viet Nam. It is another inescapable reality that life in the White House works a weird spell on people, inducing in them a kind of hypnosis in which they are truly convinced of the infallibility of "The Chief."

Actually, there is little sign that Mr. Johnson is even close to any impulsive decisions which might be prescriptions for disaster.

It may be hoped, however, that some of the concerns being expressed around here might come to his attention. That might gentle him down a bit.

TORRANCE CENTER IS ALSO 'NOISY'

Fancy Building Still Drips

By DON KIRKLAND

From the outside, Torrance's 3-year-old $170,000 Recreation Center looks just dandy. Inside is where things aren't so good.

In March, 1963, while the city fathers were still beaming over the fancy addition to their growing Civic Center — having just dedicated it four months before — a perplexing thing happened:

* * * *

WHEN IT RAINED, the roof leaked. Furrows in their brows replaced the twinkle in the city councilmen's eyes, and little kitchen pots, all catching drips, replaced the pretty floral arrangements that had been around when the climate was sunnier.

Piqued, the councilmen ordered somebody to do something about the roof which, they insisted, shouldn't leak on a $170,000 building.

City crews got busy and investigated, a contractor poked into nooks and crannies where leaking was likely, and pretty soon the building didn't drip anymore. For that year, it had stopped raining.

* * * *

IN A MANNER of speaking, the problem just "dried up," and, after making a few repairs in the roof, everybody forgot about it.

Until last December. City crews got out the kitchen pots again, and the tintinabulation of dripping droplets became music to the ears of the people who frequent the center — except, of course, the councilmen, who got official headaches.

The dripping would have been louder, everybody agreed, if it hadn't been for the rumble of the huge heating and ventilating system, which mysteriously went partly kaput in the year that had intervened.

* * * *

IT HAS become so loud that the noise precludes using the building for plays and recitals," reported building superintendent Jack McKinnon.

"Some people won't even come into the place."

Added another city worker:

"People come in for a musical program, which is a nice pasttime for a winter evening, and the caretakers turn on the heating system. Pretty soon, it's make so much noise that the caretakers have to turn it off. Then everybody can hear fine, but they're all freezing—like in an icebox."

* * * *

LIKE in a $170,000 icebox.

City councilmen have allocated $300 to find out what's wrong with the system, but asked that a gas man go out and look at it first.

Said one councilman: "We ought to save the $300 if we can."

All the other councilmen agreed on that. After all, one said later, $300 is no drop in the bucket.

DISCUSS ISSUES FACING LONG BEACH

Community Progress Congress Meets Thursday

Six panel discussions of important issues facing Long Beach will be featured when the Chamber of Commerce-sponsored Congress for Community Progress convenes Thursday at 2:30 p.m. in the Pacific Coast Club.

The sixth annual event is open to "all interested citizens who wish to avail themselves of an opportunity to participate first hand in community betterment," says chairman Gene Bishop.

"Constructive recommendations stemming from Congress panel discussions ultimately will become the reality of tomorrow after they've been channeled in the proper directions," Bishop adds.

The Los Cerritos YMCA will break ground at 2 p.m. today for a new building at 155530 S. Woodruff Ave., Dr. Ralph Burnight, board chairman said.

Snow Decks Hornet

The 2,500 men of the Long Beach-based anti-submarine carrier USS Hornet can tell you that it is cold in the Sea of Japan.

Rear Adm. Evan P. Aurand's ASW Group I flagship was hit by driving winds, snow, sleet and ice plus heavy seas while on a two-week ASW exercise with the Republic of Korea navy.

For Hornet's commanding officer, Capt. William M. Pardee, however, the frigid weather will be nothing but cool memory. He has orders to report to sunny Pearl Harbor in April.

He will take over as chief of staff for Pacific ASW Forces.

TORRANCE CENTER IS ALSO 'NOISY'

Fancy Building Still Drips

By DON KIRKLAND

From the outside, Torrance's 3-year-old $170,000 Recreation Center looks just dandy. Inside is where things aren't so good.

In March, 1963, while the city fathers were still beaming over the fancy addition to their growing Civic Center - having just dedicated it four months before -- a perplexing thing happened:

* * * *

WHEN IT RAINED, the roof leaked. Furrows on their brows replaced the twinkle in the city councilmen's eyes, and little kitchen pots, all catching drips, replaced the pretty floral arrangements that had been around when the climate was summer.

Piqued, the councilmen ordered somebody to do something about the roof which, they insisted, shouldn't leak on a $170,000 building.

City crews got busy and investigated, a contractor poked into nooks and crannies where leaking was likely, and pretty soon the building didn't drip anymore. For that year, it had stopped raining.

* * * *

IN A MANNER of speaking, the problem just "dried up," and, after making a few repairs in the roof, everybody forgot about it.

Until last December. City crews got out the kitchen pots again, and the tintinnabulation of dripping droplets became music to the ears of the people who frequent the center -- except, of course, the councilmen, who got official headaches.

The dripping would have been louder, everybody agreed, if it hadn't been for the rumble of the huge heating and ventilating system, which mysteriously went partly kaput in the year that had intervened.

* * * *

IT HAS become so loud that the noise precludes using the building for plays and recitals," reported building superintendent Jack McKinnon.

"Some people won't even come into the place."

Added another city worker:

"People come in for a musical program, which is a nice pastime for a winter evening, and the caretakers turn on the heating system. Pretty soon, it's make so much noise that the caretakers have to turn it off. Then everybody can hear fine, but they're all freezing--like in an icebox."

* * * *

LIKE in a $170,000 icebox.

City councilmen have allocated $300 to find out what's wrong with the system, but asked that a gas man go out and look at it first.

Said one councilman: "We ought to save the $300 if we can."

All the other councilmen agreed on that. After all, one said later, $300 is no drop in the bucket.

THE BRIDEGROOM WORE PAJAMAS

In Pajamas and Bandages, Bridegroom Says 'Yes, I Do'

By ART VINSEL

They were gathered there together in the sight of God, as Superior Court Judge A. D. Boone said, but the groom wore pajamas and white bandages swathed his hands.

Still there was a festive air to the wedding Saturday of Thomas Tate, 22, and Patricia Milligan, 17, in Pioneer Hospital, Artesia.

It was planned originally for nearby Chapel of Memories, but little things like 2x4 planks have a way of tripping up a guy's most glorious plans.

* * * *

THAT WAS what happened to Tom, a roofer for Ross Roofing Co., on the eve of his marriage to Patricia.

He was hospitalized after he had stumbled over a board while on the job, fell and plunged his hands into a bucket of boiling hot tar.

"They wanted to go ahead and get married, anyway," said Mrs. William Milligan, mother of the new Mrs. Tate, after the ceremony in the hospital's sun-splashed patio.

Other patients watched from their windows, some of them smiling, as nurse Pat Lamb wheeled the chunky groom down the aisle in his wheel chair.

* * * *

MOMENTS later, maid of honor Linda Cravens led her cortege of bridesmaids, Mary Milligan, Denise Simmons and Beverly Chavez out into the patio, bearing brilliant yellow bouquets of chrysanthemums.

And then followed Patricia in a floor-length white wedding gown.

"Dearly beloved, we are gathered here," began Judge Boone in sonorous and time-honored tones. Two men in bathrobes stood near a soft drink machine, watching shyly.

* * * *

PATRICIA gave her man a rather wistful glance when Judge Boone came to the part about "in sickness and in health."

But when it came time to slip the gold band on the bride's ring finger, there wasn't a moment of awkwardness. Her brother, Danny Milligan, who was best man, stepped right up to do the honors.

Then he swished his blonde sister's veil up out of the way so his new brother-in-law could make things official with the customary kiss.

And it was over.

Unruh Bares New Education Reforms

Legislation is helping provide a more uniform quality of education, State Assembly Speaker Jesse M. Unruh told a conference of elementary school administrators Saturday at Harbor College in Wilmington.

Unruh cited reforms of teacher education and district organization as successful effort to bring equity between school districts. He said laws providing pre-schools in poverty areas and remedial reading programs are the important reforms passed by the last session of the legislature.

* * * *

UNRUH said he is sponsoring a bill which would substitute sales tax for property tax support of schools, and provide stronger financial support for schools.

Unruh's talk opened a day-long session of the South Coast Section of the Elementary School Administrators Association.

Other conference highlights included a talk by Dr. Thomas Lantos, director of instructional programs for the State Colleges, and a series of workshop discussion.

BARGE FROM BRITISH COLUMBIA BEGINS SERVICE HERE
Nootka, Built Like a Floating Warehouse, Delivered 5,212 Tons of Newsprint

Newsprint Barged Here

A new technique in the handling of Canadian newsprint rolls was observed in the Port of Long Beach with the arrival of 5,212 tons aboard the 365-foot barge, Nootka Carrier.

Arrival of the new $2.5-million motorless vessel marked the first time newsprint has been delivered in the port by barge, according to Capt. F. H. Fowler, executive vice president of the Star Terminal Co., Inc., agents.

The vessel, also carrying 236 pallets of wood shingles, was towed here 1,200 miles from Port Alberni, B.C., site of the Powell River Paper Co. mills.

The all-enclosed, steel, 82-foot-beam barge was carrying newsprint for the Independent, Press-Telegram and other newspapers.

Unloading through side doors with the aid of forklift vehicles began soon after the barge was nudged into Pier 2.

The silver-and-blue vessel was towed here by the ocean-going tug Arthur Foss of the Foss Tugboat Co. of Seattle.

The rolls, weighing nearly a half ton each were stacked on end three and four high.

The vessel was built in Victoria, B.C. Loaded, her draft is 14 feet; three inches with 7 feet, 9 inches of freeboard.

Owner of the new barge is McMillan, Bloedell, and Powell River Co.

Mustang Output Near a Million

DEABORN, Mich. — The countdown to a million Mustangs is under way in three Ford assembly plants. Production through Saturday totaled 980,625 units, Ford Division announced.

Donald N. Frey, company vice president and division general manager, said that according to current schedules the millionth Mustang will roll off the line at Metuchen, N. J., San Jose, Calif., or Dearborn in the week beginning Feb. 28.

Push for Factory Sites

A new urban-renewal program to encourage industrial growth will be proposed to the City Council Wednesday by its advisory Economic Development Committee.

Chairman Virgil H. Spongberg of the council-appointed group has filed a letter suggesting that the Long Beach Redevelopment Agency be asked to direct the project, aimed primarily at utilizing publicly owned and unused land.

* * * *

"OUR CITY needs a land program to create new industrial sites which will bring new business, taxes and payrolls," the committee's letter said.

"We believe the agency's experience and judgment would be an asset to a program aimed at solving the vacant and unused publicly owned land problem and that its financing capability would prove most useful in putting the various acreages to enterprising uses."

The agency's method of financing the West Beach project by tax-increment bonds may have to be revised in the case of an industrial program, according to the committee proposal.

* * * *

IN THAT event, the letter added, a federal loan may be more practical. An alternative method, it said, could be to prepare plans for all potential project areas at once and at the same time provide for a charter amendment to be submitted to the electorate.

Shamu's No Biter: How Very Lucky!

but an easy-going sea monster.

She appears to act like a coy, high school girl, but at times she has other emotional attitudes—she is quite like man in respect to mental abilities, as well as brain size and nervous system.

For a while, Sea World kept a porpoise named George in Shamu's tank so she could have company.

"Whales enjoy company," Burgess says, "and George was an excellent playmate."

George later had to be taken out of th etank. Her swell playmate began to steal Shamu's food.

George, who would normally have been a choice meal for Shamu in the open ocean, would literally snatch the food from between her three-inch teeth, swim to the other end of the tank and leisurely eat his captured booty.

Shamu can be moody, temperamental, overworked, irritable, overstressed, neurotic, lonely, sociable, demanding; and she can stay in a corner and pout.

That she is different rom most of her breed, is unquestioned.

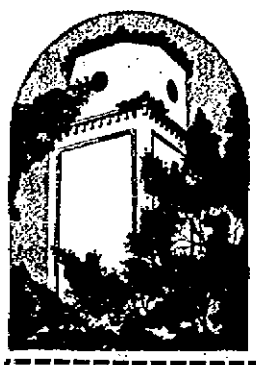

The situation of George and Shamu is an instance. In captivity in the foreign environment, for Shamu, of Sea World's tank, she needed George's company and he became a fast friend instead of a fast meal.

Whether this once-ruthless killer will remain docile still is a question of concern.

"It is possible," Burgess stressed, "That she might revert to some of her more pugnacious characteristics after she's been trained and she has had time to realize she can wield as much power in the tank as she was used to when she was a wandering sea monster."

Shamu's No Biter: How Very Lucky!

but an easy-going sea monster.

She appears to act like a coy, high school girl, but at times she has other emotional attitudes—she is quite like man in respect to mental abilities, as well as brain size and nervous system.

For a while, Sea World kept a porpoise named George in Shamu's tank so she could have company.

George later had to be taken out of th etank. Her swell playmate began to steal Shamu's food.

George, who would normally have been a choice meal for Shamu in the open ocean, would literally snatch the food from between her three-inch teeth, swim to the other end of the tank and leisurely eat his captured booty.

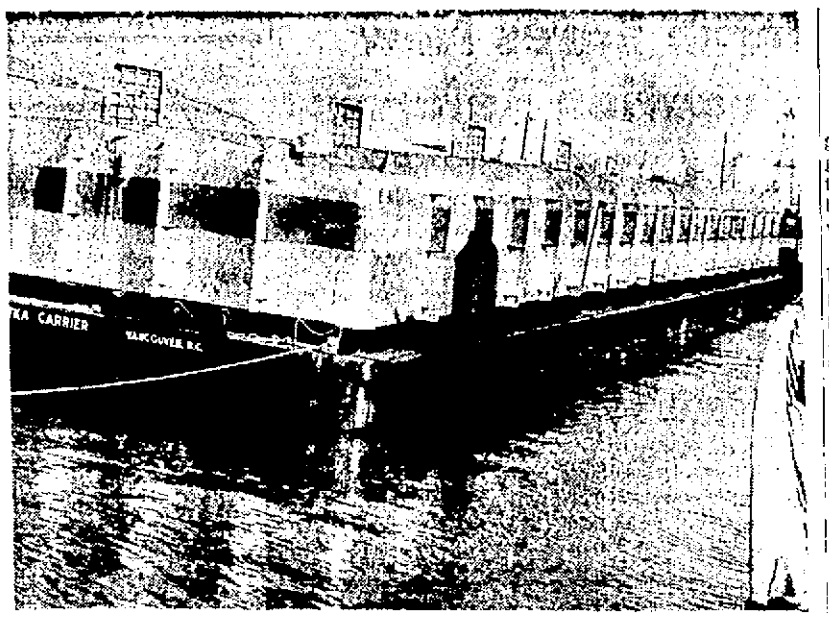

Shamu can be moody, temperamental, overworked, irritable, overstressed, neurotic, lonely, sociable, demanding; and she can stay in a corner and pout.

That she is different rom most of her breed, is unquestioned.

The situation of George and Shamu is an instance. In captivity in the foreign environment, for Shamu, of Sea World's tank, she needed George's company and he became a fast friend instead of a fast meal.

Whether this once-ruthless killer will remain docile still is a question of concern.

"It is possible," Burgess stressed, "That she might revert to some of her more pugnacious characteristics after she's been trained and she has had time to realize she can wield as much power in the tank as she was used to when she was a wandering sea monster."

BARGE FROM BRITISH COLUMBIA BEGINS SERVICE HERE
Nootka, Built Like a Floating Warehouse, Delivered 5,212 Tons of Newsprint

Newsprint Barged Here

A new technique in the handling of Canadian newsprint rolls was observed in the Port of Long Beach with the arrival of 5,212 tons aboard the 365-foot barge, Nootka Carrier.

Arrival of the new $2.5-million motorless vessel marked the first time newsprint has been delivered in the port by barge, according to Capt. F. H. Fowler, executive vice president of the Star Terminal Co., Inc., agents.

The vessel, also carrying 236 pallets of wood shingles, was towed here 1,200 miles from Port Alberni, B.C., site of the Powell River Paper Co. mills.

The all-enclosed, steel, 82-foot-beam barge was carrying newsprint for the Independent, Press-Telegram and other newspapers.

Unloading through side doors with the aid of fork-lift vehicles began soon after the barge was nudged into Pier 2.

The rolls, weighing nearly a half ton each were stacked on end three and four high.

The vessel was built in Victoria, B.C. Loaded, her draft is 14 feet, three inches with 7 feet, 9 inches of freeboard.

Push for Factory Sites

A new urban-renewal program to encourage industrial growth will be proposed to the City Council Wednesday by its advisory Economic Development Committee.

Chairman Virgil H. Spongberg of the council-appointed group has filed a letter suggesting that the Long Beach Redevelopment Agency be asked to direct the project, aimed primarily at utilizing publicly owned and unused land.

* * * *

"OUR CITY needs a land program to create new industrial sites which will bring new business, taxes and payrolls," the committee's letter said.

"We believe the agency's experience and judgment would be an asset to a program aimed at solving the vacant and unused publicly owned land problem and that its financing capability would prove most useful in putting the various acreages to enterprising uses."

The agency's method of financing the West Beach project by tax-increment bonds may have to be revised in the case of an industrial program, according to the committee proposal.

* * * *

IN THAT event, the letter added, a federal loan may be more practical. An alternative method, it said, could be to prepare plans for all potential project areas at once and at the same time provide for a charter amendment to be submitted to the electorate.

FINE PURRLIEU OF PATRICIAN, PROLETARIAT

Cat A-Go-Go Goes Well

ALL COME ON, Mrs. Patty O'Hern of Malibu seemed to be saying—but wasn't—to her champion Blue-Cream Persian cat, Zoda Top Hat of Toireh, at A-Go-Go show. Toothbrush is to unsnarl fur, not stop cavities.

By FRED HAMLIN

Hundreds of exotic aristocats and a few furry fugitives from American alleyways are showing off—and occasionally sounding off—in Long Beach's Municipal Auditorium.

They were brought together for the 1966 Coast Cat Club A-Go-Go, otherwise known as the Royal Merit Triple Championship Show, which concludes with today's 11 a.m. to 10 p.m. events, under sanction of the American Cat Fanciers Association.

Most of the cats seem unimpressed by all the fuss about trophies, ribbons, rosettes, decorated cages (cat equivalent of doghouses), and especially their fellow felines.

Time between brief interruptions for judging is spent catnapping, eating, yawning, cat-calling to neighbors, or ignoring owners, other humans and the whole thing.

There's plenty of excitement, particularly during judging, but it's among the people types, some of whom represent catteries—a feline version of canine breeding kennels.

Almost as fascinating to showgoers as the cats are those home-away-from-home cat cages. Some are decked out as boudoirs (even if the occupant is clearly made), with fittings and trimmings such as canopied beds, dressing tables, mirrors, foam mattresses and pillows, ruffled curtains, deep-pile rugs—the ornate works.

Even the least affluent cat has at least one favorite plaything, ranging from a toy mouse or dog, yarn balls and strands of chewy string to cat-size holsters with six-guns.

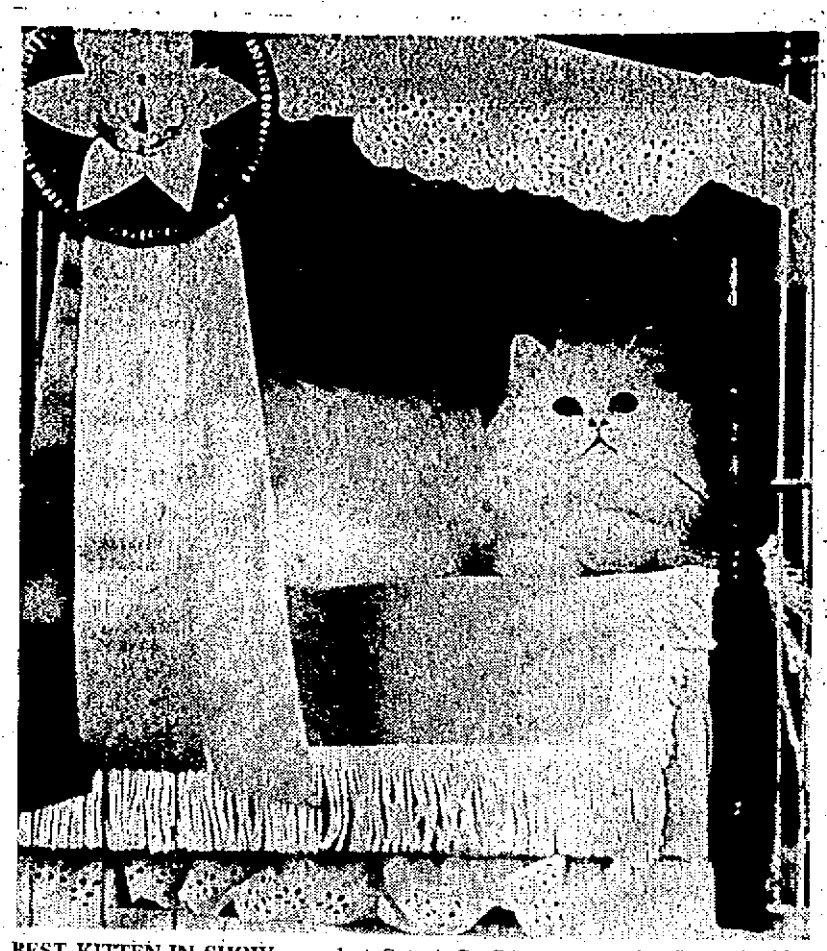

The show's catalogue stimulates speculation about origin, traits and other facts about rare and not-so-rare breeds.

The Korat, for example. It's the "good luck" cat of Thailand, where its native name—Si Sawat — means "cat of lovable color (silver blue)," and it's a cousin to the more familiar, but perhaps less lucky, Siamese breed.

Then there is the Abyssinian, "sacred cat of Egypt," with ancestral lines dating back more than 3,000 years; the Balinese, Burmese, Persian, Himalayan, the Manx from the Isle of Man, Havana Brown from the Caribbean and on and on.

A highlight of Saturday's opening-day program was selection of the "best in show" kitten, a 7-month-old Chinchilla Silver Persian male named Gray-Ivy Wee Wonder, owned by Mrs. Ivan Over of Pasadena.

Most of the top champions will be chosen today, with four judges busy forenoon, afternoon and evening. The results will be catastrophic to some. Owners, that is. The cats couldn't care less.

BEST KITTEN IN SHOW award at Cat A-Go-Go was won by 7-month-old Chinchilla Silver Persian, nobly named Gray-Ivy Wee Wonder.

Man Saves Child, 4, Trapped by Flames

A 28-year-old Long Beach machinist was praised Saturday for saving the life of a boy, 4, trapped inside a smoke-filled apartment at 759 Loma Vista Drive.

Charles H. Dohrer, of 743½ Loma Vista Drive, went into the burning home of Mrs. Ruth Fitzgerald, 28-year-old baby-sitter, and carried the child to safety shortly before 5 p.m.

Battalion Fire Chief Tom Cady said the youngster, David A. Becker, was lying on a couch when fire broke out in a closet. Mrs. Fitzgerald helped two other children while the flames spread to the bathroom and filled the apartment with smoke.

The baby-sitter, Chief Cady said, attempted to reenter the apartment but was forced back by the heat. Dohrer ran into the apartment, then dropped to the floor and crawled to the couch, where he found the child.

Firemen gave the boy oxygen and turned him over to his mother, Mrs. Wilma Becker, 24, of 904 Park Circle.

* * * *

THE BABY later was examined in St. Mary's Hospital and released.

Dohrer, an employe of North American Aviation Inc., has one child, Carolyn, 5.

Chief Cady said the fire, cause of which was not known, resulted in more than $1,000 damage to the Fitzgerald apartment.

which he described as the "grass roots" phase of the project. Thousands of workers, most of them women, conduced this tedious door-to-door solicitation. This time some State College sororities and fraternities pitched in to help the cause.

* * *

HERE ARE the final results of the Long Beach city phase of the campaign with chairmen, amount raised and percentage of goal given in that order:

Advance gifts (Val Cassaday) $156,646; 93.5.
Big Industry (John Hunt) $49,669; 90.7.
Small industry (Harry Jordan) $30,219; 82.3.
Public employes (Barney Walczak) $4,224; 130.5.
Schools (George Geiger) $7,415; 101.8.
Professional (James Hayes) $20,945; 92.4.
Residential (Mrs. Caroline Fox) $69,636; 103.7.
Business (Harvey Freeman) $12,966; 107.3.

Epley explained that many of the large industries and businesses with interests both here and elsewhere, such as the major utilities, Sears and Procter and Gamble, now make their contributions through the county United Crusade campaign offices, and allocations come back to the area Crusade from the so-called "county pool." The goal-reaching success of the area campaign assures a full allocation from that source for the area agencies.

UNITED WAY and Red Cross here also receive substantial funds from AID—Associated In-Group Donors—through which many private and public employe groups and employers make contributions to youth, health and welfare agencies. The AID funds also come to the United Crusade here from the United Crusade county pool. An outstanding AID set-up is at Douglas Aircraft.

Concluding his report, Epley said he and his campaign leaders are happy about the over-all result but realize there were some "soft spots" that did not produce as well as had been hoped for. They are evaluating the campaign for information to pass on to the 1966 leadership.

"One thing we hope," said the campaign leader, "is that we succeeded in bringing United Crusade a little closer to the hearts of the people of the area. It should be yearly a popular cause because it does so much for so many."

Cat A-Go-Go Goes Well

AH COME ON, Mrs. Patty O'Hern of Malibu seemed to be saying—but wasn't—to her champion Blue-Cream Persian cat, Zoda Top Hat of Toireh, at A-Go-Go show. Toothbrush is to unsnarl fur, not stop cavities.

By FRED HAMLIN

Hundreds of exotic aristocats and a few furry fugitives from American alleyways are showing off—and occasionally sounding off—in Long Beach's Municipal Auditorium.

They were brought together for the 1966 Coast Cat Club A-Go-Go, otherwise known as the Royal Merit Triple Championship Show, which concludes with today's 11 a.m. to 10 p.m. events, under sanction of the American Cat Fanciers Association.

Most of the cats seem unimpressed by all the fuss about trophies, ribbons, rosettes, decorated cages (cat equivalent of doghouses), and especially their fellow felines.

Time between brief interruptions for judging is spent catnapping, eating, yawning, cat-calling to neighbors, or ignoring owners, other humans and the whole thing.

There's plenty of excitement, particularly during judging, but it's among the people types, some of whom represent catteries—a feline version of canine breeding kennels.

Almost as fascinating to showgoers as the cats are those home-away-from-home cat cages. Some are decked out as boudoirs (even if the occupant is clearly made), with fittings and trimmings such as canopied beds, dressing tables, mirrors, foam mattresses and pillows, ruffled curtains, deep-pile rugs—the ornate works.

Even the least affluent cat has at least one favorite plaything, ranging from a toy mouse or dog, yarn balls and strands of chewy string to cat-size holsters with six-guns.

The show's catalogue stimulates speculation about origin, traits and other facts about rare and not-so-rare breeds.

The Korat, for example. It's the "good luck" cat of Thailand, where its native name—Si Sawat — means "cat of lovable color (silver blue)," and it's a cousin to the more familiar, but perhaps less lucky, Siamese breed.

Then there is the Abyssinian, "sacred cat of Egypt," with ancestral lines dating back more than 3,000 years; the Balinese, Burmese, Persian, Himalayan, the Manx from the Isle of Man, Havana Brown from the Caribbean and on and on.

A highlight of Saturday's opening-day program was selection of the "best in show" kitten, a 7-month-old Chinchilla Silver Persian male named Gray-Ivy Wee Wonder, owned by Mrs. Ivan Over of Pasadena.

Most of the top champions will be chosen today, with four judges busy forenoon, afternoon and evening. The results will be catastrophic to some. Owners, that is. The cats couldn't care less.

BEST KITTEN IN SHOW award at Cat A-Go-Go was won by 7-month-old Chinchilla Silver Persian, nobly named Gray-Ivy Wee Wonder.

which he described as the "grass roots" phase of the project. Thousands of workers, most of them women, conduced this tedious door-to-door solicitation. This time some State College sororities and fraternities pitched in to help the cause.

* * *

HERE ARE the final results of the Long Beach city phase of the campaign with chairmen, amount raised and percentage of goal given in that order:

Advance gifts (Val Cassaday) $156,646; 93.5.
Big industry (John Hunt) $49,669; 90.7.
Small industry (Harry Jordan) $30,219; 82.3.
Public employes (Barney Walczak) $4,224; 130.5.
Schools (George Geiger) $7,415; 101.8.
Professional (James Hayes) $20,945; 92.4.
Residential (Mrs. Caroline Fox) $69,636; 103.7.
Business (Harvey Freeman) $12,966; 107.3.

Epley explained that many of the large industries and businesses with interests both here and elsewhere, such as the major utilities, Sears and Procter and Gamble, now make their contributions through the county United Crusade campaign offices, and allocations come back to the area Crusade from the so-called "county pool." The goal-reaching success of the area campaign assures a full allocation from that source for the area agencies.

UNITED WAY and Red Cross here also receive substantial funds from AID—Associated In-Group Donors—through which many private and public employe groups and employers make contributions to youth, health and welfare agencies. The AID funds also come to the United Crusade here from the United Crusade county pool. An outstanding AID set-up is at Douglas Aircraft.

Concluding his report, Epley said he and his campaign leaders are happy about the over-all result but realize there were some "soft spots" that did not produce as well as had been hoped for. They are evaluating the campaign for information to pass on to the 1966 leadership.

"One thing we hope," said the campaign leader, "is that we succeeded in bringing United Crusade a little closer to the hearts of the people of the area. It should be yearly a popular cause because it does so much for so many."

Man Saves Child, 4, Trapped by Flames

A 28-year-old Long Beach machinist was praised Saturday for saving the life of a boy, 4, trapped inside a smoke-filled apartment at 759 Loma Vista Drive.

Charles H. Dohrer, of 743½ Loma Vista Drive, went into the burning home of Mrs. Ruth Fitzgerald, 28-year-old baby-sitter, and carried the child to safety shortly before 5 p.m.

Battalion Fire Chief Tom Cady said the youngster, David A. Becker, was lying on a couch when fire broke out in a closet. Mrs. Fitzgerald helped two other children while the flames spread to the bathroom and filled the apartment with smoke.

The baby-sitter, Chief Cady said, attempted to reenter the apartment but was forced back by the heat. Dohrer ran into the apartment, then dropped to the floor and crawled to the couch, where he found the child.

Firemen gave the boy oxygen and turned him over to his mother, Mrs. Wilma Becker, 24, of 904 Park Circle.

THE BABY later was examined in St. Mary's Hospital and released.

Dohrer, an employe of North American Aviation Inc., has one child, Carolyn, 5.

Chief Cady said the fire, cause of which was not known, resulted in more than $1,000 damage to the Fitzgerald apartment.

The other driver, Mrs. Margie Elizabeth Patin, 36, of 936 Ambridge St., Anaheim, received only minor injuries, according to Anaheim police.

Ehrling Shines With L. A. Philharmonic

By DANIEL CARIAGA
L. P-T Music Critic

Sixten Ehrling, the Los Angeles Philharmonic's seventh guest conductor in the past eight weeks (Mehta is still in Montreal, his other permanent post) brought his admirable leadership to the Pavilion of the Music Center Thursday and Friday.

His conducting was, as we noted in Hollywood Bowl last July, sure and precise and masterful. He elicited from the not always malleable Philharmonic some of the best playing of which they are capable. Unfortunately, half the program was unworthy of his attention.

That half consisted of Paul Creston's "Invocation and Dance," and the G minor violin Concerto of Max Bruch. While the orchestra and Ehrling gave the Creston work a brilliant reading, the performance served only to underline the paucity of substance in the score.

Bruch's aged Concerto, which has served several generations of violinists as a superb study in preparation for the major repertoire, is always an embarrassment in the concert hall.

It is dull music, first and foremost, its only interest lying in the technicol hurdles it places before the fiddler, and even those get repetitions. A warm-hearted but rather anonymous Adagio is its only substantial moment.

Itzhak Perlman, a young (20) Israeli, winner of the Leventritt Award in 1964, played it with devotion, fluency, and controlled drive. The second movement, that flower between two thorns, was particularly gratifying.

Yet, as admirable as was his performance, Perlman might certainly have chosen a work more appropriate to his present musical circumstances.

There are several 20th century concerti that deserve more regular hearings; even Mozart's seven are not hackneyed enough to pass up: Why tarry in the province of Bruch when there is a whole world of music outside?

Ehrling returned after intermission with Shostakovich's Fifth Symphony, which was worth the waiting. The glowering intensity of the opening, the elegant, mannered humor of the Allegretto, the profound inner dialog of the Largo, and the cumulative tensions of the Finale—Ehrling gave us the whole canvas, the full panorama of Shostakovich's mural.

The Philharmonic — and, after eight weeks, they must dread facing yet another baton every seventh day—played so cleanly, so brightly, and with such obvious joy in this music, that we came away with the impression that they feel as we do about both Shostakovich and Ehrling.

Drilling Lag Waits Crude Price Hike

By MAX B. SKELTON

HOUSTON, Tex. (AP)—The nation's oil drilling contractors were told last week they cannot expect much of an upward swing in drilling trends until crude oil prices improve.

"Drilling will show immediate gains when—and if—higher crude oil prices are posted," said Warren L. Baker, executive vice president of the American Association of Oil Well Drilling Contractors.

Baker said, however, prospects for such price hikes are not bright.

New well completions last year totaled only 41,423, compared to 45,236 in 1964 and a record 58,160 in 1956.

* * * *

BAKER SAID the chief cause for the continued decline in drilling is insufficient producer probitability prospects, a result of a street erosion of crude oil prices since early 1957.

"Historically, crude oil prices have a greater influence on drilling rates than any other single factor," he said. "Drilling invariably drops when crude prices fall, and rise when crude prices improve."

Baker said prospects for improved crude prices are not good even though several encouraging trends have been developing in recent months within the producing segment of the industry.

"The normal influence of these factors is overridden by government opposition to price increases and uncertainty regarding the duration of the Viet Nam war," he said.

* * * *

"Crude oil stocks at the end of 1965 were at a 44-year low," he said. "Such conditions normally would cause drilling rates to advance. Instead, 1965 saw a further substantial decrease in already severely depressed drilling levels."

* * * *

THE ECONOMIC picture of producers, he said, has been helped by increased drilling rates.

"However, the chief ingredient in the producer profitability picture—better crude oil prices still is missing," Baker said.

"Recent midwest crude price increases are the first step toward supplying this important ingredient, but too nominal and too limited in scope to be more than a regional influence on drilling activities."

* * * *

BAKER minimized a widespread belief a trend toward greater use of wider well spacing has been the price factor for the continued decline in drilling activity.

"Statistics do not bear out this contention," he said. "U.S. exploratory drilling has declined more than field development drilling. If wider well spacing were such a significant drilling factor, field development wells would show a larger decrease than exploratory drilling."

Exploratory wells drilled in unproven areas in 1965 were 10.7% below 1964. Field development wells declined only 7.8%.

"Since the 1965 peak, exploratory drilling has declined 36.6% while field development drilling has declined but 26.5%," Baker said.

BAKER SAID the chief cause for the continued decline in drilling is insufficient producer profitability prospects, a result of a street erosion of crude oil prices since early 1957.

"Historically, crude oil prices have a greater influence on drilling rates than any other single factor," he said. "Drilling invariably drops when crude prices fall, and rise when crude prices improve."

Baker said prospects for improved crude prices are not good even though several encouraging trends have been developing in recent months within the producing segment of the industry.

"The normal influence of these factors is overridden by government opposition to price increases and uncertainty regarding the duration of the Viet Nam war," he said.

* * * *

"Crude oil stocks at the end of 1965 were at a 44-year low," he said. "Such conditions normally would cause drilling rates to advance. Instead, 1965 saw a further substantial decrease in already severely depressed drilling levels."

* * * *

THE ECONOMIC picture of producers, he said, has been helped by increased drilling rates.

"However, the chief ingredient in the producer profitability picture—better crude oil prices still is missing," Baker said.

"Recent midwest crude price increases are the first step toward supplying this important ingredient, but too nominal and too limited in scope to be more than a regional influence on drilling activities."

* * * *

BAKER minimized a widespread belief a trend toward greater use of wider well spacing has been the price factor for the continued decline in drilling activity.

"Statistics do not bear out this contention," he said. "U.S. exploratory drilling has declined more than field development drilling. If wider well spacing were such a significant drilling factor, field development wells would show a larger decrease than exploratory drilling."

Exploratory wells drilled in unproven areas in 1965 were 10.7% below 1964. Field development wells declined only 7.8%.

"Since the 1965 peak, exploratory drilling has declined 36.6% while field development drilling has declined but 26.5%," Baker said.

'Born Yesterday' at Melodyland Tuesday

Don DeFore, Pamela Britton and Frank Aletter, TV and film stars, head the cast of Garson Kanin's Broadway and motion picture comedy, "Born Yesterday," opening a limited two-week engagement at Melodyland Theater in Anaheim Tuesday.

DeFore, long a favorite on television's "Hazel" series, is cast as the brash and boisterous Harry Brock, millionaire junk dealer, in the stage hit, with Miss Britton as the delightfully dizzy Billie Dawn, whose first encounter with Class and Culture, in the person of erudite young journalist Aletter, causes her cozy "arrangement" with DeFore to turn into a not-so-comfortable triangle.

Featuring Stevan Darrell, Larry Oliver, Madge Kennedy, Edgar Hess and Vivian Neuberg, the comedy is directed by David Pardoll for producers Sammy Lewis and Danny Dare.

It remains at Melodyland through March 6.

Burnett to Do 'Stiletto' Script

W. R. Burnett has been signed to write the screenplay of Harold Robbins' novel, "Stiletto." The drama, which has a New York and European setting, will be filmed in late summer or early fall in Hollywood.

Burnett has scripted "Little Caesar," "High Sierra," "This Gun for Hire," "Asphalt Jungle" and "The Great Escape."

'PRINCE AND PIRATES'

State Profs' Original at L.B. State

A pirate's plan to kidnap the king of a mythical Mediterranean kingdom is the plot of an original children's play opening at 7:30 p.m. Thursday in the Long Beach State College campus theater.

"The Prince and the Pirates," written by Herbert Camburn, associate professor of drama, and Kenneth Rugg, instructor of drama, author of "The Firebird" presented at State last year will continue Friday at 8:30 p.m. and on Saturday with a 2 p.m. matinee and an 8:30 p.m. performance.

Involved with the king, prince and the pirates is a band of gypsies led by Queen Zellina who seeks the king's patronage. More complications ensue when the pirates mutiny.

"The Prince and the Pirates," the third major production of the 1965-66 theater season presented by the CSCLB Department of Drama, is under the direction of Rugg. Set designs are by Camburn.

Stage manager is R. Mark Williams. Susan Thomas is assistant director.

Costumes for the production have been designed by Carol Robinson. Lighting is by Mark Kaye, and choreography is by Joy Coppola.

Following the campus performances "The Prince and the Pirates" will tour Southern California for four weeks.

Julie's Prints for Chinese

HOLLYWOOD — Film star Julie Andrews, who won an Academy Award for best actress last year in "Mary Poppins," will be honored by National General Corporation at 10:30 a.m. Saturday when she places her hand-footprints in the forecourt of the circuit's Grauman's Chinese Theater.

Miss Andrews will become the 151st film celebrity to participate in the ceremonies, dating back to 1927 when theater impresario Sid Grauman brought film actress Norma Talmadge to view the progress made in constructing the new theater. Miss Talmadge stepped into a block of newly poured cement, resulting in leaving her footprint, and the tradition started.

'Born Yesterday' at Melodyland Tuesday

Don DeFore, Pamela Britton and Frank Aletter, TV and film stars head the cast of Garson Kanin's Broadway and motion picture comedy, "Born Yesterday," opening a limited two-week engagement at Melodyland Theater in Anaheim Tuesday.

DeFore, long a favorite on television's "Hazel" series, is cast as the brash and boisterous Harry Brock, millionaire junk dealer, in the stage hit, with Miss Britton as the delightfully dizzy Billie Dawn, whose first encounter with Class and Culture, in the person of erudite young journalist Aletter, causes her cozy "arrangement" with DeFore to turn into a not-so-comfortable triangle.

Featuring Stevan Darrell, Larry Oliver, Madge Kennedy, Edgar Hess and Vivian Neuberg, the comedy is directed by David Pardoll for producers Sammy Lewis and Danny Dare.

It remains at Melodyland through March 6.

Burnett to Do 'Stiletto' Script

W. R. Burnett has been signed to write the screenplay of Harold Robbins' novel, "Stiletto." The drama, which has a New York and European setting, will be filmed in late summer or early fall in Hollywood.

Burnett has scripted "Little Caesar," "High Sierra," "This Gun for Hire," "Asphalt Jungle" and "The Great Escape."

'PRINCE AND PIRATES'

State Profs' Original at L.B. State

A pirate's plan to kidnap the king of a mythical Mediterranean kingdom is the plot of an original children's play opening at 7:30 p.m. Thursday in the Long Beach State College campus theater.

"The Prince and the Pirates," written by Herbert Camburn, associate professor of drama, and Kenneth Rugg, instructor of drama, author of "The Firebird" presented at State last year will continue Friday at 8:30 p.m. and on Saturday with a 2 p.m. matinee and an 8:30 p.m. performance.

Involved with the king, prince and the pirates is a band of gypsies led by Queen Zellina who seeks the king's patronage. More complications ensue when the pirates mutiny.

"The Prince and the Pirates," the third major production of the 1965-66 theater season presented by the CSCLB Department of Drama, is under the direction of Rugg. Set designs are by Camburn.

Stage manager is R. Mark Williams. Susan Thomas is assistant director.

Costumes for the production have been designed by Carol Robinson. Lighting is by Mark Kaye, and choreography is by Joy Coppola.

Following the campus performances "The Prince and the Pirates" will tour Southern California for four weeks.

Julie's Prints for Chinese

HOLLYWOOD — Film star Julie Andrews, who won an Academy Award for best actress last year in "Mary Poppins," will be honored by National General Corporation at 10:30 a.m. Saturday when she places her hand-footprints in the forecourt of the circuit's Grauman's Chinese Theater.

Miss Andrews will become the 151st film celebrity to participate in the ceremonies, dating back to 1927 when theater impresario Sid Grauman brought film actress Norma Talmadge to view the progress made in constructing the new theater. Miss Talmadge stepped into a block of newly poured cement, resulting in leaving her footprint, and the tradition started.

Off Set, Sean Connery's Nothing Like Agent 007

By NORMAN MOSS

LONDON (NANA) — He was christened Thomas, and his friends call him "Tommy."

If his real name were James Bond, they would call him "Jimmy." He's that sort of person.

When he was in the Royal Navy, he was an able seaman, not a commander, like Bond, and no one would ever mistake him for one.

The relationship between Sean Connery and James Bond is purely a professional one, albeit fantastically lucrative. Off the film set, they have nothing to do with each other.

* * * *

IF JAMES BOND were living in London today, he and Sean Connery would probably never meet.

Bond lunches and dines at small restaurants known to gourmets for their cuisine. Connery dines at a showbiz place, on steak and french fries as like as not, or else at home.

James Bond drinks at the Ritz bar. Connery drinks at a pub.

Bond is known to a few small, but fashionable, stores that cater to his tastes in silks and toiletries. Connery, like most Scots, thinks that sort of thing is just English cissiness.

Bond plays bridge in the evening, or some other game for high stakes, at Blade's, his exclusive club on Pall Mall. Connery doesn't gamble, and probably would not be allowed into Blade's.

About the only place they might possibly meet is at the golf course. Connery, like Bond, is a keen golfer.

* * * *

SEAN CONNERY is an Edinburg truck-driver's son and one-time bricklayer, truck driver and lifeguard who became an actor originally because he was rugged, handsome and needed a job. Now he takes action seriously, and is good at it.

He does not have fastidious tastees. He is never concerned about whether his martini is stirred or shaken; he will not drink it anyway if there is scotch or beer available. He drives a Jaguar with no supercharger and no special attachments, though he drives it very fast. He thinks guns are unpleasant and dangerous things, and would not dream of having one in the house.

Sean Connery is a nice, friendly sort of a guy you might meet in a bar or bowling alley, who happens to have made a mint of money.

* * * *

THOUGH HE was a successful actor and a good one before he stepped into James Bond's hand-stitched shoes, the Bond phenomenon grew up around him. He has no part of it.

007 AND WIFE, DIANE CILENTO
She Trusts Him

When Bond shoots up into the air on his one-man rocket in "Thunderball," it is the director and effects man who pushes that button. Sean Connery is a guided missile, projected by a team of writers and directors into Everyman's imagination, where he homes in on the wish-fantasies.

Sean Connery himself is constantly pictured in the magazines of the world with breathtakingly gorgeous girls, wearing bikinis trimmed in the oddest places, and evidently panting with frustration that this shred of garment should remain between them and Connery's manliness.

* * * *

A little while ago, when he dropped into a pub near his home, a slightly drunk little man started badgering him, asking whether he was really such hell with women, "Are you really so tough and suave and irresistible as all that?" he jeered.

Quietly, and rather crudely, Connery told the man what to do. Wisely, he did it.

When he had gone, an onlooker remarked, "Well anyway, he's not suave."

Connery has usually had women around him but he has never been a full-time charmer. Julia Foot, an actress he took out when he first started his acting career, says, "He was tremendously attractive, of course, and the girls in the company used to talk about him. But he didn't go around picking up girls. He was rather shy, in fact. That was one of the sweet things about him."

He grew less shy as the years went on and had a

Off Set, Sean Connery's Nothing Like Agent 007

By NORMAN MOSS

LONDON (NANA) — He was christened Thomas, and his friends call him "Tommy."

If his real name were James Bond, they would call him "Jimmy." He's that sort of person.

When he was in the Royal Navy, he was an able seaman, not a commander, like Bond, and no one would ever mistake him for one.

The relationship between Sean Connery and James Bond is purely a professional one, albeit fantastically lucrative. Off the film set, they have nothing to do with each other.

* * * *

IF JAMES BOND were living in London today, he and Sean Connery would probably never meet.

Bond lunches and dines at small restaurants known to gourmets for their cuisine. Connery dines at a showbiz place, on steak and french fries as like as not, or else at home.

James Bond drinks at the Ritz bar, Connery drinks at a pub.

Bond is known to a few small, but fashionable, stores that cater to his tastes in silks and toiletries. Connery, like most Scots, thinks that sort of thing is just English cissiness.

Bond plays bridge in the evening, or some other game for high stakes, at Blade's, his exclusive club on Pall Mall. Connery doesn't gamble, and probably would not be allowed into Blade's.

About the only place they might possibly meet is at the golf course. Connery, like Bond, is a keen golfer.

* * * *

SEAN CONNERY is an Edinburg truck-driver's son and one-time bricklayer, truck driver and lifeguard who became an actor originally because he was rugged, handsome and needed a job. Now he takes action seriously, and is good at it.

He does not have fastidious tastees. He is never concerned about whether his martini is stirred or shaken; he will not drink it anyway if there is scotch or beer available. He drives a Jaguar with no supercharger and no special attachments, though he drives it very fast. He thinks guns are unpleasant and dangerous things, and would not dream of having one in the house.

Sean Connery is a nice, friendly sort of a guy you might meet in a bar or bowling alley, who happens to have made a mint of money.

* * * *

THOUGH HE was a successful actor and a good one before he stepped into James bond's hand-stitched shoes, the Bond phenomenon grew up around him. He has no part of it.

007 AND WIFE, DIANE CILENTO
She Trusts Him

When Bond shoots up into the air on his one-man rocket in "Thunderball," it is the director and effects man who pushes that button. Sean Connery is a guided missile, projected by a team of writers and directors into Everyman's imagination, where he homes in on the wish-fantasies.

Sean Connery himself is constantly pictured in the magazines of the world with breathtakingly gorgeous girls, wearing bikinis trimmed in the oddest places, and evidently panting with frustration that this shred of garment should remain between them and Connery's manliness.

* * * *

SMALL WONDER that some elements of male resentment should attach themselves to Connery.

A little while ago, when he dropped into a pub near his home, a slightly drunk little man started badgering him, asking whether he was really such hell with women, "Are you really so tough and suave and irresistible as all that?" he jeered.

Quietly, and rather crudely, Connery told the man what to do. Wisely, he did it.

When he had gone, an onlooker remarked: "Well anyway, he's not suave."

Connery has usually had women around him but he has never been a full-time charmer. Julia Foot, an actress he took out when he first started his acting career, says, "He was tremendously attractive, of course, and the girls in the company used to talk about him. But he didn't go around picking up girls. He was rather shy, in fact. That was one of the sweet things about him."

He grew less shy as the years went on and had a number of girl friends in the profession. None was a star; a few were some years older than him. He was once engaged briefly to an actress.

ALIAS JAMES BOND

* * * *

THREE and a half years ago, he married Diane Cilento, a very talented and beautiful actress who somehow never became the top-line star that many thought she would be. When they are apart, he telephones her every evening.

Asked once whether she ever feels jealous because her husband is surrounded by the most desirable females filmland can find, she said, "I'm not jealous because I have no reason to be." Friends say she is right.

Their marriage has had its storms. They were apart briefly after a spat last year.

They have a 3-year-old son, Jason, and Diane's 7-year-old daughter by a previous marriage, Giovanna. They live in a large house in Acton, a London suburb, that used to be a nunnery, and if there have been a lot of jokes about this, none of them has come from Sean.

His only hobby is golf, for which he has developed a truly Scottish passion. He spends every spare moment he can find at the golf course.

Among friends, when he is relaxed, he can be conversational and witty, with a quick, sometimes bawdy humor. He talks earnestly and intelligently about the films and the theater.

* * * *

BUT HE did not grow up in very sophisticated circles, and at a party for movie and theater folk, he is likely to be on edge, sometimes answering in little more than monosyllables when people gush at him.

"He's a hard man to get to know," someone usually says.

He is worse still with the press. He normally refuses to be interviewed, and can turn brusquely on his heel when asked some vapid questions about the James Bond life. He rarely offers opinions on films.

He answered my questions the first time I met him, on the set of "The Hill," partly because I didn't ask about James Bond.

We talked about this film, which is set in a wartime British Army prison, and about military discipline: "Three years of it in the Navy gave me stomach ulcers when I was 19," he said.

* * * *

THERE IS the story that Connery was chosen for the Bond part in a contest by the readers of a London newspaper, but things are not done so casually when that much money is at stake. They chose Connery as an actor possessing all the physical attributes and the acting talent, and not yet fixed firmly in the public mind in other roles.

He was not sure at first whether to take the part.

"This Bond character could be really good, but only if it's done with a touch of humor," he said. He said this to Terrence Young, who was to direct the film, and Young agreed.

Ian Fleming was none too happy about the choice. He had drawn a pen portrait of a suave, worldly, naval commander such as he might have known in his own wartime days in naval intelligence. What he saw before him was a rough-hewn former able seaman with "Scotland Forever" tatooed on one arm, and "Mum and Dad" on the other. It was Terrence Young who persuaded him that Connery could play the part.

Connery signed a contract to make a James Bond picture, and five others if this was a success. But he was cautious: he would make them no more frequently than one every 14 months, so that he could still make other films.

The rest is known to every schoolboy, and none more than the schoolboys. "From Russia with Love" broke box-office records around the world, "Dr. No" topped that, "Goldfinger" topped that, and "Thunderball" is hitting the fantastic norm for a James Bond film.

They keep coming back to the movie houses, and packing them in each time.

It has made Connery rich as well as famous. He was paid $1,000 a week on the first Bond picture; since then, his fee has been much, much higher, and included a slice of the profits.

It has certainly given him the money and name to do other things that he wanted to do: he has played some classic roles, and he has made a film with Alfred Hitchcock, a director he has always wanted to work with.

Now, between Bond pictures, he is going to fulfill another ambition: he is going to direct a play, this spring, and it will be in New York.

* * * *

THE NEW YORK stage directing stint will take him just about up to his next James Bond picture, "You Only Live Twice," which is due to start filming in Japan in June or July.

His contract calls for him to make this, and then one more James Bond film. After that, they can offer him the part again, and negotiate a new contract.

Connery has already indicated his terms. They are pretty stiff ones.

"They'll have to offer me a million dollars a picture, and 10 per cent of the gross. Then I'll start talking about it."

* * * *

PEOPLE who do get to know him usually like him. He has both friends and admirers in the profession.

Says Sydney Lumet, who directed "The Hill": "He's a superb technical actor. He knows his craft."

Ursula Andress, perhaps his most famous leading lady in a Bond film, says, "He's a nice person to work with. And he's all man."

An English secretary of the film production company: "He's very male and you don't see a lot of that around in England today. Everyone's looking dandified, and the with-it thing now is to be rather camp. Now is to be rather camp. Sean's totally masculine."

Someone mentioned him recently to Francoise Rosay, the aging but still magnificent French star who played in a British television play with him, "He's very sweet, and a very good actor," she said. "But I find he lacks sex appeal, like most English men."

Well, that's the sore of thing that makes horse races."

Now, between Bond pictures, he is going to fulfill another ambition: he is going to direct a play, this spring, and it will be in New York.

* * * *

THE NEW YORK stage directing stint will take him just about up to his next James Bond picture, "You Only Live Twice," which is due to start filming in Japan in June or July.

His contract calls for him to make this, and then one more James Bond film. After that, they can offer him the part again, and negotiate a new contract.

Connery has already indicated his terms. They are pretty stiff ones.

"They'll have to offer me a million dollars a picture, and 10 per cent of the gross. Then I'll start talking about it."

* * * *

PEOPLE who do get to know him usually like him. He has both friends and admirers in the profession.

Says Sydney Lumet, who directed "The Hill": "He's a superb technical actor. He knows his craft."

Ursula Andress, perhaps his most famous leading lady in a Bond film, says, "He's a nice person to work with. And he's all man."

An English secretary of the film production company: "He's very male and you don't see a lot of that around in England today. Everyone's looking dandified, and the with-it thing now is to be rather camp, now is to be rather camp. Sean's totally masculine."

Someone mentioned him recently to Francoise Rosay, the aging but still magnificent French star who played in a British television play with him. "He's very sweet, and a very good actor," she said. "But I find he lacks sex appeal, like most English men."

Well, that's the sore of thing that makes horse races."

FINANCIAL SUCCESS
BEGINS WITH OUR COUPON!

If you'd like to write your own pay-check, start by filling in the coupon below and we'll furnish you with the details on AAMCO—America's Largest Transmission Specialists, with over 200 franchised shops coast to coast. We'll show you that AAMCO shops across the country are averaging an annual gross of $100,000 (best shops gross over $250,000), making possible personal incomes of $30,000 to $50,000 per year. We'll show you that after a partly-financeable investment of $12,500 to $23,000, depending on size and territory, you will be trained thoroughly in the most advanced merchandising and management techniques, and with no need for automotive experience. And finally, we'll show you that AAMCO profits begin the first week of operation and continue for 52 weeks a year, unaffected by seasonal slumps or recessions. If you'd like to learn more about one of the world's most wanted franchises . . . if you're not afraid to work hard, then don't delay any longer; and send in the coupon right now.

FINANCIAL SUCCESS BEGINS WITH OUR COUPON!

If you'd like to write your own pay-check, start by filling in the coupon below and we'll furnish you with the details on AAMCO — America's Largest Transmission Specialists, with over 200 franchised shops coast to coast. We'll show you that AAMCO shops across the country are averaging an annual gross of $100,000 (best shops gross over $250,000), making possible personal incomes of $30,000 to $50,000 per year. We'll show you that after a partly-financeable investment of $12,500 to $23,000, depending on site and territory, you will be trained thoroughly in the most advanced merchandising and management techniques, and with no need for automotive experience. And finally, we'll show you that AAMCO profits begin the first week of operation and continue for 52 weeks a year, unaffected by seasonal slumps or recessions. If you'd like to learn more about one of the world's most wanted franchises . . . if you're not afraid to work hard, then don't delay any longer and send in the coupon right now.

We'll be happy to take your ad on Friday!
. . . but if you call on Wednesday or Thursday we'll be able to help much faster

Because of the unprecedented demand for Sunday I.P.-T Classified Ads, our phone room is literally swamped with calls on Friday. Sometimes you might even have to wait a short while for a line to open before we can help you with your ad. That's why we'd like to suggest that you call in your ad a day or two earlier if at all possible. Of course, if you can't call early, Friday will be just fine! . . . Thank you.

ATTENTION PROPERTY OWNERS
Before you buy or sell that lot, investigate its potentials. If it is zoned for apartments or not, we will make a survey without obligation to you, to determine if it is advisable for you to build or to sell. We check your lot size, zoning, vacancy factor & rent schedules in your area; we advise as to what is best suited to the neighborhood, what we think belongs on your lot and what it costs to build. We show you how it can be financed, what your income & expenses will be and how much cash income is yours each month. If it makes 5 cents $ to build, we can provide 100% financing for the entire project.

ATTENTION PROPERTY OWNERS
Before you buy or sell that lot, investigate its potentials. If it is zoned for apartments or not, we will make a survey without obligation to you, to determine if it is advisable for you to build or to sell. We check your lot size, zoning, vacancy factor & rent schedules in your area; we advise as to what is best suited to the neighborhood, what we think belongs on your lot and what it costs to build. We show you how it can be financed, what your income & expenses will be and how much cash income is yours each month. If it makes 3 cents $ to build, we can provide 100% financing for the entire project.

POOL, PARK & PALACE
On a quiet tree shaded street rises a most impressive residence surrounded with lush professional landscaping, creating a better than lark-like atmosphere. Leading past a private fence and recently trimmed, but expensive shrubs is a rather attractive entryway. Within this fine home of many custom built-in quality features are FOUR LARGE BEDROOMS and separate matching closets. Glide through a spacious grand piano sized living room, so arranged as to accommodate virtually any furniture decor with picture windows overlooking a most inviting park and pool-side setting. Some of the additional features included in this luxurious home are a family size kitchen with separate dining area, loads of cabinets, long smooth counter tops and RANGE AND OVEN. Leaving this queen's palace for a rear yard expanse, we observed a huge COVERED PATIO and TONS of warm concrete decking surrounding a CUSTOM DESIGNED POOL of blue water complete with all the equipment and underwater marine lighting. A PICTURE too beautiful for words, this magnificent POOL, PARK and PALACE suits your meticulous inspection and is now quoted at the low, low price of only $20,000 even. Ask for #C-1.

POOL, PARK & PALACE
On a quiet tree shaded street rises a most impressive residence surrounded with lush professional landscaping, creating a better than park-like atmosphere. Leading past a private fence and recently trimmed, but expensive shrubs is a rather attractive entryway. Within this fine home of many custom built-in quality features are FOUR LARGE BEDROOMS and separate matching closets. Glide through a spacious grand piano sized living room, so arranged as to accommodate virtually any furniture decor with picture windows overlooking a most inviting park and pool-side setting. Some of the additional features included in this luxurious home are a family size kitchen with separate dining area, loads of cabinets, long smooth counter tops and RANGE AND OVEN. Leaving this queen's palace for a rear yard exposure, we observed a huge COVERED PATIO and TONS of warm concrete decking surrounding a CUSTOM DESIGNED POOL of blue water complete with all the equipment and underwater marine lighting. A PICTURE too beautiful for words, this magnificent POOL, PARK and PALACE suits your meticulous inspection and is now quoted at the low, low price of only $20,000 even. Ask for #C-1.

POOL, PARK & PALACE
On a quiet tree shaded street rises a most impressive residence surrounded with lush professional landscaping, creating a better than park-like atmosphere. Leading past a private fence and recently trimmed, but expensive shrubs is a rather attractive entryway. Within this fine home of many custom built-in quality features are FOUR LARGE BEDROOMS and separate matching closets. Glide through a spacious grand piano sized living room, so arranged as to accommodate virtually any furniture decor with picture windows overlooking a most inviting park and pool-side setting. Some of the additional features included in this luxurious home are a family size kitchen with separate dining area, loads of cabinets, long smooth counter tops and RANGE AND OVEN. Leaving this queen's palace for a rear yard excursion, we observed a huge COVERED PATIO and TONS of warm concrete decking surrounding a CUSTOM DESIGNED POOL of blue water complete with all the equipment and underwater marine lighting. A PICTURE too beautiful for words, this magnificent POOL, PARK and PALACE suits your meticulous inspection and is now quoted at the low, low price of only $20,000 even. Ask for #C-1.

Ducks Doom Final UCLA Hopes, 79-72

EUGENE (UPI)—Jim Barnett scored 33 points to lead the Oregon Ducks to a 79-72 victory over UCLA Saturday afternoon and virtually end the Bruins' chances for a fifth straight AAWU basketball championship.

The Bruins, who have won two straight NCAA titles, suffered their fourth loss in 10 league games.

Barnett, a 6-4 senior, hit 10 of 22 field goal attempts and made 13 of 13 free throw shots for a career high point total. He also was the Ducks' top rebounder with 11.

THE DUCKS led all the way in the second half after holding a 32-29 edge at the intermission. Their biggest advantage in the game was 12 points—62-50—with 8½ minutes to play.

UCLA, playing without starting forwards Edgar Lacey and Doug McIntosh, was paced by Kenny Washington, who had 28 points and 20 rebounds.

Barnett ran his career scoring total to 1,237 points at Oregon, 85 short of the record held by Charlie Warren. He has four games left to break the mark.

SAM IN DRIVER'S SEAT

Celtics' Sam Jones drives past Lakers' Jerry West before running into blocking effort of Leroy Ellis. Jones fired in time for two points.

Lakers Bruised by Bandaged Celtics

By DOUG IVES

Boston's world champion Celtics started five players swathed in bandages and lost another with a concussion Saturday night, but it was a rested and healthy Lakers who came away with bruised feelings.

Coming off a 3-game losing streak, Boston spurted away in the final 4½ minutes to continue their mastery over the Lakers, 115-111, before a crowd of 14,409 in the LA Sports Arena.

Coach Fred Schaus wasn't terribly upset that his Lakers lost, but most of the fans were since what they saw in the Celtics was a walking advertisement for Johnson & Johnson.

Sam and K. C. Jones wore knee braces, Bill Russell and Willie Naulls thigh wraps and Tom Sanders was the most banged-up of all, wearing both.

"We weren't ready physically for a good effort, but we gave one," is the way Boston coach Red Auerbach put it after his club maintained its slim Eastern Division lead by conquering the Lakers for the sixth time in nine tries.

Incidentally, it has been two years since the Lakers have beaten the Celtics two games in succession. Having whipped them last Sunday in Boston, they had a chance to do it Saturday.

Schaus felt the Lakers played well, but that the Celtics just played better. "You catch them after they lose three in a row and you can expect trouble."

* * * *

THE CELTICS shot only 41% from the field, but their buckle-to-buckle defense harassed the Lakers into numerous off-balance shots and also held Jerry West to 16 attempts.

When the Lakers' sharpshooter can get off only that many against the likes of Boston, the Lakers don't have much of a chance. West totaled 23 points to tie Rudy LaRusso for team honors.

Sam Jones sparked the Celtics with 35 points in a gutty 38-minute performance necessitated by an injury to his sub, Larry Seigfried, who suffered a concussion in a freak second-period mishap.

* * * *

THE FOUR-YEAR veteran from Ohio State, always tough on the Lakers, ran into LaRusso's shoulder on a "blind pick" in the backcourt, toppled to the floor and eventually had to be carried off on a stretcher.

A fractured cheekbone was feared, but x-rays at Daniel Freeman Hospital showed "only" a concussion. He will miss Monday's game here against the Lakers, however.

The Lakers fought back from a 12-point deficit in the first half and from a 8-point disadvantage in the second half to finally draw even 98-98 with 5:47 to go.

In the next three minutes, however, the Celtics spurted 108-101 on the shooting of S. Jones, then with their lead down to 110-105, the Celtics got a big break.

Laker speedster Jimmy King slipped in the forecourt, lost the ball and Boston turned it into a basket by Sanders that sealed the Lakers' defeat.

FIFTH STRAIGHT CCAA TITLE

Fresno Foils 49er Upset Bid, 84-77

By BRUCE YOUNG

It started out as a rout and ended as a dog fight.

The mighty Fresno State Bulldogs walked into the Long Beach State College gym as the four-time conference champions and just did stumble out with an 84-77 victory Saturday night over a fired-up Long Beach State team.

The win clinched the Bulldogs' fifth successive CCAA crown and gives them a 17-6 season record. The 49ers, who closed out their home season Saturday, now own a 7-16 season log and 2-6 conference mark with two games remaining.

* * * *

FRESNO STATE not only looked like CCAA champs, but also world champions in the first half. The Bulldogs snapped precision passes and systematically cut the 49er defense to shreds.

The winners at one juncture enjoyed a 23-point lead as the 49ers could score only 16 points in the first 13 minutes. Then Carl Washington came on to spark the sagging LBSC hopes.

Long Beach was down 44-21 with three minutes remaining, but Washington ran circles around the retreating Bulldogs, sparking the 49ers to 11 consecutive points. The winners took a 46-32 lead into the locker room.

The second half started as a duplication of the first, but Washington and center Ed Tucker changed the script. Dick Perry's club found itself back in the game, 10 down with 10:19 remaining.

Fresno began to run into foul trouble as 6-7 all-American center Lonnie Hughey fouled out with 10 minutes to go. The 49ers continued to press the Bulldogs and got within eight with 8:40 to go.

Coach Ed Gregory sent his team into a stall and Long Beach was forced into fouls while trying to grab the elusive ball.

Fresno showed its mettle at the free throw line, hitting 16 of 18 clutch shots in the last nine minutes. This was clearly the margin of victory as the 49ers hit only 64% of their charity tosses in the same span.

LBSC had one of its best nights from the field, hitting 45% (25-56) but it was to no avail as the winners hit 55% (31-52).

* * * *

THE 49ERS speed demon Washington had his finest night of the year. The Poly high grad played flawlessly both offensively and defensively. It was his lightning speed that sparked the vaunted fast break and the junior guard still found time to pop in 20 points.

Cubs' Ticket Sale Greatest In 20 Years

By AL LARSON

Odds-makers have established the Cubs as longshots of 75-1 to win the National League pennant, but it hasn't shaken the confidence of fans in Chicago.

With Leo Durocher hailed as the Cubs' new liberator, ticket sales are up 30% over a year ago. Cub ticket manager Jack Maloney says this represents the greatest advance sale he's seen in 20 years with the club.

The Cubs, who open spring training in Long Beach Feb. 28, will learn in a hurry if Durocher can break their losing habit. Their first 12 games of the season are with the Dodgers and Giants, who are quoted as 2-1 and 4-1 to win the championship.

* * * *

CHICAGO opens the campaign with a three-game series in San Francisco, then plays three in Los Angeles. The Cubs then return home for identical back-to-back series with the Giants and Dodgers.

All workouts at Blair Field will be open to the public with no admission. Sessions will start daily at 10:30.

The Cubs, who haven't finished in the first division since 1946, were only two games out of fifth place late last August, but fell apart the final six weeks. They finished eighth. It's Durocher's job to see this doesn't happen again.

* * * *

He's told various audiences in Chicago that outfielder Billy Williams is one of the five top players in baseball. "I wouldn't trade him for three Frank Robinsons . . . Ron Santo is the best third baseman in either league . . . As for Ernie Banks, he comes with the franchise and I'm glad to have him on my side for a change."

Leo adds, "If you rule out Sandy Koufax, where is there a better lefthander than Dick Ellsworth? Ted Abernathy is

3 TITLES IN ONE DAY FOR NET QUEEN KING

CHESTNUT HILL, Mass. (UPI) — Mrs. Billie Jean Moffit King of Alhambra, Calif., emerged a triple winner Saturday from the USLTA national women's indoor tennis championships with victories in singles, doubles and mixed doubles contests.

Mrs. King, who shares the women's top-ranking in the U.S., downed Mary Ann Eisel of St. Louis 6-0, 6-2, for the individual crown, deftly outplaying Miss Eisel by dropping lobs and shots into every section of the court. Mrs. King's win was her first national signals title.

The championships were held at Longwood Cricket Club.

The tall tennis queen, playing far better than in last weekend's New England indoor matches at Salem, Mass., went on from the Eisel match to take the doubles wins.

In a hard-fought, three-hour mixed doubles game, Mrs. King and Paul Sullivan of Belmont, Mass., upset defending champions Miss Eisel and Chumley Steele III of Cambridge, Mass., 11-13, 9-7, 9-7. Mrs. King and Sullivan were second-seeded.

In the day's final match, Mrs. King teamed up with Rosemary Casals, 17, of San Francisco to whip the top-seeded combination of Mrs. Carol Hanks Aucamp and Justina Bricka, both of St. Louis, for the doubles title.

Lippy Hottest Chicago Item Since '71 Fire

(Ed. note: Jim Enright, veteran baseball writer of Chicago's American, has covered the Cubs since Phil Cavarretta was in knee pants. Last month he followed Leo Durocher on a goodwill tour through Illinois and has been in constant touch with the team and front office. This is his pre-season analysis of the Cubs.)

By JIM ENRIGHT

CHICAGO — San Diego's world famous zoo will have a definite rival in Long Beach's Blair Field come Monday, Feb. 28.

That is the day 44 Cubs will spring from their cage with baseball's most colorful Lion leading the way. The Lion is Leo Durocher, and the Cubs are the Chicago Cubs—clawless little Bears who have been hibernating in the National league's second division for the last 19 years.

While nobody yet is positive about the class of baseball the Cubs will play under Durocher—the team's first manager since 1960 — this much is certain: Blair Field won't lack for color, comment, and contrast.

* * * *

DUROCHER'S signing with the Cubs last October just automatically made Leo Chicago's hottest item since Mrs. O'Leary's cow kicked over the lantern to start a fire which all but wiped the city off the map in 1871.

First of all it marked the end of the College of Coaches, a dismal rule by committee failure which reduced a once-proud and powerful organization to rabble. During the tenure of the revolving head coach system, the Cubs had trouble staying ahead of the two new expansion teams —the Astros and Mets—as well as the sheriff.

Attendance last year failed to reach the 650,000 mark in Wrigley field here, and this is the situation the brash, hossy Durocher has been called in to remedy as quickly as possible.

And let there be no ques-

Trojans Detour OSU Title Drive

CORVALLIS, Ore. — USC slowed Oregon State's drive toward the AAWU basketball title Saturday night by clipping the Beavers, 70-60, as John Block and Harvey Dillon combined for 50 points.

Oregon State (8-2) continues to lead the race by two games with four remaining. The Trojans, Oregon, UCLA and Stanford are tied for second with 6-4 records.

Block, who scored 44 points against Oregon Friday night, had 23 at halftime of Saturday's game and the Trojans led by three.

The Beavers went into a zone defense in the final half and restricted Block to seven points, but the strategy backfired when Dillon began successfully sniping over the defenders. He finished with 20 points.

USC went ahead for good, 47-46, on Doug Bolcom's long set shot with 10 minutes remaining. It was the sophomore Dillon's shooting that quickly turned the tide in USC's favor. He hit six points. With two minutes remaining, the Trojans had extended their margin to 13 points, 65-52.

Former all-CIF star Loy Peterson of Anaheim led the Beavers with 25 points.

PASARELL, HOLMBERG IN NET FINALS

SALISBURY, Md. (AP) — Charlie Pasarell of Puerto Rico and Ron Holmberg of Dallas, two of the game's most gifted and most erratic shotmakers, battled their way Saturday into the finals of the National Indoor Tennis Championships.

Pasarell, 22, a senior at UCLA, shook off one of his periodic letdowns and eliminated Brazil's giant-killer, Tomas Koch, 6-3, 8-6, 5-7, 10-8.

Holmberg, 28, a paunchy hotel representative from Dallas, displayed alternate brilliance and nochalance in erasing another foreign threat, Cliff Drysdale of South Africa, 6-2, 2-6, 6-2, 5-7, 6-4.

VANCOUVER, B.C. (AP) — Dyrol Burleson breezed to victory in the mile, feature of the Canadian Indoor track championships here Saturday night.

The University of Oregon distance ace was clocked in 4:04.7, more than five seconds ahead of Dave Bailey, of Toronto.

Veteran shotputter Parry O'Brien won his specialty with a toss of 64 feet.

Why Cooke Won and Blades Lost

We may step on a few toes with this column, but its contents should clarify the Southern California hockey situation which, for the most part, is muddled in the minds of most readers and fans.

In writing that the Blades should have secured the new National Hockey League franchise (because they pioneered the sport in Los Angeles and spent years struggling to orient Southlanders) and that the Coliseum Commission's support hurt the Blades more than it helped them, we inadvertently opened the door for further information.

When Jack Kent Cooke (in presenting his bid to NHL officials) said he would build his own arena in Los Angeles, that virtually locked up his case. THE NATIONAL HOCKEY LEAGUE LIKES ITS CLUBS TO OWN THEIR OWN ARENAS SO THEY CAN CONTROL THE PLAYING DATES! And Cooke was the only L. A. bidder to make such a promise.

Traditionally, NHL hockey is played on Saturday and Sunday, with only a few games during the week. This could not have been possible in the Sports Arena because of basketball and other commitments.

HOWEVER, other sources have informed us that Cooke never will build his own arena—AND NEVER INTENDED TO, no matter what he says. It was a blackjack to use on the Sports Arena, which is reacting as Cooke expected—running on bended knee with a better offer!

As for Cooke's commitment to build his own arena, he's too smart to ask the NHL to let him off the hook, but it's just a matter of time until the Sports Arena does. The Coliseum Commission (Sports Arena) will promise the NHL prime dates and LOWER RENT . . . and since Cooke also controls the Lakers it's likely THEY won't complain much.

I'm informed also that the so-called plans Cooke showed the NHL were the ones originally rejected by San Diego as too gaudy and expensive. Questioned on that, Cooke said: "You'd better talk to Luckman (the architect)."

"POOR MANAGEMENT" charges against the Blades were not unfounded, although they had been corrected in recent months—too late to help.

Under the old arrangement, the silent partner (Dan Reeves) was in this area devoting all his attention to the Rams; the active partner (Jim Piggott) who had Reeves' proxy, usually was in Saskatoon and gave his coaches no authority to make deals on their own, until Lynn Patrick took over this season.

Then Reeves also brought in Dan Martin, former under-secretary of commerce under Kennedy and LBJ, to lead the NHL bid. This was a mistake because Martin knows as much about hockey as the average kid on a Long Beach block. Leading the Blades' NHL move should have been Patrick and general manager Jack Geyer, both well-versed in the subject.

Martin had no money in the Blades' franchise, but was given a 30% share (the same as Reeves) and was committed to help with expansion expenses.

Piggott (wisely, we're told, because he hasn't been in the best of health) was backgrounded to a minority share. However, it was too late to swing the bid.

MAJOR LEAGUE HOCKEY won't arrive here until the 1967-68 season. What happens in the interim? The minor Western Hockey League apparently will continue to operate next season, but where?

The Blades would be crazy to operate in L. A. during the next campaign. On the other hand, Cooke would be crazy NOT to . . . even on a minor league basis until expansion arrives.

Will Cooke buy the Blades (and there's doubt Dan Reeves would sell to him)? He could rename them and keep their dozen players. Or will the Blades go to San Diego, which is scheduled to enter the Western League next season?

Or will Cooke get the Victoria club on an interim basis? The latter seems more logical, since Victoria is owned by Toronto (Stafford Smythe, an old friend of Cooke's) and is a small town which usually "lures" less than 2,000 per game.

The Victoria move to L. A. appears logical as Smythe would give his buddy Cooke a boost, and Southern California would have a top minor league team to whet the appetite for the following season's major leaguers.

THE BLADES' major league hopes flopped also because they failed to cultivate through the NHL . . . attending games, talking to others and just being seen around to show they're really interested.

Meanwhile, Cooke was hopping around like a flea on a dog's back, as far as the NHL governors were concerned. Some major Blades' personnel haven't been seen at a hockey game in two years! Whether Dan Reeves (who has enough problems with the Rams, I know) realizes it or not, Cooke had four of the six NHL votes on franchises locked-up BEFORE the big meeting.

Contrary to advice from people who know the NHL owners much better than Reeves or Martin, they sat on their backsides while Cooke was out hustling, confident that the franchise would be handed to them on a silver platter.

49ers Nip Chapman for Fourth Victory

Long Beach State College baseball team broke a 1-1 deadlock with a three-run eighth inning Saturday and went on to defeat host Chapman, 4-2, for its fourth victory of the season.

HARDLY A 'GALLOP' POLL

Kentucky, Duke Post Shaky Wins

Compiled from Wire Services

All of the nation's basketball leaders went to the post Saturday night and when the results were in Associated Press learned that it had constructed anything but a "gallop" poll.

Top-ranked Kentucky, runnerup Duke, third-ranked Texas Western and fifth-ranked Vanderbilt were all involved in photo-finishes before emerging unscathed. The remainder of top 10 raced to easy victories.

It was a night, however, for individual glory with Purdue's Dave Schellhase and Texas Tech's Dub Malaise netting the honors.

* * * *

SCHELLHASE set a Big Ten scoring record with 57 points as the Boilermakers fell to 10th-ranked Michigan, 128-94. The Wolverines' total was also a team record, breaking the mark of 122 points produced by Indiana in 1959.

Schellhase's final basket eclipsed the previous record of 56 set by Hoosier Jimmy Rayl.

Malaise tied the Southwest Conference individual scoring record with 50 points as Texas Tech established a league mark by smashing Texas, 117-86.

* * * *

KENTUCKY registered its 24th consecutive victory, its 21st of this season and its 12th in Southeastern Conference action, but it wasn't until the final buzzer that all this was for sure.

The Wildcats edged Mississippi State, 73-69, in a game which was tied 10 times and saw the lead change hands 10 times. Pat Riley paced Kentucky with 21 points and his set shot gave the Wildcats a 62-60 lead which they never relinquished during the tense final minutes.

Bob Verga, sidelined for two games after missing a curfew, came off the bench to score 27 points and lead Duke over Maryland, 74-69.

Duke trailed 44-29 early in the second half, but rallied behind Verga whose jumper put the Devils ahead, 66-64, with 3:05 to play.

Willie Cager's free throw with 2:17 remaining broke a 59-59 deadlock and unbeaten, third-ranked Texas Western went on to a 65-61 victory over Pan-American. It was Texas Western's 20th straight.

* * * *

FOURTH-RANKED Loyola led all the way to rack up its 20th win and avenge one of its two defeats with a 94-77 triumph over Wichita. Center Billy Smith led the attack with 22 points.

Fifth-ranked Vanderbilt was forced to employ a stall to preserve an 89-86 victory over Florida. Leading by 19 points in the second half, Vandy watched the Gators take advantage of erratic ballhandling to close the deficit to three points with two minutes remaining. The Commodores then froze the ball.

Keith Thomas led Vandy with 30 points.

Providence, ranked sixth, ran its record to 18-3 via a 77-57 decision over Seton Hall.

VETERAN coach Hank Iba,

* * * *

Veteran coach Hank Iba, a genius of defense, watched horrified as seventh-ranked Kansas crushed Oklahoma State, 80-47. It was the first time an Iba-coached team had yielded 80 points on its home court.

Tom Duff scored 26 points and grabbed 19 rebounds as eighth-ranked St. Joseph's clipped Creighton, 99-90. The triumph was St. Joseph's 19th of the season and sixth in a row.

Nebraska's Grant Simmons scored 28 points, 19 in the second half, to propel the ninth-ranked Cornhuskers to a 71-53 victory over Missouri. Nebraska is 9-0 in Big Eight play.

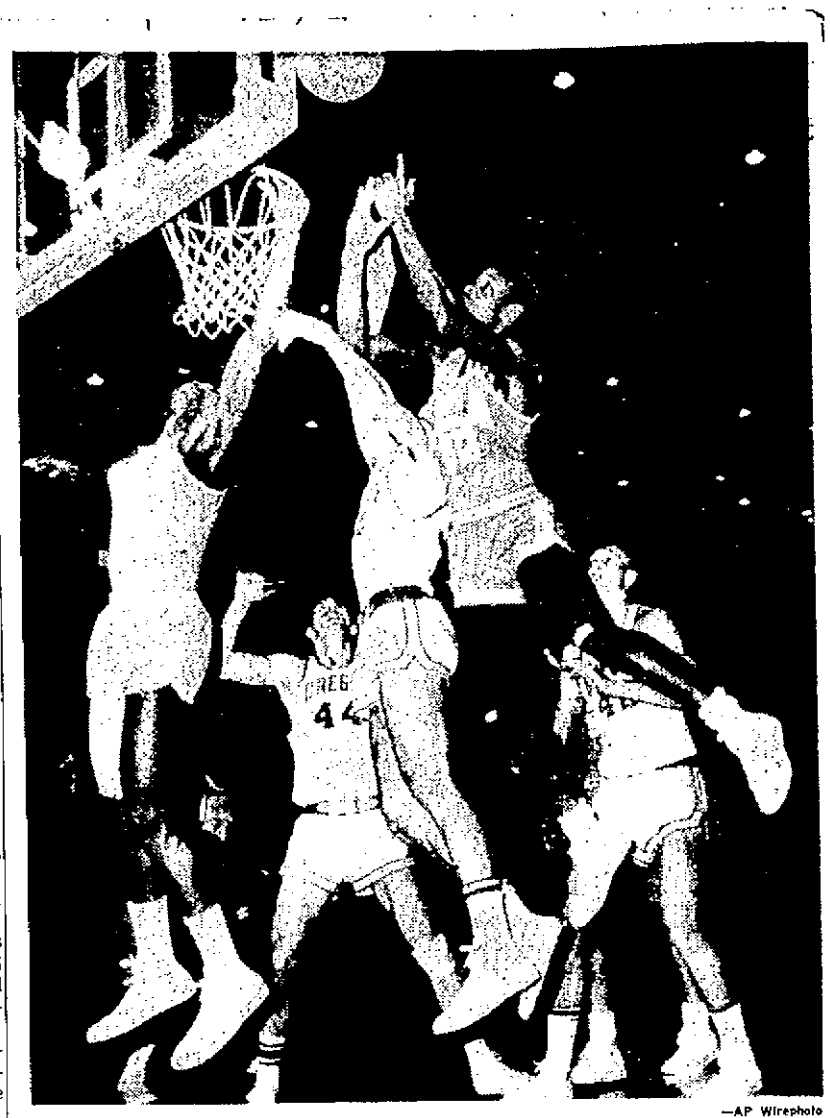

John Beasley hit 40 points as Texas A & M maintained its Southwest Conference lead via a 96-91 victory over Texas Christian.

DePaul enhanced its postseason tourney chances by defeating Duquesne, 79-69. The Blue Demons are 16-5.

Harris helped to break the game open after a close first half with his uncanny shooting. Bob Bedell backed him with 20 more points.

Stanford also prevailed on the boards, snagging 57 rebounds to 39 for Washington.

Last-Second Basket Nets Cal Victory

BERKELEY (UPI) — Myron Erickson meshed a jump shot with three seconds to play Saturday night to give California a 50-48 victory over Washington and deadlock the two teams for the cellar in the AAWU basketball race. Each squad now has a 2-8 mark.

Erickson contributed the winning bucket some three minutes after the Huskies had pulled into a 48-48 tie on Bruce Bricker's free throw.

The teams then tried to freeze the ball but constantly lost it on changeovers.

Washington twice led until 14:49 was played in the first half when the Bears went ahead and held the advantage until Bricker tied it. The latter paced the Huskies with 11 points while Cal's Steve Smith had 16 for the night's top honors.

By GREG MORENO

Millikan, displaying the class it flashed in winning two pre-league tournaments, protected its second place standing in the Moore League Saturday night by stopping Lakewood, 55-41, at Long Beach City College.

Lakewood's Jimmy Harris won his scoring battle with Bob Davis, 18-14, although Davis didn't appear too interested in scoring, taking only 11 shots.

The win was the 25th of the year for Millikan, which has lost three. Reserve Rick Wilson was the only other performer in double figures, scoring 10 for the Rams.

MEAN, UGLY FACE IS COACH'S LECTURE

ROME, N.Y. (AP)—The spectators are few and quiet at basketball games at the tiny high school. All 13 boy pupils play the sport. Half of the girls are cheerleaders, but their cheers ring out virtually unheard.

The youngsters at the New York State School for the Deaf play basketball under great handicaps.

"They can't hear the ball being dribbled," says coach Joe Gwara. "They can't hear a guy sneaking up from behind to steal the ball. They can't play man-to-man because they can't yell to each other to switch off. And if they take their eyes off the ball, they're liable to have a pass bounce off an ear."

The opposition can shout out its plays and set up offensive patterns verbally. And the referees have difficulties since their whistles don't halt hustling Romans.

Coach Gwara is one of the few, save the opposition, who can hear the cheers—and the opponents.

Like most teenagers, the team needs an occasional lecture.

To get his point across, says Gwara, "I just make the meanest, ugliest face I can."

76ers Nudge S.F.; Knicks Knock Cincy

SAN FRANCISCO (UPI)—Wally Jones and Al Bianchi each connected on clutch baskets during the final 40 seconds of play Saturday night to give Philadelphia a 123-119 victory over the San Francisco Warriors and keep the 76ers a half game behind the Boston Celtics in the NBA's Eastern Division race.

A driving layup by Al Attles of San Francisco deadlocked the score at the 40 second mark. But Jones hit on a 25-foot jumper and Bianchi put the game out of reach with a driving layup.

Rick Barry, the Warriors' rookie, led all the scorers with 40 points, 10 more than posted by the 76ers' Wilt Chamberlain.

Ducks Doom Final UCLA Hopes, 79-72

EUGENE (UPI)—Jim Barnett scored 33 points to lead the Oregon Ducks to a 79-72 victory over UCLA Saturday afternoon and virtually end the Bruins' chances for a fifth straight AAWU basketball championship.

The Bruins, who have won two straight NCAA titles, suffered their fourth loss in 10 league games.

Barnett, a 6-4 senior, hit 10 of 22 field goal attempts and made 13 of 13 free throw

The victory left Oregon with a 6-4 conference record and a 13-9 mark for the season.

THE DUCKS led all the way in the second half after holding a 32-29 edge at the intermission. Their biggest advantage in the game was 12 points—62-50—with 8½ minutes to play.

UCLA, playing without starting forwards Edgar Lacey and Doug McIntosh, was paced by Kenny Washington, who had 28 points and 20 rebounds.

Barnett ran his career scoring total to 1,237 points at Oregon, 85 short of the record held by Charlie Warren. He has four games left to break the mark.

SAM IN DRIVER'S SEAT

Celtics' Sam Jones drives past Lakers' Jerry West before running into blocking effort of Leroy Ellis. Jones fired in time for two points.

Lakers Bruised by Bandaged Celtics

By DOUG IVES

Boston's world champion Celtics started five players swathed in bandages and lost another with a concussion Saturday night, but it was a rested and healthy Lakers who came away with bruised feelings.

Coming off a 3-game losing streak, Boston spurted away in the final 4½ minutes to continue their mastery over the Lakers, 115-111, before a crowd of 14,409 in the LA Sports Arena.

Coach Fred Schaus wasn't terribly upset that his Lakers lost, but most of the fans were since what they saw in the Celtics was a walking advertisement for Johnson & Johnson.

Sam and K. C. Jones wore knee braces, Bill Russell and Willie Naulls thigh wraps and Tom Sanders was the most banged-up of all, wearing both.

"We weren't ready physically for a good effort, but we gave one," is the way Boston coach Red Auerbach put it after his club maintained its slim Eastern Division lead by conquering the Lakers for the sixth time in nine tries.

Incidentally, it has been two years since the Lakers have beaten the Celtics two games in succession. Having whipped them last Sunday in Boston, they had a chance to do it Saturday.

Schaus felt the Lakers played well, but that the Celtics just played better. "You catch them after they lose three in a row and you can expect trouble."

* * * *

THE CELTICS shot only 41% from the field, but their buckle-to-buckle defense harassed the Lakers into numerous off-balance shots and also held Jerry West to 16 attempts.

When the Lakers' sharpshooter can get off only that many against the likes of Boston, the Lakers don't have much of a chance. West totaled 23 points to tie Rudy LaRusso for team honors.

Sam Jones sparked the Celtics with 35 points in a gutty 38-minute performance necessitated by an injury to his sub, Larry Seigfried, who suffered a concussion in a freak second-period mishap.

* * * *

THE FOUR-YEAR veteran from Ohio State, always tough on the Lakers, ran into LaRusso's shoulder on a "blind pick" in the backcourt, toppled to the floor and eventually had to be carried off on a stretcher.

A fractured cheekbone was feared, but x-rays at Daniel Freeman Hospital showed "only" a concussion. He will miss Monday's game here against the Lakers, however.

The Lakers fought back from a 12-point deficit in the first half and from a 8-point disadvantage in the second half to finally draw even 98-98 with 5:47 to go.

In the next three minutes, however, the Celtics spurted 108-101 on the shooting of S. Jones, then with their lead down to 110-105, the Celtics got a big break.

Laker speedster Jimmy King slipped in the forecourt, lost the ball and Boston turned it into a basket by Sanders that sealed the Lakers' defeat.

FIFTH STRAIGHT CCAA TITLE

Fresno Foils 49er Upset Bid, 84-77

By BRUCE YOUNG

It started out as a rout and ended as a dog fight.

The mighty Fresno State Bulldogs walked into the Long Beach State College gym as the four-time conference champions and just did stumble out with an 84-77 victory Saturday night over a fired-up Long Beach State team.

The win clinched the Bulldogs' fifth successive CCAA crown and gives them a 17-6 season record. The 49ers, who closed out their home season Saturday, now own a 7-16 season log and 2-6 conference mark with two games remaining.

* * * *

FRESNO STATE not only looked like CCAA champs, but also world champions in the first half. The Bulldogs snapped precision passes and systematically cut the 49er defense to shreds.

The winners at one juncture enjoyed a 23-point lead as the 49ers could score only 16 points in the first 13 minutes. Then Carl Washington came on to spark the sagging LBSC hopes.

Long Beach was down 44-21 with three minutes remaining, but Washington ran circles around the retreating Bulldogs, sparking the 49ers to 11 consecutive points. The winners took a 46-32 lead into the locker room.

The second half started as a duplication of the first, but Washington and center Ed Tucker changed the script. Dick Perry's club found itself back in the game, 10 down with 10:19 remaining.

Fresno began to run into foul trouble as 6-7 all-America center Lonnie Hughey fouled out with 10 minutes to go. The 49ers continued to press the Bulldogs and got within eight with 8:40 to go.

Coach Ed Gregory sent his team into a stall and Long Beach was forced into fouls while trying to grab the elusive ball.

Fresno showed its mettle at the free throw line, hitting 16 of 18 clutch shots in the last nine minutes. This was clearly the margin of victory as the 49ers hit only 64% of their charity tosses in the same span.

LBSC had one of its best nights from the field, hitting 45% (25-56) but it was to no avail as the winners hit 55% (31-52).

* * * *

THE 49ERS speed demon Washington had his finest night of the year. The Poly high grad played flawlessly both offensively and defensively. It was his lightning speed that sparked the vaunted fast break and the junior guard still found time to pop in 20 points.

Hughey was held to six points, 13 points below his average, by Tucker and sophomore John Broeske.

Will Lion Leo Restore Cubs' Dormant Claws?

Cubs' Ticket Sale Greatest In 20 Years

By AL LARSON

Odds-makers have established the Cubs as longshots of 75-1 to win the National League pennant, but it hasn't shaken the confidence of fans in Chicago.

With Leo Durocher hailed as the Cubs' new liberator, ticket sales are up 30% over a year ago. Cub ticket manager Jack Maloney says this represents the greatest advance sale he's seen in 20 years with the club.

The Cubs, who open spring training in Long Beach Feb. 28, will learn in a hurry if Durocher can break their losing habit. Their first 12 games of the season are with the Dodgers and Giants, who are quoted as 2-1 and 4-1 to win the championship.

* * * *

CHICAGO opens the campaign with a three-game series in San Francisco, then plays three in Los Angeles. The Cubs then return home for identical back-to-back series with the Giants and Dodgers.

All workouts at Blair Field will be open to the public with no admission. Sessions will start daily at 10:30.

The Cubs, who haven't finished in the first division since 1946, were only two games out of fifth place late last August, but fell apart the final six weeks. They finished eighth. It's Durocher's job to see this doesn't happen again.

DUROCHER has been busy in recent weeks pumping up the confidence of his players.

He's told various audiences in Chicago that outfielder Billy Williams is one of the five top players in baseball. "I wouldn't trade him for three Frank Robinsons . . . Ron Santo is the best third baseman in either league . . . As for Ernie Banks, he comes with the franchise and I'm glad to have him on my side for a change."

Leo adds, "If you rule out Sandy Koufax, where is there a better lefthander than Dick Ellsworth? Ted Abernathy is

3 TITLES IN ONE DAY FOR NET QUEEN KING

CHESTNUT HILL, Mass. (UPI) — Mrs. Billie Jean Moffit King of Alhambra, Calif., emerged a triple winner Saturday from the USLTA national women's indoor tennis championships with victories in singles, doubles and mixed doubles contests.

Mrs. King, who shares the women's top-ranking in the U.S., downed Mary Ann Eisel of St. Louis 6-0, 6-2, for the individual crown, deftly outplaying Miss Eisel by dropping lobs and shots into every section of the court. Mrs. King's win was her first national signals title.

The championships were held at Longwood Cricket Club.

The tall tennis queen, playing far better than in last weekend's New England indoor matches at Salem, Mass., went on from the Eisel match to take the doubles wins.

In a hard-fought, three-hour mixed doubles game, Mrs. King and Paul Sullivan of Belmont, Mass., upset defending champions Miss Eisel and Chumley Steele III of Cambridge, Mass., 11-13, 9-7, 9-7. Mrs. King and Sullivan were second-seeded.

In the day's final match, Mrs. King teamed up with Rosemary Casals, 17, of San Francisco to whip the top-seeded combination of Mrs. Carol Hanks Aucamp and Justina Bricka, both of St. Louis, for the doubles title.

Trojans Detour OSU Title Drive

CORVALLIS, Ore. — USC slowed Oregon State's drive toward the AAWU basketball title Saturday night by clipping the Beavers, 70-60, as John Block and Harvey Dillon combined for 50 points.

Oregon State (8-2) continues to lead the race by two games with four remaining.

The Trojans, Oregon, UCLA and Stanford are tied for second with 6-4 records.

Block, who scored 44 points against Oregon Friday night, had 23 at halftime of Saturday's game and the Trojans led by three.

The Beavers went into a zone defense in the final half and restricted Block to seven points, but the strategy backfired when Dillon began successfully sniping over the defenders. He finished with 20 points.

USC went ahead for good, 47-46, on Doug Bolcom's long set shot with 10 minutes remaining. It was the sophomore Dillon's shooting that quickly turned the tide in USC's favor. He hit six points. With two minutes remaining, the Trojans had extended their margin to 13 points, 65-52.

Former all-CIF star Loy Peterson of Anaheim led the Beavers with 25 points.

PASARELL, HOLMBERG IN NET FINALS

SALISBURY, Md. (AP)—Charlie Pasarell of Puerto Rico and Ron Holmberg of Dallas, two of the game's most gifted and most erratic shotmakers, battled their way Saturday into the finals of the National Indoor Tennis Championships.

Pasarell, 22, a senior at UCLA, shook off one of his periodic letdowns and eliminated Brazil's giant-killer, Tomas Koch, 6-3, 8-6, 5-7, 10-8.

Holmberg, 28, a paunchy hotel representative from Dallas, displayed alternate brilliance and nochalance in erasing another foreign threat, Olilff Drysdale of South Africa, 6-2, 2-6, 6-2, 5-7, 6-4.

Lippy Hottest Chicago Item Since '71 Fire

(Ed. note: Jim Enright, veteran baseball writer of Chicago's American, has covered the Cubs since Phil Cavarretta was in knee pants. Last month he followed Leo Durocher on a goodwill tour through Illinois and has been in constant touch with the team and front office. This is his pre-season analysis of the Cubs.)

By JIM ENRIGHT

CHICAGO — San Diego's world famous zoo will have a definite rival in Long Beach's Blair Field come Monday, Feb. 28.

That is the day 44 Cubs will spring from their cage with baseball's most colorful Lion leading the way. The Lion is Leo Durocher, and the Cubs are the Chicago Cubs—clawless little Bears who have been hibernating in the National league's second division for the last 19 years.

While nobody yet is positive about the class of baseball the Cubs will play under Durocher—the team's first manager since 1960 — this much is certain: Blair Field won't lack for color, comment, and contrast.

* * * *

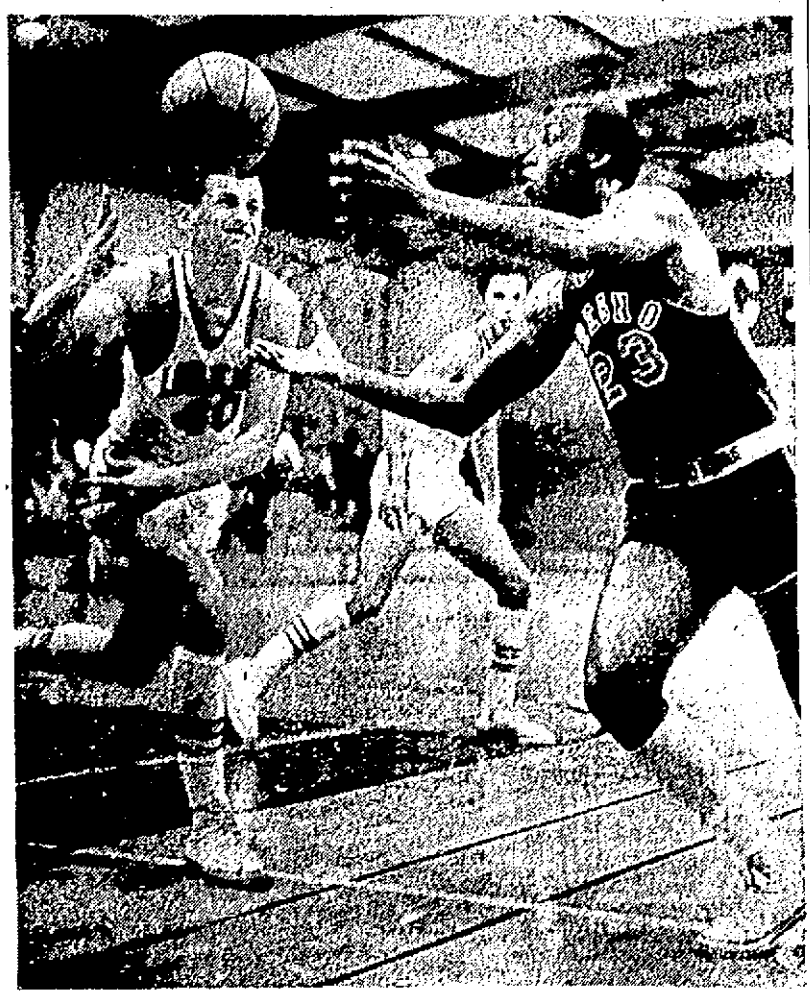

DUROCHER'S signing with the Cubs last October just automatically made Leo Chicago's hottest item since Mrs. O'Leary's cow kicked over the lantern to start a fire which all but wiped the city off the map in 1871.

First of all it marked the end of the College of Coaches, a dismal rule by committee failure which reduced a once-proud and powerful organization to rabble. During the tenure of the revolving head coach system, the Cubs had trouble staying ahead of the two new expansion teams—the Astros and Mets—as well as the sheriff.

Attendance last year failed to reach the 650,000 mark in Wrigley field here, and this is the situation the brash, bossy Durocher has been called in to remedy as quickly as possible.

And let there be no ques-

Alcindor Sets Scoring Record

Fabulous Lou Alcindor led UCLA's Frosh basketball team to a 125-57 victory Saturday over Los Angeles City College, scoring 37 points to set a single-season Bruin record.

The previous seasonal high of 539 points in 22 games was set by Ron Lawson in the 1959-60 season. Alcindor's 37 points gave him a total of 574 for 17 games and an average of 33.8 points a game.

The New Pool: It's Respectable

"You can lose and you're helpless. All other games, you get a chance to defend yourself. That's why pool's the toughest of any game."—Cicero Murphy, professional pool player.

One lone light bulb burns in the room, illuminating only a strip of green felt, 4 by 8, and the 15 colored balls.

The gambling man—black shirt and yellow tie—twitches nervously in the shadows as the player, shirt collar open and smoke from his cigarette curling toward the ceiling, carefully chalks his cue.

Now a fleeting glance of contempt around the room and he leans over the table and . . . the director yells, "Cut!"

"That's what's got the game down," says Cicero Murphy, cringing at Hollywood's version of the game that makes his living. Maybe it isn't much of a living, as pro sports go, but it keeps meat and potatoes on the table for Lillian and the three kids back in Brooklyn.

Right now Murphy is playing for his part of $10,000 in the Tournament of Champions at Morgan Hall in Long Beach. There in the basement, with temporary bleachers surrounding a pair of tables, a very select group of the world's finest players are pursuing the game's only hope for universal acceptance—tournament competition.

"We're trying to elevate the game . . . give it a better image," Murphy says, knowing full well that the game isn't going to live down its image overnight.

YOU CAN CALL it pocket billiards, dress everybody in a tuxedo and transplant it to a respectable environment, but it's still pool to most of the people who never really had the courage to walk into a real pool hall and find out what it's all about.

As family entertainment, pool has hardly ranked in wholesomeness with Sunday afternoon at the ball park. But they're trying.

Thanks to Hollywood, which made a flick called "The Hustler" a couple of years back, the blue-eyed public now understands something about the skills and pressures of the game, and that Willie Hoppe wasn't the only good player who ever lived.

But also thanks to Hollywood, pool is a seamy, shadowy world of Paul Newman getting his thumbs broken, gamblers seducing neurotic girls and hustlers hustling hustlers.

Even now, right in Long Beach, there are guys called the Machine Gun Kid, New York Blackie, Red Raider Breit and the Knoxville Bear. Good grief, get the women and kids off the streets!

OR, BETTER YET, bring 'em to Morgan Hall to see what the game's really like. You might even ask the Machine Gun Kid home for dinner.

That would be Lou Butera, a little guy with thinning black hair who approaches you with the trace of a smile and a long leather case under his arm. You're afraid to ask him what's in it.

"I play fast," he says, explaining his nickname. "I know I'd probably do better if I didn't but this is the way I play. If I tried to change now I'd lose my pace."

You get the idea right away that this guy talks like an athlete. He even holds a record—for shooting 91 balls in eight minutes.

We're just like baseball players," he says. "We get in slumps, too. Me, I always start slow. But practice doesn't help. You can stand in the batting cage all day but it doesn't do any good because when you get in the game it's a live pitcher out there. In pool, it's different when you know it means something if you miss."

MURPHY DOESN'T have a nickname, but with a front one like Cicero who needs it?

"I've got nothing against the game," he says. "It's been good to me. I still play all the other sports, like golf. I'm just learning to drive. I always was a good putter, and I'd be even better if they'd let me use my cue."

Last year Murphy won a similar tournament at Burbank. It was a high run affair where the man winning the break often ran 150 balls and game without letting his opponent off the stool.

"A lot of 'em were practicing the lag," Murphy recalls. "It won a lot of games. I ran 289 in practice one day."

The game, then, leaves little room for defensive strategy. When an opponent starts a hot run, Cicero says, "You can't do anything except hope that he misses. That's what makes the game so tough. What do you do when I run 150? You pay off . . . that's all you can do."

THERE ISN'T TOO MUCH to psychology, either.

"I just try to psych out 150 balls before he gets in there," Cicero says. "I'm usually nervous, but just before I get to the table it all leaves. Each player thinks a little different, anyway. It's better not to think that there's a guy standing behind you with a hammer just waiting for you to miss."

"By the way, Butera describes himself as "a family man with four kids and another on the way," and he carries a cue in that case, not a chopper. The pros all have their sticks custom made to specification with wood inlay and their names engraved for as much as $125 each. All are a regulation 57 inches long.

"I'm not too particular about mine," says Murphy, "as long as it's about 20 ounces and the shaft is thin. I have small hands."

Some advice: Don't shoot pool with a guy who carries his cue in a case. He's probably a magician. He'll make the balls disappear right before your eyes.

RACING FOR GLORY AND TROPHIES

A large group of Thunderbirds and Columbias races out of Long Beach Harbor in the second day of racing in the 37th annual Midwinter Regatta being hosted by five clubs in this area. The event drew a record number of boats in some classes.

LBYC, California Powerboats Top Midwinter Race

BY DONNELL CULPEPPER, DAVE TAYLOR AND DON BRACKENBURY

Long Beach Yacht Club and the California Yacht Club dominated the predicted log race of the powerboats, which was run out of LBYC Saturday, the second day of the 37th annual Midwinter Regatta.

The race drew the highest number of boats in its history—32 in classes A and B, and there would have been five others had not the flu bug attacked the skippers and crews.

* * * *

OTHER WINNERS were Art Geisler, (CYC) second, in Sea Weed, with 1.629; Bert Grimes, (CYC) third, Nina Rose, with 1.963; Wally Laucks, (Shark Island YC), in Exotica, fourth, with 2.034, and Walter Delmsr (CYC) in Minorca, with 2.445.

Roger Bentley (CYC), in his first predicted log race, finished first in class B in his Xanadu, with 1.320. Harn Hoose (CYC) was second in Habeus Corpus, with 1.386, and Paul Vaughn (CYC) was third in his Sunny Side Up, with 3.040.

The second day of ocean racing, as well as outside classes at the Los Angeles YC, Long Beach YC and Seal Beach YC, was marked by many protests.

It only takes one protest to hold up the result of any race.

It appeared that the squawking of skippers and crews would go on far into the night. At LAYC, four skippers in the famous Cal-40 class were being asked to stand by for hearings, but there were chances that the result would not be announced until Sunday morning.

* * * *

TODAY, all races will be resumed at the five sponsoring clubs, LAYC, LBYC, SBYC, Cabrillo Beach YC and Alamitos Bay YC.

Alamitos Bay YC had almost a spotless record for its inside classes, with few if any protests, but the outside events were boats marked by different colors, mostly red-faced skippers and racing committeemen trying to adjust certain irregularities that seem to go along with yacht racing.

65 Nets Hebert Lead by 1

TUCSON (UPI)—Jay Hebert broke out of a two-year slump Saturday with a sparkling 65 to take over the third round lead in the Tucson Open golf tournament with a 54-hole nine-under-par total of 207.

Cigar-smoking Joe Campbell had a chance to tie Hebert at the three-quarter mark, but hit a trap on the 18th hole and bogeyed it for a 69 and a 208 total.

Johnny Pott, second round leader with an eight-under-par total of 136, slumped to a 75 including a double bogey six on the final hole, to fall back into a four-way tie for fifth place.

"Gee, it feels good to play well again," Hebert said after his round had included an eagle and three birdies on the four par-five holes of the 7,200-yard Tucson National Golf Club, plus two other birdies for his seven-under-par round.

Hebert, former PGA champion, had been bothered for two years with tendon trouble in his right elbow. He said a new drug eased the pain "and this was the best round I've had in a long time."

Ralston to Head West Grid Team

SAN FRANCISCO (UPI) — John Ralston of Stanford, who led the West to a surprise 22-7 victory over the East in his debut, Saturday was named head coach of the West for this year's annual Shrine East-West game at Kezar Stadium, Dec. 31.

Ben Martin of the Air Force Academy and J. T. King of Texas Tech were named as Ralston's assitants. Duffy Daugherty of Michigan State previously was named to lead the East in the Shrine classic.

EXPECT 60,000 FOR FINALS

Sorokin's 210 mph Run Tops Winternational Drags

By BRUCE YOUNG
I. P-T Staff Writer

POMONA — The NHRA officials called it a drag race, but the Richter Scale registered it as a major earthquake.

The grounds at the L.A. County Fairgrounds here shook Saturday under the thundering roar of 32 of the nation's strongest AA fuel dragsters, who supplied the thrills during the second day of the National Hotrod Assn. sixth Winternationals.

The event concludes today with finals in all classes, including the crowning of the top fuel and gas eliminators. A crowd of more than 60,000 is expected and the gates open at 6 a.m., with action beginning at 8.

Saturday's crowd of 27,263 saw 22 runs over 200 miles per hour and 26 of the 32 rails turned under eight seconds.

* * * *

LEADING THE charge was Mike Sorokin as he steered his fleet rail to a 210.10 mph timing, the top speed of the day and the meet. The 25-year-old Santa Monica driver used only 7.62 seconds to cover the quartermile.

Veteran driver Tommy Ivo never looked better or back Saturday, putting Danny Ongais on the trailer and out of the meet. Ivo, who was runnerup in the 1965 NHRA Winternationals, scorched the low elapsed time of the meet, covering the 1320 in 7:55 seconds.

One of the day's biggest upsets was recorded by a 24-year-old newcomer, Dominic Cardoza. He dropped the king of drag racing, Don Garlits, out of competition on the first round.

Cardoza, an Escondido auto mechanic, jumped Garlits off the starting line and won going away with a strong 7.60 seconds and 204.08 mph pass. Garlits, who is yet to make the second round in any of this year's big meets, turned 203.16 mph.

* * * *

DEFENDING champion Don Prudhomme, who is not driving the same car he won this meet with in 1965, was out of the gate like a flash and knocked Long Beach's Tom McEwen out of competition with a 210.28 mph and 7.59 clocking.

Mike Snively, the No. 1 qualifier, drove the "Hawaiian" dragster, the car that reached the winner's circle last year, to victory over Roy Thode. Snively was lightning-quick off the line and posted a 7.57 and 208.8 mph.

Keith Berg, 29-year-old jet engine mechanic from Long Beach, won the stock national championship in a 1950 Oldsmobile, registering an elapsed time of 17.16 seconds and a top end speed of 80.50 mph.

Fred Horton of Long Beach won the O/stock class, driving a 1937 Buick 84.34 mph in 17.45 seconds.

Hartshorn Seeks Second Long Beach Masters Title

By JOHN CASH

Terry Hartshorn, who won last year's Long Beach Masters championship in somewhat unspectacular fashion, leads a field of six club champions in to the 10th L. B. golf supremacy test Saturday at El Dorado Country Club beginning at 10:30.

The 20-year-old UCLA senior, was unimpressive from a gallery standpoint last year because he did not uncork a big tee shot or often hole-out putts over 20 feet, but he's as steel-nerved as a surgeon.

Terry's 291 total last year was the third best recorded in Masters history, and his three 71s in the Lakewood club championship are indicative of his steady fairway displays.

* * * *

Play will be in two threesomes with the three low scores in the final group to tee off each round. Starting time is 10:30 at all courses.

The golfers will shoot for the perpetual and individual trophies donated by the Independent, Press-Telegram, one of the tourney sponsors along with the six men's clubs and six course professionals.

Champion this year will receive $75, second place $35, third $25, fourth $15 and fifth $10. A bonus of $10 is given for the low round each day. All prizes are in the form of merchandise.

Minneapolis Skater Wins World Crown

GOTEBORG, Sweden (UPI)—Tom Gray of Minneapolis scored a surprise victory in the 500-meter sprint at the world speedskating championships Saturday and Kees Verkerk of Holland won the 5,000-meter event in opening day competition.

Gray, ignoring the effects of a heavy cold, streaked the 500 in 41 seconds flat to deny Keiichi Suzuki of Japan his fourth consecutive triumph in this event. Suzuki was second in 41.2.

Norwegian Jumps 261 Feet, Wins Medal

OSLO, Norway (AP) — Norway's Bjoern Wirkola leaped 261 and 255 feet Saturday and won the gold medal in the special jumping event of the World Nordic Ski Championships.

Canadian Sets Pace in Panama Golf Open

PANAMA (AP) — Canada's Wilf Homenuik staggered in with a one-over-par 73 Saturday but took over the lead after 54 holes with a 210 total in the Panama Open Golf Tournament.

Bob McCallister of Corona, Calif., tied with Homenuik after two rounds with a 137, soared to a 77 and fell back with a 214.

ITALY PRESS CRITICIZES BILL BRADLEY

MILAN (AP)—Bill Bradley, voted the best U.S. amateur athlete in 1965, was criticized sharply in the Italian press Saturday for his performance in a recent European Cup championship basketball game.

Bradley, college player of the year last season, has been playing for Simmenthal of Milan.

After Simmenthal lost to Slavia of Prague last Thursday, the Italian press wrote that Bradley's poor performance had been decisive in the defeat.

Milan's sports daily, Gazzetta Dello Sport, wrote: "The American seems to think that the European Champions Cup is a tourist tournament."

Why Cooke Won and Blades Lost

We may step on a few toes with this column, but its contents should clarify the Southern California hockey situation which, for the most part, is muddled in the minds of most readers and fans.

In writing that the Blades should have secured the new National Hockey League franchise (because they pioneered the sport in Los Angeles and spent years struggling to orient Southlanders) and that the Coliseum Commission's support hurt the Blades more than it helped them, we inadvertently opened the door for further information.

When Jack Kent Cooke (in presenting his bid to NHL officials) said he would build his own arena in Los Angeles, that virtually locked up his case. THE NATIONAL HOCKEY LEAGUE LIKES ITS CLUBS TO OWN THEIR OWN ARENAS SO THEY CAN CONTROL THE PLAYING DATES! And Cooke was the only L. A. bidder to make such a promise.

Traditionally, NHL hockey is played on Saturday and Sunday, with only a few games during the week. This could not have been possible in the Sports Arena because of basketball and other commitments.

HOWEVER, other sources have informed us that Cooke never will build his own arena—AND NEVER INTENDED TO, no matter what he says. It was a blackjack to use on the Sports Arena, which is reacting as Cooke expected—running on bended knee with a better offer!

As for Cooke's commitment to build his own arena, he's too smart to ask the NHL to let him off the hook, but it's just a matter of time until the Sports Arena does. The Coliseum Commission (Sports Arena) will promise the NHL prime dates and LOWER RENT . . . and since Cooke also controls the Lakers it's likely THEY won't complain much.

I'm informed also that the so-called plans Cooke showed the NHL were the ones originally rejected by San Diego as too gaudy and expensive. Questioned on that, Cooke said: "You'd better talk to Luckman (the architect)."

"POOR MANAGEMENT" charges against the Blades were not unfounded, although they had been corrected in recent months—too late to help.

Under the old arrangement, the silent partner (Dan Reeves) was in this area devoting all his attention to the Rams; the active partner (Jim Piggott) who had Reeves' proxy, usually was in Saskatoon and gave his coaches no authority to make deals on their own, until Lynn Patrick took over this season.

Then Reeves also brought in Dan Martin, former under-secretary of commerce under Kennedy and LBJ, to lead the NHL bid. This was a mistake because Martin knows as much about hockey as the average kid on a Long Beach block. Leading the Blades' NHL move should have been Patrick and general manager Jack Geyer, both well-versed in the subject.

Martin had no money in the Blades' franchise, but was given a 30% share (the same as Reeves) and was committed to help with expansion expenses.

Piggott (wisely, we're told, because he hasn't been in the best of health) was backgrounded to a minority share. However, it was too late to swing the bid.

MAJOR LEAGUE HOCKEY won't arrive here until the 1967-68 season. What happens in the interim? The minor Western Hockey League apparently will continue to operate next season, but where?

The Blades would be crazy to operate in L. A. during the next campaign. On the other hand, Cooke would be crazy NOT to . . . even on a minor league basis until expansion arrives.

Will Cooke buy the Blades (and there's doubt Dan Reeves would sell to him)? He could rename them and keep their dozen players. Or will the Blades go to San Diego, which is scheduled to enter the Western League next season?

Or will Cooke get the Victoria club on an interim basis? The latter seems more logical, since Victoria is owned by Toronto (Stafford Smythe, an old friend of Cooke's) and is a small town which usually "lures" less than 2,000 per game.

The Victoria move to L. A. appears logical as Smythe would give his buddy Cooke a boost, and Southern California would have a top minor league team to whet the appetite for the following season's major leaguers.

THE BLADES' major league hopes flopped also because they failed to cultivate through the NHL . . . attending games, talking to others and just being seen around to show they're really interested.

Meanwhile, Cooke was hopping around like a flea on a dog's back, as far as the NHL governors were concerned. Some major Blades' personnel haven't been seen at a hockey game in two years! Whether Dan Reeves (who has enough problems with the Rams, I know) realizes it or not, Cooke had four of the six NHL votes on franchises locked-up BEFORE the big meeting.

Contrary to advice from people who know the NHL owners much better than Reeves or Martin, they sat on their backsides while Cooke was out hustling, confident that the franchise would be handed to them on a silver platter.

This is the hockey picture . . . and why one team won and the other lost.

HARDLY A 'GALLOP' POLL

Kentucky, Duke Post Shaky Wins

Compiled from Wire Services

All of the nation's basketball leaders went to the post Saturday night and when the results were in Associated Press learned that it had constructed anything but a "gallop" poll.

Top-ranked Kentucky, runnerup Duke, third-ranked Texas Western and fifth-ranked Vanderbilt were all involved in photo-finishes before emerging unscathed. The remainder of top 10 raced to easy victories.

It was a night, however, for individual glory with Purdue's Dave Schellhase and Texas Tech's Dub Malaise netting the honors.

* * * *

SCHELLHASE set a Big Ten scoring record with 57 points as the Boilermakers fell to 10th-ranked Michigan, 128-94. The Wolverines' total was also a team record, breaking the mark of 122 points produced by Indiana in 1959.

Schellhase's final basket eclipsed the previous record of 56 set by Hoosier Jimmy Rayl.

Malaise tied the Southwest Conference individual scoring record with 50 points as Texas Tech established a league mark by smashing Texas, 117-86.

* * * *

KENTUCKY registered its 24th consecutive victory, its 21st of this season and its 12th in Southeastern Conference action, but it wasn't until the final buzzer that all this was for sure.

The Wildcats edged Mississippi State, 73-69, in a game which was tied 10 times and saw the lead change hands 10 times. Pat Riley paced Kentucky with 21 points and his set shot gave the Wildcats a 62-60 lead which they never relinquished during the tense final minutes.

Bob Verga, sidelined for two games after missing a curfew, came off the bench to score 27 points and lead Duke over Maryland, 74-69.

Duke trailed 44-29 early in the second half, but rallied behind Verga whose jumper put the Devils ahead, 66-64, with 3:05 to play.

Willie Cager's free throw with 2:17 remaining broke a 59-59 deadlock and unbeaten, third-ranked Texas Western went on to a 65-61 victory over Pan-American. It was Texas Western's 20th straight.

* * * *

FOURTH-RANKED Loyola led all the way to rack up its 20th win and avenge one of its two defeats with a 94-77 triumph over Wichita. Center Billy Smith led the attack with 22 points.

Fifth-ranked Vanderbilt was forced to employ a stall to preserve an 89-86 victory over Florida. Leading by 19 points in the second half, Vandy watched the Gators take advantage of erratic ballhandling to close the deficit to three points with two minutes remaining. The Commodores then froze the ball. Keith Thomas led Vandy with 30 points.

Providence, ranked sixth, ran its record to 18-3 via a 77-57 decision over Seton

VETERAN coach Hank Iba,

* * * *

Veteran coach Hank Iba, a genius of defense, watched horrified as seventh-ranked Kansas crushed Oklahoma State, 80-47. It was the first time an Iba-coached team had yielded 80 points on its home court.

Tom Duff scored 26 points and grabbed 19 rebounds as eighth-ranked St. Joseph's clipped Creighton, 99-90. The triumph was St. Joseph's 19th of the season and sixth in a row.

Nebraska's Grant Simmons scored 28 points, 19 in the second half, to propel the ninth-ranked Cornhuskers to a 71-53 victory over Missouri. Nebraska is 9-0 in Big Eight play.

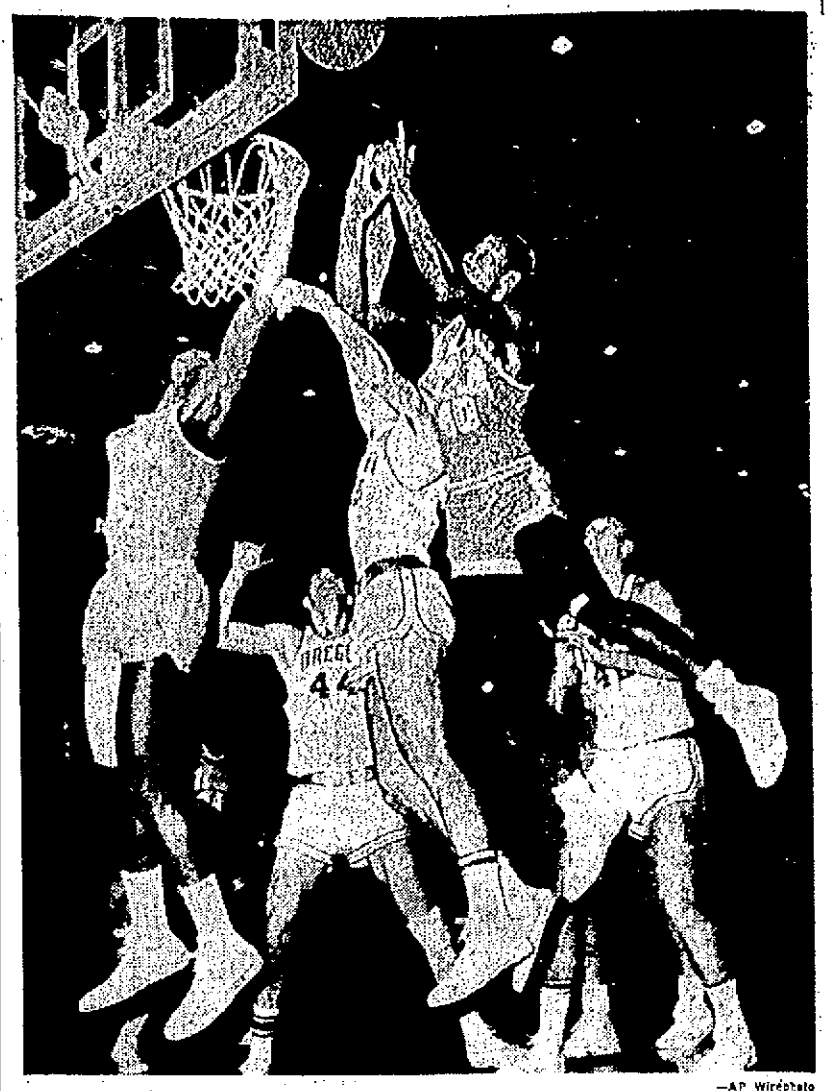

John Beasley hit 40 points as Texas A & M maintained its Southwest Conference lead via a 96-91 victory over Texas Christian.

DePaul enhanced its post-season tourney chances by defeating Duquesne, 79-69. The Blue Demons are 16-5.

Stanford Scuttles Cougars

STANFORD (UPI)—Sophomore guard Art Harris, hitting on 11 out of 15 field goal attempts, scored 25 points Saturday night while Stanford eliminated Washington State from the AAWU basketball race with an 80-61 lacing.

The Cougars, who upset toppling UCLA earlier in the month, sustained their sixth league loss while Stanford posted its sixth win in 10 contests.

Harris helped to break the game open after a close first half with his uncanny shooting. Bob Bedell backed him with 20 more points.

Stanford also prevailed on the boards, snagging 57 rebounds to 39 for Washington.

Last-Second Basket Nets Cal Victory

BERKELEY (UPI) — Myron Erickson meshed a jump shot with three seconds to play Saturday night to give California a 50-48 victory over Washington and deadlock the two teams for the cellar in the AAWU basketball race. Each squad now has a 2-8 mark.

Erickson contributed the winning bucket some three minutes after the Huskies had pulled into a 48-48 tie on Bruce Bricker's free throw.

The teams then tried to freeze the ball but constantly lost it on changeovers.

Washington twice led until 14:49 was played in the first half when the Bears went ahead and held the advantage until Bricker tied it. The latter paced the Huskies with 11 points while Cal's Steve Smith had 16 for the night's top honors.

Rams Lance Lakewood for 25th Victory, 55-41

By GREG MORENO

Millikan, displaying the class it flashed in winning two pre-league tournaments, protected its second place standing in the Moore League Saturday night by stopping Lakewood, 55-41, at Long Beach City College.

Jerry Feller, turning in his best game of the year, collected 13 points and 14 rebounds as the defensive conscious Rams kept Lakewood's offense out of double figures in each quarter but the fourth.

Lakewood's Jimmy Harris won his scoring battle with Bob Davis, 18-14, although Davis didn't appear too interested in scoring, taking only 11 shots.

The win was the 25th of the year for Millikan, which has lost three. Reserve Rick Wilson was the only other performer in double figures, scoring 10 for the Rams.

Two Remain Undefeated in Billiards

Only two players remained undefeated after Saturday's round of the pocket billiards Tournament of Champions at Morgan Hall as the tourney heads into its final week.

Luther Lassiter, 6-0, and Eddie Kelly, 5-0, were the leaders and Kelly's high run of 102, which he set Friday, still stands as the mark to beat.

Jack Breit of New Jersey held a 6-1 mark and World Champion Joe Balsas, after losing his first two matches, won his next six contests to post a 6-2 mark.

Beginning Monday, there will be no more afternoon matches. The matches will be played at 7:30 and 9:30 p.m. during the final week.

Bold Bidder in Speedy Workout

John R. Gaines' Bold Bidder, record-shattering victor in the Charles H. Strub Stakes, received his final major drill for next Saturday's $145,000-guaranteed Santa Anita Handicap, working a mile and one-eighth in 1:50 flat with jockey Bill Shoemaker in the saddle.

The classy Bold Ruler colt, who set a track record for a mile and one-quarter in winning the Strub Stakes by six lengths in 1:59 3/5, hung up fractions of :49⅘, 1:13⅘ and 1:38.

MEAN, UGLY FACE IS COACH'S LECTURE

ROME, N.Y. (AP)—The spectators are few and quiet at basketball games at the tiny high school. All 13 boy pupils play the sport. Half of the girls are cheerleaders, but their cheers ring out virtually unheard.

The youngsters at the New York State School for the Deaf play basketball under great handicaps.

"They can't hear the ball being dribbled," says coach Joe Gwara. "They can't hear a guy sneaking up from behind to steal the ball. They can't play man-to-man because they can't yell to each other to switch off. And if they take their eyes off the ball, they're liable to have a pass bounce off an ear."

The opposition can shout out its plays and set up offensive patterns verbally. And the referees have difficulties since their whistles don't halt hustling Romans.

Coach Gwara is one of the few, save the opposition, who can hear the cheers—and the opponents.

Like most teenagers, the team needs an occasional lecture.

To get his point across, says Gwara, "I just make the meanest, ugliest face I can."

76ers Nudge S.F.; Knicks Knock Cincy

SAN FRANCISCO (UPI)—Wally Jones and Al Bianchi each connected on clutch baskets during the final 40 seconds of play Saturday night to give Philadelphia a 123-119 victory over the San Francisco Warriors and keep the 76ers a half game behind the Boston Celtics in the NBA's Eastern Division race.

A driving layup by Al Attles of San Francisco deadlocked the score at the 40 second mark. But Jones hit on a 25-foot jumper and Bianchi put the game out of reach with a driving layup.

Rick Barry, the Warriors' rookie, led all the scorers with 40 points, 10 more than posted by the 76ers' Wilt Chamberlain.

Houston Oilman Says He'll Talk to Rozelle

HOUSTON (UPI) — Texas oilman John Mecom Jr. of Houston said Saturday he will meet with National Football League commissioner Pete Rozelle in New York "within the next few weeks" about an NFL franchise in Houston.

If the NFL decides to put a team in Houston, the Mecom interests will make a concerted effort to obtain the franchise, he said.

49ers Nip Chapman for Fourth Victory

Long Beach State College baseball team broke a 1-1 deadlock with a three-run eighth inning Saturday and went on to defeat host Chapman, 4-2, for its fourth victory of the season.

Cubs Still Can't See The Light

One of the most consistent losers in baseball in recent years—both on the field and in the pocketbook—has been the Chicago Cubs, who will move into Long Beach next week for spring training.

Baseball men, as well as observers, long have placed most of the blame for the club's financial losses—especially in the 20 years since World War II—on the fact that owner P. K. Wrigley refuses to install lights in Wrigley Field.

It is the only major league park without lights.

It was felt throughout baseball that this would be the year that Wrigley finally yielded and ordered lights.

This belief was bolstered when the Cubs issued a financial statement recently which revealed the club lost $311,197 last season to run its four-year deficit since 1962 to $797,224.

However, Wrigley remains adamant in his stand against lights even though everyone believes this would eliminate the red ink and put the club in the black immediately.

"IT ISN'T NIGHT BASEBALL WE NEED, but winning baseball," Wrigley told Edgar Munzel, one of the fine Chicago writers who will accompany the team west. "If we get a winning team, the fans will pour through the turnstiles again no matter whether we play morning, noon or night.

"Personally, I still believe baseball is a daylight game and I have no intention of puting lights in Wrigley Field now or in the foreseeable future."

Munzel asked Wrigley if the financial losses of the Cubs influenced the hiring of Leo Durocher as manager.

"Definitely not," the Cub owner replied. "Losses at the gate don't worry me . . . but losses on the field do. And that's why we got Durocher.

"I felt that the team just wasn't puting out. The reason I arrived at this conclusion was that whenever we traded players away, they immediately became stars somewhere else."

"IN OTHER WORDS," he continued, "they apparently had the ability all the time, but we just weren't getting it out of them. Maybe we were too good to them. I decided that what we needed was somebody with the drive, the toughness and the leadership of Durocher to get it out of them. Somebody had to wake them up.

"Now if Durocher can do that sort of a job for us and we become a winning team again, that's all we need. That will solve things on the field as well as at the gate. After all, a winning team is the only secret to showing a profit in baseball. That and that alone."

Cub vice-president Charlie Grimm, who formerly managed the club himself, agreed that winning, rather than lights, was the answer.

"All of us realize that the biggest problem facing us is to rebuild the confidence of the players. They've fallen into a losing habit and developed a defeatist complex after finishing in the second division for so many years.

"And we couldn't have found a better man than Durocher to start pumping confidence back into them."

LAST SEASON, THE CUBS' HOME ATTENDANCE was only 641,361 . . . second lowest since World War II.

The club showed a loss of $1,237,015 strictly on its baseball operations. This was cut to $311,197 by receipts of $925,818 from radio-TV income and rental of the park to the Chicago Bears of the NFL during football season.

The last year the Cubs showed a profit was in 1963 when the club drew a home attendance of 979,551 to finish $67,979 to the good.

In 1961, the club showed a profit of $29,166 on attendance of only 673,057 . . . but that was due to the $425,000 the Cubs received for sale of players out of the expansion pool when the Mets and Houston Astros joined the league.

The Cubs' biggest profit in recent years was in 1958 when they came out $199,000 ahead. They were in the black, too, in 1957 when auditors came up with a $357 profit after a valiant struggle with the books.

But they've been fighting a losing battle in recent seasons.

49ers Unveil Quiz Team in Friday Meet

That's not a track team gallivanting on the cinders at Long Beach State these days, it's a quiz show. An honest one. So honest that none of the competitors knows where he's going to finish when the tape is played.

The 49ers break out the tape, and the liniment, too, of course, on Friday when they commence a question mark campaign against Cal Poly of Pomona and Fullerton State on the Pomona oval.

They'll add to their knowledge in the big one, the Long Beach Relays, on March 5 at Veterans Stadium, and the following week they host the CCAA title showdown against San Diego State.

* * * *

OF COURSE, it may not be a showdown at all.

San Diego is bulging to the gunwales with talent. Long Beach is bulging with names, untried, unproven names.

"If the fellows improve, become stars, we could be very tough," pointed out coach Jack Rose as he began preparations for his 10th year at the 49er factory. "Remember, last year San Diego was favored and we were supposed to finish fourth, but we won both CCAA and Regional NCAA and San Diego was the also-ran."

Says Rose, "San Diego, with Don Shy, definitely is the team to beat. L.A. State, Fresno and Long Beach should be scrambling for place and show.

* * * *

SHY, ONE of America's outstanding decathlon performers, and a 13.6 hurdler, probably could score in 17 events in the duel with Long Beach if he wanted to.

The 49ers must replace league champions John Rambo, Ray Christensen, Kerry Wright, Ralph Lee and Mit Hunt, team captain Jeff Clements and all-America George Lacy.

The 49ers expect high point production from veterans Walt Clements, 14.3 and 37.7 hurdler; Frank Harris, 9.6 sprinter; Gary Ordway, with marks of 55-7½ in the shotput and 173-6½ in the discus, as well as distance runner Chuck Webb (4:14, 9:14), half-miler George Davis (1:52.5), javelin thrower Eric Westin (203-7) and pole vaulter Kent Parson (14-4).

There's lots of poential and lots of "if" on the 49er campus.

Hopes Bright for Striders, Troy, UCLA

By JOHN DIXON

Last year the Alphabet War squashed track and field as low as a centipede's tummy, but an uneasy truce now prevails and there are title bellows ricocheting throughout the Southland.

From the "official" outdoor opener, the Long Beach Relays March 5, to the finale, the duel with Russia in the Coliseum, July 23-24, this should be a big season, jammed with records and emotion.

Who's the greatest? Not Cassius Clay. Perhaps USC or UCLA, and the Striders, as usual.

* * * *

THE STRIDERS, with almost as much depth as the Russian army and as much quality as Tiffany's, already are an overwhelming favorite to retain their National AAU championship.

Tom Jennings' 49er Track Club finished fifth nationally in its premiere year, and hopes to move even higher this time. With such talents as Dee Andrews, Charles Craig, Dave Kemp, Darel Newman, Sid Nicholas, John Rambo, Ulis Williams, et al, maybe it will.

Best college team in the U.S.? Flip a coin—it's either USC or UCLA. They meet May 8.

* * * *

THE TROYS have such returnees as NCAA titlists Bill Fosdick, 16-0 pole vaulter, and Paul Kerry, 13.7 high hurdler. Then there's Gary Carlsen, 190-8½ discus thrower; Bruce Bess, 4:02.7 miler; Dennis Carr, 1:49.8 half-miler, and Mahoney Samuels, 52-5 triple jumper.

Watch out for the newcomers—Earl McCullouch, national hurdle record holder from Long Beach City College; John Link, 4:06.6 miler, and Roger Wolff, 46.7 quartermiler.

UCLA's bellwethers are Bob Day, at 3:56.4 and 8:33.0 the No. 1 miler and two-miler in collegiate circles; half-miler Dennis Breckow, pole vaulter Marc Savage and sprinters Norm Jackson and Tom Jones.

* * * *

"I CAN hardly wait until next year," UCLA coach Jim Bush said last season as he contemplated the Trojan meet. Well, it's "next year," and this is the year the Bruins had better come through, for the Trojan Frosh register such names as Paul Wilson (16-6¾ pole vault), Richard Joyce (1:48.8 880), miler Carl Trentadue (4:08.5) and Lennox Miller (9.4 sprinter).

Occidental is building character again this year. Vance Peterson (51.1) may be the nation's best intermediate hurdler, while sprinter Chuck Kanoy (9.7) and quartermiler Ron Sommer (48.8) from Poly are next best.

12 Vets Give LBCC Depth

By GARY RAUSCH

Joe Lanning is never one to go out on a limb but when the Long Beach City College track coach has a mile-wide smile this early in the season, he must have something cooking.

"I won't predict whether we'll finish first or last in the conference but right now we've got more depth than in any year since I can remember—except for the state championship outfit of 1963," says Lanning enthusiastically.

"Our depth is not measured in bodies. We don't have any superstars but these kids are definitely a cut above the average athlete."

The Vikings have 12 returning lettermen, six of whom earned points in helping LBCC to runnerup honors in the conference meet.

Tops on the list is 280-pound weightman Roy Thurman, who took third in the state and SoCal and second in Metro. He had season bests of 55-3¾ and 151-5½ and was Viking of the Year for track.

In the sprint, Sonny Pitts (9.8) and Cedric Rambo (9.9) return. Pitts already has run 9.7 while Poly High's Fred Muench (9.7) and the Wilson trio of Bob Deeds (9.8), Steve Harvey (9.8), and Bob Wilson (9.9) —all freshmen — figure in the same class.

Multi-talented Bob Hanrahan drops the 330-intermediate hurdles in favor of the 440, where Jim Antenore, runnerup for Bee champion Millikan in the CIF 660, also is entered.

* * * *

HANRAHAN will continue in the jumps, where he had bests of 23-5¾ and 45-7½ last season. Larry Freeman, third on the all-time prep list at 49-8, probably will be the No. 1 triple jumper, however. The little (5-9) freshman, who leaped 6-8½ at Poly, will also provide depth in the high jump with Dan Giddens (6-6) and JV basketballer Tom Massey (6-2).

The half-mile has always been a Viking stronghold. Mike Post, 1:55.7 and fourth in Metro, returns along with a healthy Ralph Spicer (1:57.0 Friday) and Rob Russell.

In the mile, Roger Fassett ran 4:24.5 as a frosh and Dan Flores 4:24.8 for Jordan's school record before entering the service in 1961. Another bright hope is Bill DeVore, CIF 1320 champ and record holder for Lakewood last season.

* * * *

HURDLER Earl McCullough fled to USC but Lanning has U. of Kansas transfer Dave Stevens, Rambo, squadman Ernie Tanner and Wilson grads Fred Nicholi and Ron Wilder ready to go. Stevens ran 14.0 as a Denver, Colo., prep and Nicholl 14.2 and runnerup in CIF.

Mickey Wilson is back in the 2-mile and Skip McDowell and Jim Keck the pole vault but both events look weak unless Bruce Traasdahl (9:44, Wilson) and Kim Proctor (13-4, Millikan Bees) pan out.

Thurman will weigh heavily in his specialties and may get help from basketball center Steve Nott and fellow football tackle Randy Logan.

3 Moore Teams Given Chance to Dethrone Rabbits

By JIM McCORMACK

Poly High has lost only one track championship in Monre League history, and if it is going to make it two, this is the year.

The Rabbits, defending CIF and state champions, have only one big meet pointman back from last year's team, shotputter John Hubbell.

Poly, coached by Lee Foreman, still is the team to beat, but many believe that Jordan, Millikan and Lakewood all have a shot at it. Lakewood coach George Meyer best described the battle for dual meet honors as depending on "who is well and who isn't."

* * * *

JORDAN, Moore League Bee and Cee dual meet titlist last season, is rated the present threat to Poly's domain, but Millikan (CIF Bee champ) and Lakewood (CIF Bee runnerup) also could turn the trick.

Most of last year's established stars were graduated, with the exception of Hubbell and Wilson distance runner Hartzell Alpizar. Hubbell, CIF champion in the shotput, has a best toss of 63-9½. Alpizar, who performed impressively in cross country last fall, had a best of 9:43.1 in the two-mile and a 4:22 in the mile.

St. Anthony, competing in the Catholic League, has a new coach, who promises an awakening in the sport at his school. Coach John Lucas won't predict where the Saints will finish, but then he never has seen the league. He has several fine sophomore distance runners, including Martin Curtin and Tony Gomez.

* * * *

WILSON, coached by Don Mulligan, has help for Alpizar in quartermiler Steve Sousa (50.9) and high jumpers G. A. Dirk (6-1) and Rick Hubbell (6-1), who could be late turning out of the Bruins reach the CIF basketball playoffs.

High jump will be a strong spot for Poly. The Rabbits have John Watson, who has cleared 6-4¾ this year, and sophomore Jay Jones, who went 6-2 last year.

Lakewood boasts of the most successful track athletes in Long Beach in Conniy DeVerse. Competing as a Bee, DeVerse was CIF low hurdle champion and high hurdle runnerup. The only race he lost all year was the CIF finals.

Millikan also has several fine athletes, including CIF Bee titlists in Ed Rickey (880 and mile) and Greg Ward (220). Also on the list Phil Kuhn (49.5), Rich Keller (1:58), Bob Platt (21-7) and Phil Lockwood (54-0).

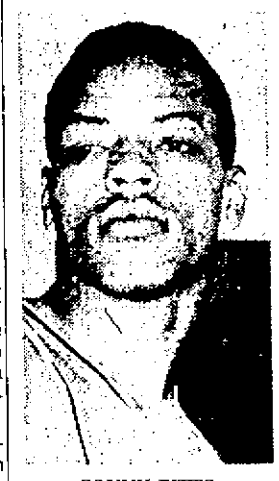

Jordan, Wilson and Downey opened seasons last week, with the other high schools following suit by next Friday, when Poly hosts Muir.

Jordan and Downey both won, the Panthers in impressive fashion. Although most of last year's Bee and Cee champs have moved up to varsity this season, Jordan also captured the lower division competition.

Best mark was Brian Davis's 6-5½ high jump, a Jordan school record. Alpizar ran a 9:44.8 two-mile for Wilson.

PENN STATE GRID POST TO PATERNO

UNIVERSITY PARK, Pa. (AP) — Joe Paterno, who gained a reputation over the years as a molder of quarterbacks, was named head football coach at Penn State Saturday.

Paterno, backfield coach at Penn State the past 16 years, succeeds Rip Engle, who announced his retirement Friday, ending one of the most successful coaching careers in football.

Engle wound up 16 years at the helm of the Nittany Lions without a losing season. Engle, sometimes called "The Gray Eagle," always said he would quit at age 60 and he reaches that age March 26.

The New Pool: It's Respectable

"You can lose and you're helpless. All other games, you get a chance to defend yourself. That's why pool's the toughest of any game."—Cicero Murphy, professional pool player.

One lone light bulb burns in the room, illuminating only a strip of green felt, 4 by 8, and the 15 colored balls.

The gambling man—black shirt and yellow tie—twitches nervously in the shadows as the player, shirt collar open and smoke from his cigarette curling toward the ceiling, carefully chalks his cue.

Now a fleeting glance of contempt around the room and he leans over the table and . . . the director yells, "Cut!"

"That's what's got the game down," says Cicero Murphy, cringing at Hollywood's version of the game that makes his living. Maybe it isn't much of a living, as pro sports go, but it keeps meat and potatoes on the table for Lillian and the three kids back in Brooklyn.

Right now Murphy is playing for his part of $10,000 in the Tournament of Champions at Morgan Hall in Long Beach. There in the basement, with temporary bleachers surrounding a pair of tables, a very select group of the world's finest players are pursuing the game's only hope for universal acceptance—tournament competition.

"We're trying to elevate the game . . . give it a better image," Murphy says, knowing full well that the game isn't going to live down its image overnight.

YOU CAN CALL it pocket billiards, dress everybody in a tuxedo and transplant it to a respectable environment, but it's still pool to most of the people who never really had the courage to walk into a real pool hall and find out what it's all about.

As family entertainment, pool has hardly ranked in wholesomeness with Sunday afternoon at the ball park. But they're trying.

Thanks to Hollywood, which made a flick called "The Hustler," a couple of years back, the blue-eyed public now understands something about the skills and pressures of the game, and that Willie Hoppe wasn't the only good player who ever lived.

But also thanks to Hollywood, pool is a seamy, shadowy world of Paul Newman getting his thumbs broken, gamblers seducing neurotic girls and hustlers hustling hustlers.

Even now, right in Long Beach, there are guys called the Machine Gun Kid, New York Blackie, Red Raider Breit and the Knoxville Bear. Good grief, get the women and kids off the streets!

OR, BETTER YET, bring 'em to Morgan Hall to see what the game's really like. You might even ask the Machine Gun Kid home for dinner.

That would be Lou Butera, a little guy with thinning black hair who approaches you with the trace of a smile and a long leather case under his arm. You're afraid to ask him what's in it.

"I play fast," he says, explaining his nickname. "I know I'd probably do better if I didn't but this is the way I play. If I tried to change now I'd lose my pace."

You get the idea right away that this guy talks like an athlete. He even holds a record—for shooting 91 balls in eight minutes.

We're just like baseball players," he says. "We get in slumps, too. Me, I always start slow. But practice doesn't help. You can stand in the batting cage all day but it doesn't do any good because when you get in the game it's a live pitcher out there. In pool, it's different when you know it means something if you miss."

MURPHY DOESN'T have a nickname, but with a front one like Cicero who needs it?

"I've got nothing against the game," he says. "It's been good to me. I still play all the other sports, like golf. I'm just learning to drive. I always was a good putter, and I'd be even better if they'd let me use my cue."

Last year Murphy won a similar tournament at Burbank. It was a high run affair where the man winning the break often ran 150 balls and game without letting his opponent off the stool.

"A lot of 'em were practicing the lag," Murphy recalls. "It won a lot of games. I ran 289 in practice one day."

The game, then, leaves little room for defensive strategy. When an opponent starts a hot run, Cicero says, "You can't do anything except hope that he misses. That's what makes the game so tough. What do you do when I run 150? You pay off . . . that's all you can do."

THERE ISN'T TOO MUCH to psychology, either.

"I just try to psych out 150 balls before he gets in there," Cicero says. "I'm usually nervous, but just before I get to the table it all leaves. Each player thinks a little different, anyway. It's better not to think that there's a guy standing behind you with a hammer just waiting for you to miss."

"By the way, Butera describes himself as "a family man with four kids and another on the way," and he carries a cue in that case, not a chopper. The pros all have their sticks custom made to specification with wood inlay and their names engraved for as much as $125 each. All are a regulation 57 inches long.

"I'm not too particular about mine," says Murphy, "as long as it's about 20 ounces and the shaft is thin. I have small hands."

Some advice: Don't shoot pool with a guy who carries his cue in a case. He's probably a magician. He'll make the balls disappear right before your eyes.

RACING FOR GLORY AND TROPHIES

A large group of Thunderbirds and Columbias races out of Long Beach Harbor in the second day of racing in the 37th annual Midwinter Regatta being hosted by five clubs in this area. The event drew a record number of boats in some classes.

LBYC, California Powerboats Top Midwinter Race

BY DONNELL CULPEPPER, DAVE TAYLOR AND DON BRACKENBURY

Long Beach Yacht Club and the California Yacht Club dominated the predicted log race of the powerboats, which was run out of LBYC Saturday, the second day of the 37th annual Midwinter Regatta.

The race drew the highest number of boats in its history—32 in classes A and B, and there would have been five others had not the flu bug attacked the skippers and crews.

* * * *

OTHER WINNERS were Art Geisler, (CYC) second, in Sea Weed, with 1.629; Bert Grimes, (CYC) third, Nina Rose, with 1.963; Wally Laucks, (Shark Island YC), in Exotica, fourth, with 2.034, and Walter Delmar (CYC) in Minorca, with 2.445.

Roger Bentley (CYC), in his first predicted log race, finished first in class B in his Xanadu, with 1.320. Harn Hoose (CYC) was second in Habeus Corpus, with 1.386, and Paul Vaughn (CYC) was third in his Sunny Side Up, with 3.040.

The second day of ocean racing, as well as outside classes at the Los Angeles YC, Long Beach YC and Seal Beach YC, was marked by many protests.

It only takes one protest to hold up the result of any race.

It appeared that the squawking of skippers and crews would go on far into the night. At LAYC, four skippers in the famous Cal-40 class were being asked to stand by for hearings, but there were chances that the result would not be announced until Sunday morning.

* * * *

TODAY, all races will be resumed at the five sponsoring clubs, LAYC, LBYC, SBYC, Cabrillo Beach YC and Alamitos Bay YC.

Alamitos Bay YC had almost a spotless record for its inside classes, with few if any protests, but the outside events were boats marked by different colors, mostly red-faced skippers and racing committeemen trying to adjust certain irregularities that seem to go along with yacht racing.

65 Nets Hebert Lead by 1

TUCSON (UPI)—Jay Hebert broke out of a two-year slump Saturday with a sparkling 65 to take over the third round lead in the Tucson Open golf tournament with a 54-hole nine-under-par total of 207.

Cigar-smoking Joe Campbell had a chance to tie Hebert at the three-quarter mark, but hit a trap on the 18th hole and bogeyed it for a 69 and a 208 total.

Johnny Pott, second round leader with an eight-under-par total of 136, slumped to a 75 including a double bogey six on the final hole, to fall back into a four-way tie for fifth place.

LITTLER HEBERT

"Gee, it feels good to play well again," Hebert said after his round had included an eagle and three birdies on the four par-five holes of the 7,200-yard Tucson National Golf Club, plus two other birdies for his seven-under-par round.

Hebert, former PGA champion, had been bothered for two years with tendon trouble in his right elbow. He said a new drug eased the pain "and this was the best round I've had in a long time."

EXPECT 60,000 FOR FINALS

Sorokin's 210 mph Run Tops Winternational Drags

By BRUCE YOUNG
L. P-T Staff Writer

POMONA—The NHRA officials called it a drag race, but the Richter Scale registered it as a major earthquake.

The grounds at the L.A. County Fairgrounds here shook Saturday under the thundering roar of 32 of the nation's strongest AA fuel dragsters, who supplied the thrills during the second day of the National Hotrod Assn. sixth Winternationals.

The event concludes today with finals in all classes, including the crowning of the top fuel and gas eliminators. A crowd of more than 60,000 is expected and the gates open at 6 a.m., with action beginning at 8.

Saturday's crowd of 27,263 saw 22 runs over 200 miles per hour and 26 of the 32 rails turned under eight seconds.

* * * *

LEADING THE charge was Mike Sorokin as he steered his fleet rail to a 210.10 mph timing, the top speed of the day and the meet. The 25-year-old Santa Monica driver used only 7.62 seconds to cover the quartermile.

Veteran driver Tommy Ivo never looked better or back Saturday, putting Danny Ongais on the trailer and out of the meet. Ivo, who was runnerup in the 1965 NHRA Winternationals, scorched the low elapsed time of the meet, covering the 1320 in 7:55 seconds.

One of the day's biggest upsets was recorded by a 24-year-old newcomer, Dominic Cardoza. He dropped the king of drag racing, Don Garlits, out of competition on the first round.

Cardoza, an Escondido auto mechanic, jumped Garlits off the starting line and won going away with a strong 7.60 seconds and 204.08 mph pass. Garlits, who is yet to make the second round in any of this year's big meets, turned 203.16 mph.

* * * *

DEFENDING champion Don Prudhomme, who is not driving the same car he won this meet with in 1965, was out of the gate like a flash and knocked Long Beach's Tom McEwen out of competition with a 210.28 mph and 7.59 clocking.

Mike Snively, the No. 1 qualifier, drove the "Hawaiian" dragster, the car that reached the winner's circle last year, to victory over Roy Thode. Snively was lightning-quick off the line and posted a 7.57 and 208.8 mph.

Keith Berg, 29-year-old jet engine mechanic from Long Beach, won the stock national championship in a 1950 Oldsmobile, registering an elapsed time of 17.16 seconds and a top end speed of 80.50 mph.

Fred Horton of Long Beach won the O/stock class, driving a 1937 Buick 84.34 mph in 17.45 seconds.

Ralston to Head West Grid Team

Ben Martin of the Air Force Academy and J. T. King of Texas Tech were named as Ralston's assitants. Duffy Daugherty of Michigan State previously was named to lead the East in the Shrine classic.

Hartshorn Seeks Second Long Beach Masters Title

By JOHN CASH

Terry Hartshorn, who won last year's Long Beach Masters championship in somewhat unspectacular fashion, leads a field of six club champions in to the 10th L. B. golf supremacy test Saturday at El Dorado Country Club beginning at 10:30.

The 20-year-old UCLA senior was unimpressive from a gallery standpoint last year because he did not uncork a big tee shot or often hole-out putts over 20 feet, but he's as steel-nerved as a surgeon.

Terry's 291 total last year was the third best recorded in Masters history, and his three 71s in the Lakewood club championship are indicative of his steady fairway displays.

* * * *

Play will be in two threesomes with the three low scores in the final group to tee off each round. Starting time is 10:30 at all courses.

The golfers will shoot for the perpetual and individual trophies donated by the Independent, Press-Telegram, one of the tourney sponsors along with the six men's clubs and six course professionals.

Champion this year will receive $75, second place $35, third $25, fourth $15 and fifth $10. A bonus of $10 is given for the low round each day. All prizes are in the form of merchandise.

Minneapolis Skater Wins World Crown

GOTEBORG, Sweden (UPI)—Tom Gray of Minneapolis scored a surprise victory in the 500-meter sprint at the world speedskating championships Saturday and Kees Verkerk of Holland won the 5,000-meter event in opening day competition.

Gray, ignoring the effects of a heavy cold, streaked the 500 in 41 seconds flat to deny Keiichi Suzuki of Japan his fourth consecutive triumph in this event. Suzuki was second in 41.2.

Norwegian Jumps 261 Feet, Wins Medal

OSLO, Norway (AP)—Norway's Bjoern Wirkola leaped 261 and 255 feet Saturday and won the gold medal in the special jumping event of the World Nordic Ski Championships.

Canadian Sets Pace in Panama Golf Open

PANAMA (AP) — Canada's Wilf Homenuik staggered in with a one-over-par 73 Saturday but took over the lead after 54 holes with a 210 total in the Panama Open Golf Tournament.

Bob McCallister of Corona, Calif., tied with Homenuik after two rounds with a 137, soared to a 77 and fell back with a 214.

ITALY PRESS CRITICIZES BILL BRADLEY

MILAN (AP)—Bill Bradley, voted the best U.S. amateur athlete in 1965, was criticized sharply in the Italian press Saturday for his performance in a recent European Cup championship basketball game.

Bradley, college player of the year last season, has been playing for Simmenthal of Milan.

After Simmenthal lost to Slavia of Prague last Thursday, the Italian press wrote that Bradley's poor performance had been decisive in the defeat.

Milan's sports daily, Gazzetta Dello Sport, wrote: "The American seems to think that the European Champions Cup is a tourist tournament."

Angels Open Concentration Camp

COME BACK ON LADIES DAY

When the Chicago Cubs come to Blair Field for spring training next week, Leo Durocher will have them just as serious as East Long Beach Little League Cubs, shown turning away a lady intruder. The young fan is Cheryl Wood, 11. Sign is pointed out by Tom London and Dennis Loper.

RIG EFFECTS CRACKDOWN AS BATTERYMEN REPORT TODAY

By ROSS NEWHAN
I.-P-T Staff Writer

PALM SPRINGS — The burdens are heavy as the Angels assemble for spring training here today. After all, they will now carry the banner of the entire state from coast to coast.

Of course, San Francisco sophisticates have already said they want nothing to do with the California Angels and it is conceivable that Anaheim may feel the same way should the club repeat its seventh place finish of 1965.

To prevent history from repeating and also repay the faith of Anaheim citizens, the Angels this spring will concentrate on baseball to such an extent that this will indeed be a concentration camp.

* * * *

IN A WARNING to his players carried by this paper on Jan. 30, manager Bill Rigney snarled:

"We are certainly equipped to give 100% every day in Anaheim and that is something we did not do in Chavez Ravine. I will not allow this team to leave its desire on the golf course or in a bar.

"Simply because we train in Palm Springs does not mean this is a country club. If a get-tough policy is necessary, then it's a get-tough policy it will be. If it takes us from 9 to 5 to get the job done then my players will never see a golf course."

* * * *

RIGNEY and his coaches —Marv Grissom, Del Rice, Salty Parker and Jack Paepke—have already been here for one week formulating a plan to escalate this Angel war on poverty.

When Rigney orders 22 batterymen into action Monday morning and when the full squad reports one week later they will hear a militant lecture which might bring Wayne Morse rushing to the athlete's defense.

Thus, over the same terrain where Pershing prepared his troops for the "war to end all wars," Rigney's regiment will train for the dollar duel with Disney.

Checking in today for the Angels' sixth spring session are:

Pitchers George Brunet, Lou Burdette, Dean Chance, Aubrey Gatewood, Bob Lee, Marcelino Lopez, Jim McGlothlin, Rudy May, Fred Newman, Jorge Rubio, Jack Sanford, Ed Sukla and Jack D. Warner. . . .

Catchers Bob Rodgers, Ed Bailey, Tom Satriano and Tom Egan. . . .

And from the Seattle roster pitchers Jim Coates, Dick Egan and John French and catcher Del Bates.

* * * *

THE ANGELS were the only club to place three pitchers among the American League's 15 ERA leaders last season, but, of the trio, only Lopez (14-13, 2.93 ERA) won more than he lost.

A paucity of power prevented Brunet (9-11, 2.56 ERA) and Newman (14-16, 2.93 ERA) from enjoying a banner season.

Lopez (22), Newman (24) and Brunet (30) join Dean Chance (24) to give the Angels a balanced and impressive rotation and the search this spring will be for a fifth starter and a lefthanded reliefer to assist Bob Lee.

Jim McGlothlin, a 22-year-old righthander who was 14-8 at Seattle before making three strong but losing efforts with the Angels, will battle the 30-year-old Burdette for the position of rotation swing man.

Control problems could thwart May's bid for a bullpen berth so the southpaw sleeper becomes Seattle's Egan.

* * * *

THE ANGELS will conduct one-a-day drills until the full squad arrives, at which time two workouts a day are likely. Many non-batterymen are expected this week, including Jim Fregosi who has yet to sign.

It has been learned, however, that Fregosi has been promised the $5,000 raise he seeks and will sign for approximately $38,000 upon his arrival here. Chance is also expected to sign early this week, probably for the same club-high $47,500 he received last season.

Rigney, entering his sixth season at the Angels helm, is now the American League's senior manager. Asked if the move to Anaheim is the principal reason for his crackdown on complacency, Rigney responded:

"The principal reason this team must play better is because I have only a one-year contract."

91st Season for NL Charter Cubs

just the No. 1 relief hurler in the league. And second baseman Glenn Beckert is going to be another Eddie Stanky or Billy Herman as soon as he learns to poke that ball to right field."

Once again, the Cubs will set a record for the most continuous major league seasons: 91. The club is the only one of the eight original charter members of the NL which has operated every season in the same city since the senior league was organized in 1876.

* * * *

KNOWN IN the very early days as the White Stockings, the team was called the Colts in the 1890s and in 1900 the club was officially named the Cubs.

They talk about Koufax as the best bet to win 30 games one of these years, but in the league's first year, A. G. Spalding, later to become famous as a sporting goods manufacturer, pitched 47 wins against 14 losses and led Chicago to the pennant in 1876.

Chicago pitcher John Clarkson even bettered that record in 1885 when he won 53 against 16 losses.

* * * *

BANKS HOLDS the NL record for grand slam home runs in a season, hitting five with the bases loaded in 1955. He's the only NL player to win the most valuable player award in successive years (1958-59).

Hack Wilson set an NL record for homers in one season in 1930, with 56. Wilson batted in 190 runs that season, still an all-time major league record.

BLAIR SELLS CUB TICKETS

Tickets for all eight Chicago Cubs exhibition games will be on sale today at the Blair Field box office from 10 a.m. to 5 p.m.

All grandstand seats are reserved and priced at $2. The Cubs will host the Cleveland Indians for two games, the San Francisco Giants for two and the Angels for four.

Banks, Santo, Williams Provide Nucleus for Leo

tioning of Durocher's confidence to get the job done. After telling the world—Cubs' president Phil Wrigley included—that he is the new boss, Leo launched talk immediately about a first division finish.

The Lion is confident that "there's too much talent on this club to finish eighth." He's also just as confident that leadership in the Durocher manner will help prove his point—and Leo long ago proved he isn't just any run-of-the-mill manager.

He's a river boat type gambler who minces no words about his desire to "break" the game. And he did just that by winning pennants with both the then Brooklyn Dodgers as well as the then New York Giants.

* * * *

THEN CAME A 10-year absence from the majors' managerial manor for this colorful character, and he's out to prove this long layoff was a mistake—baseball's failure to permit him to apply his cunning and clamor.

Answering charges that the game has passed him by, 59-year-old Leo claims:

"They have to be kidding. It's still 90 feet between bases. You still have to field nine players, and they still play nine innings, or more. The game is the same, and so is Durocher!"

Who are some of the players Long Beach fans are going to see in the workouts as well as the eight games the Cubs will play in Blair Field?

The Cubs longtime ace is Ernie Banks, who has carried the franchise on his shoulders as a shortstop or first baseman since joining the team in 1954 as a fulltime regular. Banks is a modest, humble, and optimistic athlete with more than 400 career homers; and enough awards to open his own trophy store.

INTERESTED in a most valuable player plaque? Banks has two of 'em. Maybe you'd like a grand slam homer? Banks leads all NL active players with 10 of 'em. Seven out of 12 years he's collected rbi in triple figures. Ernie is an ageless marvel.

Then there's Ron Santo, the third baseman and captain of the Cubs; Billy Williams, the Wrigley's foremost candidate to win the league's batting championship; pitchers like Larry Jackson, who won 24 games in 1964, and Dick Ellsworth, a young lefty who was in the winner's circle 22 times in 1963.

This is the nucleus at Durocher's command. It isn't great, and it isn't too bad, considering some of the younger talent Leo hopes to use in returning the Cubs to respectability.

* * * *

SOME OF this younger personnel which will attract the Blair railbirds range from Glenn Beckert and Don Kessinger, the second-shortstop combo, to Bob Hendley and Ken Holtzman, a pair of youthful lefties, to Bill Faul, the little righthander with a blazing fast ball and all the details about the wonderful world of hypnotism.

Also there's a total of four brand new Cubs: pitcher Bill Hands and catcher Ron Hundley, secured from the Giants for veteran Lindy McDaniel and Don Landrum; Wes Covington, who came from the Phillies for Doug Clemens, another outfielder, and Ty Cline, the probable center fielder who was drafted from the Braves.

All this and Durocher, too, assure a lot of lively action at the western outpost on the majors' spring training camp Rand McNally.

OSTEEN EARNS $5,000 RAISE; FOUR UNSIGNED

Southpaw Claude Osteen, third member of the pitching triumverate that carried the Dodgers to the world championship, headed five players who Saturday reached terms with the club for 1966.

A winner of 15 games during the regular season when his teammates gave him little batting support, Osteen came through with the key third game win, 4-0, that started the Dodgers back in the World Series after two losses.

Osteen signed for around $30,000, an increase of about $5,000.

Two other regulars also come to terms. They are centerfielder Willie Davis and Johnny Podres, dean of the Dodger pitching staff. Both signed for about $30,000, the same as last season. The other two signed were catcher Hector Valle and pitcher Bill Singer.

Still to reach terms are four top stars—Sandy Koufax, Don Drysdale, Maury Wills and Lou Johnson.

Sharman, L.B. Coaches Stage Basketball Clinic

An admission-free basketball clinic will be held at the LBCC gymnasium Saturday, from 10 a.m. to noon.

Coaches and players of all teams, parents and youngsters of all ages are invited.

The clinic was jointly announced by Bill Sharman, western director of the sponsoring Flying A sports bureau, and Chuck Kane, coach of the LBCC basketball team. Kane, a graduate of Pepperdine and USC, is in his second year as LBCC coach following seven seasons at Dominguez High School.

Kane will be aided by his LBCC assistant, John Rambo, former star player at LBCC and Long Beach State.

Members of the LBCC team will be on hand to help coaches Kane, Rambo and Sharman demonstrate various aspects of the game.

Following the clinic there will be a drawing for basketballs, tickets to a Lakers game and copies of Sharman's new book, "Sharman on Basketball Shooting."

Say AL Studying 2 Division Setup

ST LOUIS (UPI) — The Sporting News said Saturday night that American League executives are giving informal consideration to a plan which would split the circuit into Eastern and Western divisions.

The newspaper said original interest in the proposal was generated by Gabe Paul, president of the Cleveland Indians, and Lee MacPhail, former president of the Baltimore Orioles, now administrator of the commissioner's office.

"They feel the idea of two pennant races within the league would arouse more interest among fans and increase attendance," the international sports weekly said.

The newspaper quoted Paul "It would be a terrific thing for our league . . . two pennant races — two champions fighting for a World Series berth . . . I think it would be very healthy."

* * * *

THE PROPOSAL places Baltimore, Boston, Cleveland, New York and Washington in the Eastern division with California, Chicago, Detroit, Kansas City and Minnesota in the Western, the newspaper said.

The newspaper said "A poll of executives, one from each club, indicated three favored divisional play, three were opposed and four had open mind attitudes."

The Sporting News said that the Yankees joined Baltimore and Cleveland in favoring the plan while Kansas City, Washington and Minnesota were in opposition. The Angels' Robert Reynolds, Boston's Dick O'Connell, Chicago's Ed Short and Detroit's Jim Campbell said they would approach the question with an "open mind."

Cubs Still Can't See The Light

One of the most consistent losers in baseball in recent years—both on the field and in the pocketbook—has been the Chicago Cubs, who will move into Long Beach next week for spring training.

Baseball men, as well as observers, long have placed most of the blame for the club's financial losses—especially in the 20 years since World War II—on the fact that owner P. K. Wrigley refuses to install lights in Wrigley Field.

It is the only major league park without lights.

It was felt throughout baseball that this would be the year that Wrigley finally yielded and ordered lights.

This belief was bolstered when the Cubs issued a financial statement recently which revealed the club lost $311,197 last season to run its four-year deficit since 1962 to $797,224.

However, Wrigley remains adamant in his stand against lights even though everyone believes this would eliminate the red ink and put the club in the black immediately.

"IT ISN'T NIGHT BASEBALL WE NEED, but winning baseball," Wrigley told Edgar Munzel, one of the fine Chicago writers who will accompany the team west. "If we get a winning team, the fans will pour through the turnstiles again no matter whether we play morning, noon or night.

"Personally, I still believe baseball is a daylight game and I have no intention of puting lights in Wrigley Field now or in the foreseeable future."

Munzel asked Wrigley if the financial losses of the Cubs influenced the hiring of Leo Durocher as manager.

"Definitely not," the Cub owner replied. "Losses at the gate don't worry me . . . but losses on the field do. And that's why we got Durocher.

"I felt that the team just wasn't puting out. The reason I arrived at this conclusion was that whenever we traded players away, they immediately became stars somewhere else."

"IN OTHER WORDS," he continued, "they apparently had the ability all the time, but we just weren't getting it out of them. Maybe we were too good to them. I decided that what we needed was somebody with the drive, the toughness and the leadership of Durocher to get it out of them. Somebody had to wake them up.

"Now if Durocher can do that sort of a job for us and we become a winning team again, that's all we need. That will solve things on the field as well as at the gate. After all, a winning team is the only secret to showing a profit in baseball. That and that alone."

Cub vice-president Charlie Grimm, who formerly managed the club himself, agreed that winning, rather than lights, was the answer.

"All of us realize that the biggest problem facing us is to rebuild the confidence of the players. They've fallen into a losing habit and developed a defeatist complex after finishing in the second division for so many years.

"And we couldn't have found a better man than Durocher to start pumping confidence back into them."

LAST SEASON, THE CUBS' HOME ATTENDANCE was only 641,361 . . . second lowest since World War II.

The club showed a loss of $1,237,015 strictly on its baseball operations. This was cut to $311,197 by receipts of $925,818 from radio-TV income and rental of the park to the Chicago Bears of the NFL during football season.

The last year the Cubs showed a profit was in 1963 when the club drew a home attendance of 979,551 to finish $67,979 to the good.

In 1961, the club showed a profit of $29,166 on attendance of only 673,057 . . . but that was due to the $425,000 the Cubs received for sale of players out of the expansion pool when the Mets and Houston Astros joined the league.

The Cubs' biggest profit in recent years was in 1958 when they came out $199,000 ahead. They were in the black, too, in 1957 when auditors came up with a $357 profit after a valiant struggle with the books.

But they've been fighting a losing battle in recent seasons.

49ers Unveil Quiz Team in Friday Meet

That's not a track team gallivanting on the cinders at Long Beach State these days, it's a quiz show. An honest one. So honest that none of the competitors knows where he's going to finish when the tape is played.

The 49ers break out the tape, and the liniment, too, of course, on Friday when they commence a question mark campaign against Cal Poly of Pomona and Fullerton State on the Pomona oval.

They'll add to their knowledge in the big one, the Long Beach Relays, on March 5 at Veterans Stadium, and the following week they host the CCAA title showdown against San Diego State.

* * * *

OF COURSE, it may not be a showdown at all.

San Diego is bulging to the gunwales with talent. Long Beach is bulging with names, untried, unproven names.

"If the fellows improve, become stars, we could be very tough," pointed out coach Jack Rose as he began preparations for his 10th year at the 49er factory. "Remember, last year San Diego was favored and we were supposed to finish fourth, but we won both CCAA and Regional NCAA and San Diego was the also-ran."

Says Rose, "San Diego, with Don Shy, definitely is the team to beat. L.A. State, Fresno and Long Beach should be scrambling for place and show.

* * * *

SHY, ONE of America's outstanding decathlon performers, and a 13.6 hurdler, probably could score in 17 events in the duel with Long Beach if he wanted to.

The 49ers must replace league champions John Rambo, Ray Christensen, Kerry Wright, Ralph Lee and Mit Hunt, team captain Jeff Clements and all-America George Lacy.

The 49ers expect high point production from veterans Walt Clements, 14.3 and 37.7 hurdler; Frank Harris, 9.6 sprinter; Gary Ordway, with marks of 55-7 7/8 in the shotput and 173-6 1/2 in the discus, as well as distance runner Chuck Webb (4:14, 9:14), half-miler George Davis (1:52.5), javelin thrower Eric Westin (203-7) and pole vaulter Kent Parson (14-4).

There's lots of poential and lots of "if" on the 49er campus.

Jack Rose will begin 10th season as coach at Long Beach State with a question mark team. One answer may be veteran hurdler Walt Clements with marks of 14.3 and 37.7.

Hopes Bright for Striders, Troy, UCLA

By JOHN DIXON

Last year the Alphabet War squashed track and field as low as a centipede's tummy, but an uneasy truce now prevails and there are title bellows ricocheting throughout the Southland.

From the "official" outdoor opener, the Long Beach Relays March 5, to the finale, the duel with Russia in the Coliseum, July 23-24, this should be a big season, jammed with records and emotion.

Who's the greatest? Not Cassius Clay. Perhaps USC or UCLA, and the Striders, as usual.

* * * *

THE STRIDERS, with almost as much depth as the Russian army and as much quality as Tiffany's, already are an overwhelming favorite to retain their National AAU championship.

Tom Jennings' 49er Track Club finished fifth nationally in its premiere year, and hopes to move even higher this time. With such talents as Dee Andrews, Charles Craig, Dave Kemp, Darel Newman, Sid Nicholas, John Rambo, Ulis Williams, et al, maybe it will.

Best college team in the U.S.? Flip a coin—it's either USC or UCLA. They meet May 8.

* * * *

THE TROYS have such returnees as NCAA titlists Bill Fosdick, 16-0 pole vaulter, and Paul Kerry, 13.7 high hurdler. Then there's Gary Carlsen, 190-8 1/2 discus thrower; Bruce Bess, 4:02.7 miler; Dennis Carr, 1:49.8 half-miler, and Mahoney Samuels, 52-5 triple jumper.

Watch out for the newcomers—Earl McCullouch, national hurdle record holder from Long Beach City College; John Link, 4:06.6 miler, and Roger Wolff, 46.7 quartermiler.

UCLA's bellwethers are Bob Day, at 3:56.4 and 8:33.0 the No. 1 miler and two-miler in collegiate circles; half-miler Dennis Breckow, pole vaulter Marc Savage and sprinters Norm Jackson and Tom Jones.

* * * *

"I CAN hardly wait until next year," UCLA coach Jim Bush said last season as he contemplated the Trojan meet. Well, it's "next year," and this is the year the Bruins had better come through, for the Trojan Frosh register such names as Paul Wilson (16-6 3/4 pole vault), Richard Joyce (1:48.8 880), miler Carl Trentadue (4:08.5) and Lennox Miller (9.4 sprinter).

Occidental is building character again this year. Vance Peterson (51.1) may be the nation's best intermediate hurdler, while sprinter Chuck Kanoy (9.7) and quartermiler Ron Sommer (48.8) from Poly are next best.

12 Vets Give LBCC Depth

By GARY RAUSCH

Joe Lanning is never one to go out on a limb but when the Long Beach City College track coach has a mile-wide smile this early in the season, he must have something cooking.

"I won't predict whether we'll finish first or last in the conference but right now we've got more depth than in any year since I can remember—except for the state championship outfit of 1963," says Lanning enthusiastically.

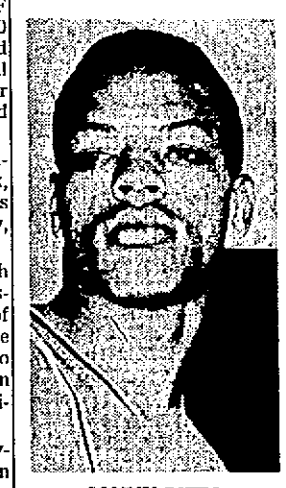

"Our depth is not measured in bodies. We don't have any superstars but these kids are definitely a cut above the average athlete."

The Vikings have 12 returning lettermen, six of whom earned points in helping LBCC to runnerup honors in the conference meet.

Tops on the list is 280-pound weightman Roy Thurman, who took third in the state and SoCal and second in Metro. He had season bests of 55-3 3/4 and 151-5 1/2 and was Viking of the Year for track.

ROY THURMAN
Shot, Discus Ace

SONNY PITTS
9.7 Mark in 100

In the sprint, Sonny Pitts (9.8) and Cedric Rambo (9.9) return. Pitts already has run 9.7 while Poly High's Fred Muench (9.7) and the Wilson trio of Bob Deeds (9.8), Steve Harvey (9.8), and Bob Wilson (9.9) —all freshmen — figure in the same class.

Multi-talented Bob Hanrahan drops the 330-intermediate hurdles in favor of the 440, where Jim Antenore, runnerup for Bee champion Millikan in the CIF 660, also is entered.

* * * *

HANRAHAN will continue in the jumps, where he had bests of 23-5 3/4 and 45-7 1/2 last season. Larry Freeman, third on the all-time prep list at 49-8, probably will be the No. 1 triple jumper, however. The little (5-9) freshman, who leaped 6-8 1/2 at Poly, will also provide depth in the high jump with Dan Giddens (6-6) and JV basketballer Tom Massey (6-2).

The half-mile has always been a Viking stronghold. Mike Post, 1:55.7 and fourth in Metro, returns along with a healthy Ralph Spicer (1:57.0 Friday) and Rob Russell.

In the mile, Roger Fassett ran 4:24.5 as a frosh and Dan Flores 4:24.8 for Jordan's school record before entering the service in 1961. Another bright hope is Bill DeVore, CIF 1320 champ and record holder for Lakewood last season.

* * * *

HURDLER Earl McCullough fled to USC but Lanning has U. of Kansas transfer Dave Stevens, Rambo, squadman Ernie Tanner and Wilson grads Fred Nicholl and Ron Wilder ready to go. Stevens ran 14.0 as a Denver, Colo., prep and Nicholl 14.2 and runnerup in CIF.

Mickey Wilson is back in the 2-mile and Skip McDowell and Jim Keck the pole vault but both events look weak unless Bruce Traasdahl (9:44, Wilson) and Kim Proctor (13-4, Millikan Bees) pan out.

Thurman will weigh heavily in his specialties and may get help from basketball center Steve Nott and fellow football tackle Randy Logan.

3 Moore Teams Given Chance to Dethrone Rabbits

By JIM McCORMACK

Poly High has lost only one track championship in Moore League history, and if it is going to make it two, this is the year.

The Rabbits, defending CIF and state champions, have only one big meet pointman back from last year's team, shotputter John Hubbell.

Poly, coached by Lee Foreman, still is the team to beat, but many believe that Jordan, Millikan and Lakewood all have a shot at it. Lakewood coach George Meyer best described the battle for dual meet honors as depending on "who is well and who isn't."

* * * *

JORDAN, Moore League Bee and Cee dual meet titlist last season, is rated the present threat to Poly's domain, but Millikan (CIF Bee champ) and Lakewood (CIF Bee runnerup) also could turn the trick.

Most of last year's established stars were graduated, with the exception of Hubbell and Wilson distance runner Hartzell Alpizar. Hubbell, CIF champion in the shotput, has a best toss of 63-9 1/2. Alpizar, who performed impressively in cross country last fall, had a best of 9:43.1 in the two-mile and a 4:22 in the mile.

St. Anthony, competing in the Catholic League, has a new coach, who promises an awakening in the sport at his school. Coach John Lucas won't predict where the Saints will finish, but then he never has seen the league. He has several fine sophomore distance runners, including Martin Curtin and Tony Gomez.

* * * *

WILSON, coached by Don Mulligan, has help for Alpizar in quartermiler Steve Sousa (50.9) and high jumpers G. A. Dirk (6-1) and Rick Hubbell (6-1), who could be late turning out of the Bruins reach the CIF basketball playoffs.

High jump will be a strong spot for Poly. The Rabbits have John Watson, who has cleared 6-4 3/4 this year, and sophomore Jay Jones, who went 6-2 last year.

Lakewood boasts of the most successful track athletes in Long Beach in Connly DeVerse. Competing as a Bee, DeVerse was CIF low hurdle champion and high hurdle runnerup. The only race he lost all year was the CIF finals.

Millikan also has several fine athletes, including CIF Bee titlists in Ed Rickey (880 and mile) and Greg Ward (220). Also on the list Phil Kuhn (49.5), Rich Keller (1:58), Bob Platt (21-7) and Phil Lockwood (54-0).

Jordan, Wilson and Downey opened seasons last week, with the other high schools following suit by next Friday, when Poly hosts Muir.

Jordan and Downey both won, the Panthers in impressive fashion. Although most of last year's Bee and Cee champs have moved up to varsity this season, Jordan also captured the lower division competition.

Best mark was Brian Davis's 6-5 1/2 high jump, a Jordan school record. Alpizar ran a 9:44.8 two-mile for Wilson.

PENN STATE GRID POST TO PATERNO

UNIVERSITY PARK, Pa. (AP) — Joe Paterno, who gained a reputation over the years as a molder of quarterbacks, was named head football coach at Penn State Saturday.

Paterno, backfield coach at Penn State the past 16 years, succeeds Rip Engle, who announced his retirement Friday, ending one of the most successful coaching careers in football.

Engle wound up 16 years at the helm of the Nittany Lions without a losing season. Engle, sometimes called "The Gray Eagle," always said he would quit at age 60 and he reaches that age March 26.

DONNELL CULPEPPER

Busy Weekend for Outdoors

Where else but in Southern California could you find thousands of yachtsmen and hundreds of casters taking part in two big events this weekend? Looking over the enormous spread of yachts from up and down the Pacific Coast, I almost forgot that the Long Beach Casting Club is having its largest tournament of the year—the annual Midwinter.

That also is the name of the yacht event that is being hosted by five clubs today, the final period of the three-day events.

Some accuracy events were held by the Casting Club Saturday. Today's schedule calls for a breakfast at 8 a.m., wet fly accuracy at 9 a.m., to be followed with dry fly accuracy and the three-eighths-ounce plug accuracy.

Women of Long Beach Women's Casting Club will serve lunch today at noon. The afternoon events embrace the five-eighths-ounce plug accuracy, three-eighths-ounce spinning distance and, finally, steelhead distance fly.

Spectators are welcomed by the Casting Club at any of its events. The club is situated at Federation Drive and East Seventh Street, and if you wish to watch some real experts in action, take a look at those men and women today.

* * * *

THE MIDWINTER REGATTA, the 37th annual, by the way, is not especially a spectator sport unless you have your own power boat and elect to follow the great fleet of yachts ranging from seven-foot Sabots through the Cal-40s and K-40s and on to the larger ocean racing classes such as Chubasco, a 12-meter, 66-foot boat.

Few persons realize that the Midwinter Regatta was started in the late '20s for the express purpose of attracting tourists to Southern California.

As the matter now stands, says Curtis Winters, the regatta's public information chairman, the events probably attract more sailors than tourists. With roughly 1,000 boats in the 80-odd classes being hosted by five clubs, it is safe to say that thousands of persons from out of the city are here crewing on the yachts.

One excellent vantage point for spectators is the bluff at Point Fermin Park, San Pedro, but be sure that you take field glasses if you want to get a good view of the Ocean Racing Classes.

There will be much interest in the Cal-40 class today, with Barney Flam in Flambuoyant II as the favorite. Cal-40s were used exclusively in the recent Long Beach Yacht Club's Congressional Cup Race, now one of the most interesting racing events on the Pacific Coast.

DON MARTIN SENDS WORD that Railroad Canyon Lake Resort will open for the season Saturday, March 5. The lake is almost full from the winter rains, the water is clearing rapidly and all indications point to a most successful season.

Railroad Canyon Lake is situated a few miles above Elsinore in Riverside County and offers fishing for bass, crappie, bluegill and catfish.

Martin says that the camping area will be open March 4. Rowboats and boats with motors are available and there is a ramp for launching private boats. Tackle and bait will be available at the store. Bottom-bumping rubber worms, deep-running lures and night crawlers are the best baits for bass this time of the year.

For reservations write to Railroad Canyon Lake, 23250 Railroad Canyon Road, Romoland, Calif. Area code is 714 and the telephone number 674-2725.

Isabella Lake is slow at this writing, although some fair-sized trout have been taken on red salmon eggs in the section of the lake that was old Kernville.

Cachuma and Piru Lakes in Ventura County are yielding catchable-size rainbow trout, part of the plants that have been made by the Department of Fish and Game.

FRESH-WATER NOTES — Department of Fish and Game regulations take effect March 1, but it will be April 30 before most of the northern waters are open for fishing. Also, it will be April 30 before the present five-trout limit in Southern California goes to 10 fish. That 10-trout limit will apply through Oct. 31, when the Southland limit automatically reverts to five fish.

There are exceptions, however. Orange and San Diego Counties have a 10-trout limit from Feb. 26 through Sept. 9, and the five-fish limit from Sept. 10 through Feb. 25 of 1967.

Nine additional inland areas have been added to the night-fishing list this year. Fish of all species may be taken at any time of night in Madera, Fresno, Tulare and Kings Counties, and in Woodward Lake, Stanislaus County.

Part of Plumas County will be open to night fishing for catfish, carp, hardhead, squawfish and sucker. To be opened are Butt Valley Lake, Snake Lake and Smith Lake. Also opened for the same species will be the Lower Russian River in northwestern California.

Big Bear Lake's level is up to 50 feet, but it is still iced over and not fishable. Ditto for Green Valley Lake. Arrowhead Lake is so cold that fishing pressure there is way down. Some kokanee trollers are getting fish and frosty hands.

Dodger Farm Club vs. Rockets

By CHUCK MEDICK

The Dodger Minor Leaguers, managed by Tom LaSorda, invade Blair Field today for the second game of their three-game series with the Long Beach Rockets at 1:30.

The Rockets won the opener 11-4 several weeks ago, but rain and the medical benefit game forced postponement of the second meeting.

Former Lakewood mound ace Jim Strickland probably will start for the Dodgers, while Don Rowe or Butch Hughes will be on the firing line for the Rockets.

Rocket manager Jack Graham is beaming about his newest Rocket, Albert Thompson, who doubled and tripled in the same inning in his Rocket debut. Thompson will be back in left field today.

Dodger catcher Jim Campanis again will be behind the plate. The slugging son of the Dodger farm director blasted out three hits in three times at bat in his last appearance at Blair Field.

4 WINS FOR SHOEMAKER

Cedar Key, Polar Sea Score

By ERNIE MASON

Defending champion Cedar Key and Polar Sea won divisions of the split $75,000 San Luis Rey Handicap Saturday at Santa Anita.

In another feature, Lucky Debonair continued his successful comeback toward next week's $145,000 Santa Anita Handicap by winning a $15,000 overnight purse. Lucky Debonair, sidelined in January because of a leg injury, won by 3½ lenghts in the swift time of 1:48 1-5 for 1⅛ miles.

The San Luis Rey is run over the grass at 1½ miles and is the last major test for the $125,000 San Juan Capistrano Handicap on March 12.

Jockey Bill Shoemaker, riding his fourth winner of the day, whipped Cedar Key into a tight photo finish over Plaque in a head-to-head battle down the stretch.

Shoemaker kept Cedar Key, the betting favorite, in the middle of the field of 10 until he began to drive to the wire. O'Hara was third, while Canada's George Royal, the second betting choice, came up too late in the stretch and ran fifth.

The time was 2:25.1.

The winner paid $7.40, $4.80 and $3.40; Plaque, ridden by Eddie Belmonte, returned $7.40 and $4.40. O'Hara paid $3.60.

Cedar Key's triumph was his first since he won this same stakes last year.

Tudor Fame was second by a nose over Ask Father, who almost stole the race in a front-running ride by Shoemaker. The time was 2:26 2/5.

Polar Sea, owned by Edward and Harry Seltzer of Chicago, had displayed grass ability in the East and Midwest the past two years. He won six of 15 starts in 1965, including the Chicago Handicap at Hawthorne and the Absecon Handicap at Atlantic City.

For Shoemaker, it was his first quadruple riding success of the meeting after he had ridden seven triples. He booted in China Marine ($6.60) in the first race and Baron Gruder ($4.80) in the second for a $17.60 daily double and was aboard Lucky Debonair in the fourth, who paid $4 to win.

Pia Star Hialeah Star; Kelso Return Muddied

HIALEAH, (UPI) — Mrs. Ada Rice's Pia Star, a horse many trackmen said hated the mud, romped for a mile and a quarter on the sloppy Hialeah strip like a happy piglet Saturday to win the $134,800 Widener Handicap.

At the end, Pia Starr managed only by the length of his outstretched nose to hold on to the victory.

For the fifth consecutive race, Valley Farm's Selari charged home too late to finish second. Five lengths further back came Slystitch for third money in the field of nine handicap stars.

Convex, favorite of the rainy day crowd of 29,138, for his victory in the recent $50,000-added Seminole Handicap, finished seventh, packing high weight of 120 pounds.

As third choice of the crowd, Pia Star paid $9.20; $5.20 and $3.80 across the board. Selari returned $4.20 and $3 and Slystitch paid $6.60 for show.

Mrs. Richard C. DuPont's Kelso, scheduled to make his winter debut in a Hialeah allowance race, was scratched after the heavy rains.

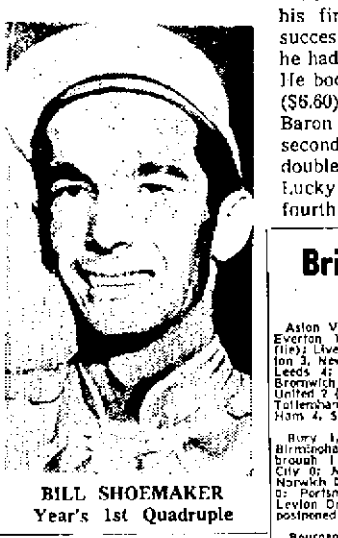

BALTIMORE (UPI) — Alder Branch Farm's Exceedingly, a stretch-running son of Third Brother, sprinted to the front in the final yards at Pimlico to win the $17,825 Challedon Stakes by three quarters of a length.

The Maryland-bred 3-year-old was timed in 1:47 and paid $3.80 and $2.40 to place and show. Bay Hawk paid $2.60 to place and show while Buck's Charger returned $4.

NEW ORLEANS (AP)—Miss Sun Tan sped to a decisive 3½ length victory in the $15,000-added A. B. Letellier Handicap at the New Orleans Fair Grounds.

Miss Sun Tan paid $42.40, $12.40 and $5.20. Flamisan returned $10.80 and $5.60, while R. Thomas paid $3.80.

LINCOLN (AP) — A single ticket holder from Brooklyn, N. Y., among 16,827 fans at Lincoln Downs, won $54,838.40, the highest twin double payoff ever at Lincoln.

O'HARA, outrun to the mile, found room along the rail to make up ground, was well placed out of the final turn but was not good enough. AURELIUS II was forced to make his bid around the far turn while on the outside and tired. GEORGE ROYAL went wide around the final turn during his mild bid and hung. SWITCHBACK was done early. Retired Jockey Protests Whip

MELBOURNE, Australia (AP)—A retired Australian jockey fired a double-barreled shotgun harmlessly over the heads of the horses about to start a hurdle race at Flemington race track Saturday and held up the event for 16 minutes.

Walter J. Hoysted, 52, who kept police and track officials at bay while demanding that jockeys would not whip their mounts in the two-mile race, was arrested after being induced to remove the shells from his gun.

"It is a nice state of affairs," Hoysted said after his arrest, "when a man has to make a fool of himself to get justice."

Angels Open Concentration Camp

COME BACK ON LADIES DAY

When the Chicago Cubs come to Blair Field for spring training next week, Leo Durocher will have them just as serious as East Long Beach Little League Cubs, shown turning away a lady intruder. The young fan is Cheryl Wood, 11. Sign is pointed out by Tom London and Dennis Loper.

RIG EFFECTS CRACKDOWN AS BATTERYMEN REPORT TODAY

By ROSS NEWHAN
I. P-T Staff Writer

PALM SPRINGS — The burdens are heavy as the Angels assemble for spring training here today. After all, they will now carry the banner of the entire state from coast to coast.

Of course, San Francisco sophisticates have already said they want nothing to do with the California Angels and it is conceivable that Anaheim may feel the same way should the club repeat its seventh place finish of 1965.

To prevent history from repeating and also repay the faith of Anaheim citizens, the Angels this spring will concentrate on baseball to such an extent that this will indeed be a concentration camp.

* * * *

IN A WARNING to his players carried by this paper on Jan. 30, manager Bill Rigney snarled:

"We are certainly equipped to give 100% every day in Anaheim and that is something we did not do in Chavez Ravine. I will not allow this team to leave its desire on the golf course or in a bar.

"Simply because we train in Palm Springs does not mean this is a country club. If a get-tough policy is necessary, then it's a get-tough policy it will be. If it takes us from 9 to 5 to get the job done then my players will never see a golf course."

* * * *

RIGNEY and his coaches —Marv Grissom, Del Rice, Salty Parker and Jack Paepke—have already been here for one week formulating a plan to escalate this Angel war on poverty.

When Rigney orders 22 batterymen into action Monday morning and when the full squad reports one week later they will hear a militant lecture which might bring Wayne Morse rushing to the athlete's defense.

Thus, over the same terrain where Pershing prepared his troops for the "war to end all wars," Rigney's regiment will train for the dollar duel with Disney.

Checking in today for the Angels' sixth spring session are:

Pitchers George Brunet, Lou Burdette, Dean Chance, Aubrey Gatewood, Bob Lee, Marcelino Lopez, Jim McGlothlin, Rudy May, Fred Newman, Jorge Rubio, Jack Sanford, Ed Sukla and Jack D. Warner. . . .

Catchers Bob Rodgers, Ed Bailey, Tom Satriano and Tom Egan. . . .

And from the Seattle roster pitchers Jim Coates, Dick Egan and John French and catcher Del Bates.

* * * *

THE ANGELS were the only club to place three pitchers among the American League's 15 ERA leaders last season, but, of the trio, only Lopez (14-13, 2.93 ERA) won more than he lost.

A paucity of power prevented Brunet (9-11, 2.56 ERA) and Newman (14-16, 2.93 ERA) from enjoying a banner season.

Lopez (22), Newman (24) and Brunet (30) join Dean Chance (24) to give the Angels a balanced and impressive rotation and the search this spring will be for a fifth starter and a lefthanded reliefer to assist Bob Lee.

Jim McGlothlin, a 22-year-old righthander who was 14-8 at Seattle before making three strong but losing efforts with the Angels, will battle the 39-year-old Burdette for the position of rotation swing man.

Control problems could thwart May's bid for a bullpen berth so the southpaw sleeper becomes Seattle's Egan.

* * * *

THE ANGELS will conduct one-a-day drills until the full squad arrives, at which time two workouts a day are likely. Many non-batterymen are expected this week, including Jim Fregosi who has yet to sign.

It has been learned, however, that Fregosi has been promised the $5,000 raise he seeks and will sign for approximately $38,000 upon his arrival here. Chance is also expected to sign early this week, probably for the same club-high $47,500 he received last season.

Rigney, entering his sixth season at the Angels helm, is now the American League's senior manager. Asked if the move to Anaheim is the principal reason for his crackdown on complacency, Rigney responded:

"The principal reason this team must play better is because I have only a one-year contract."

91st Season for NL Charter Cubs

just the No. 1 relief hurler in the league. And second baseman Glenn Beckert is going to be another Eddie Stanky or Billy Herman as soon as he learns to poke that ball to right field."

Once again, the Cubs will set a record for the most continuous major league seasons: 91. The club is the only one of the eight original charter members of the NL which has operated every season in the same city since the senior league was organized in 1876.

* * * *

KNOWN IN the very early days as the White Stockings, the team was called the Colts in the 1890s and in 1900 the club was officially named the Cubs.

They talk about Koufax as the best bet to win 30 games one of these years, but in the league's first year, A. G. Spalding, later to become famous as a sporting goods manufacturer, pitched 47 wins against 14 losses and led Chicago to the pennant in 1876.

Chicago pitcher John Clarkson even bettered that record in 1885 when he won 53 against 16 losses.

* * * *

BANKS HOLDS the NL record for grand slam home runs in a season, hitting five with the bases loaded in 1955. He's the only NL player to win the most valuable player award in successive years (1958-59).

Hack Wilson set an NL record for homers in one season in 1930, with 56. Wilson batted in 190 runs that season, still an all-time major league record.

Tickets for all eight Chicago Cubs exhibition games will be on sale today at the Blair Field box office from 10 a.m. to 5 p.m.

All grandstand seats are reserved and priced at $2. The Cubs will host the Cleveland Indians for two games, the San Francisco Giants for two and the Angels for four.

Banks, Santo, Williams Provide Nucleus for Leo

tioning of Durocher's confidence to get the job done. After telling the world—Cubs' president Phil Wrigley included—that he is the new boss, Leo launched talk immediately about a first division finish.

The Lion is confident that "there's too much talent on this club to finish eighth." He's also just as confident that leadership in the Durocher manner will help prove his point—and Leo long ago proved he isn't just any run-of-the-mill manager.

He's a river boat type gambler who minces no words about his desire to "break" the game. And he did just that by winning pennants with both the then Brooklyn Dodgers as well as the then New York Giants.

* * * *

THEN CAME A 10-year absence from the majors' managerial manor for this colorful character, and he's out to prove this long layoff was a mistake—baseball's failure to permit him to apply his cunning and clamor.

Answering charges that the game has passed him by, 59-year-old Leo claims:

"They have to be kidding. It's still 90 feet between bases. You still have to field nine players, and they still play nine innings, or more. The game is the same, and so is Durocher!"

Who are some of the players Long Beach fans are going to see in the workouts as well as the eight games the Cubs will play in Blair Field?

The Cubs longtime ace is Ernie Banks, who has carried the franchise on his shoulders as a shortstop or first baseman since joining the team in 1954 as a fulltime regular. Banks is a modest, humble, and optimistic athlete with more than 400 career homers and enough awards to open his own trophy store.

INTERESTED in a most valuable player plaque? Banks has two of 'em. Maybe you'd like a grand slam homer? Banks leads all NL active players with 10 of 'em. Seven out of 12 years he's collected rbi in triple figures. Ernie is an ageless marvel.

Then there's Ron Santo, the third baseman and captain of the Cubs; Billy Williams, the Wrigley's foremost candidate to win the league's batting championship; pitchers like Larry Jackson, who won 24 games in 1964, and Dick Ellsworth, a young lefty who was in the winner's circle 22 times in 1963.

This is the nucleus at Durocher's command. It isn't great, and it isn't too bad considering some of the younger talent Leo hopes to use in returning the Cubs to respectability.

* * * *

SOME OF this younger personnel which will attract the Blair railbirds range from Glenn Beckert and Don Kessinger, the second-shortstop combo, to Bob Hendley and Ken Holtzman, a pair of youthful lefties, to Bill Faul, the little righthander with a blazing fast ball and all the details about the wonderful world of hypnotism.

Also there's a total of four brand new Cubs: pitcher Bill Hands and catcher Ron Hundley, secured from the Giants for veteran Lindy McDaniel and Don Landrum; Wes Covington, who came from the Phillies for Doug Clemens, another outfielder, and Ty Cline, the probable center fielder who was drafted from the Braves.

All this and Durocher, too, assure a lot of lively action at the western outpost on the majors' spring training camp Rand McNally.

OSTEEN EARNS $5,000 RAISE; FOUR UNSIGNED

Southpaw Claude Osteen, third member of the pitching triumverate that carried the Dodgers to the world championship, headed five players who Saturday reached terms with the club for 1966.

A winner of 15 games during the regular season when his teammates gave him little batting support, Osteen came through with the key third game win, 4-0, that started the Dodgers back in the World Series after two losses.

Osteen signed for around $30,000, an increase of about $5,000.

Two other regulars also come to terms. They are centerfielder Willie Davis and Johnny Podres, dean of the Dodger pitching staff. Both signed for about $30,000, the same as last season. The other two signed were catcher Hector Valle and pitcher Bill Singer.

Still to reach terms are four top stars—Sandy Koufax, Don Drysdale, Maury Wills and Lou Johnson.

Say AL Studying 2 Division Setup

ST LOUIS (UPI) — The Sporting News said Saturday night that American League executives are giving informal consideration to a plan which would split the circuit into Eastern and Western divisions.

The newspaper said original interest in the proposal was generated by Gabe Paul, president of the Cleveland Indians, and Lee MacPhail, former president of the Baltimore Orioles, now administrator of the commissioner's office.

"They feel the idea of two pennant races within the league would arouse more interest among fans and increase attendance," the international sports weekly said.

The newspaper quoted Paul "It would be a terrific thing for our league . . . two pennant races — two champions fighting for a World Series berth . . . I think it would be very healthy."

THE PROPOSAL places Baltimore, Boston, Cleveland, New York and Washington in the Eastern division with California, Chicago, Detroit, Kansas City and Minnesota in the Western, the newspaper said.

The newspaper said "A poll of executives, one from each club, indicated three favored divisional play, three were opposed and four had open mind attitudes."

The Sporting News said that the Yankees joined Baltimore and Cleveland in favoring the plan while Kansas City, Washington and Minnesota were in opposition. The Angels' Robert Reynolds, Boston's Dick O'Connell, Chicago's Ed Short and Detroit's Jim Campbell said they would approach the question with an "open mind."

Stocks Continue to Draw Back; Market Active

By C. J. PARNOW

NEW YORK (UPI)—Stock prices took a beating on the New York Stock Exchange last week. Trading was moderatively active.

Only a modest plus sign midweek broke a string of declines in the Dow-Jones industrial average as it continued to draw back from the 1,000 mark which it failed to penetrate the week before.

The indicator was hit with a 1.34 loss on Monday and plunged 6.12 on Tuesday. A modest 0.83 gain was scored Wednesday but the list sold off 7.13 on Thursday. Friday's session saw another 0.05 added to the deficit.

* * * *

FOR THE week, the senior average lost 13.81 at 975.22. Rails fared somewhat better but were still down 1.67 at 267.73 as traders continued to take profits in the group. Utilities shed 3.12 at a new 1965-66 low of 144.51. Standard & Poor's 500 stock index dropped 1.40 to 92.41.

Trading shrank to 44,064,920 shares from 46,736,890 shares a week before and compared with 27,889,821 shares in the same week last year.

Of the 1,548 issues traded, 950 retreated, 150 to new 1965-66 lows, while 489 advanced, 224 to new highs.

* * * *

AS THE technicians see it, the market's decline was sparked by its failure to penetrate the 1,000 level in the Dow-Jones industrial average and, according to past history, a correction was due. The experts agree the reaction will probably move the indicator back quite a distance before a new upswing begins but disagree on how far it will go. Some analysts are predicting a drop past the 960 level in Dow-Jones average and some are even forecasting a slide back to the 939 area in the average.

From a fundamental standpoint, the analysts say the uncertainty of what the course of the Viet Nam War will be plus indications of a possible income tax increase and government anti-inflation moves are keeping buyers on the sidelines.

Pan American Sulphur was the most active issue of the week. It fell 2½ to 22⅞ on 665,800 shares. The stock was depressed by news of lower 1965 earnings and a report the company may not be allowed to export as much sulphur from Mexico as it did last year.

High Voltage Engineering was second in the active list with a gain of 4 at 25 on 661,800 shares. Atlas Corp. placed third with a gain of ⅜ at 4⅛ on 630,500 shares.

* * * *

STUDEBAKER took fourth spot with a gain of 8⅛ at 38 on 533,500 shares in response to reports of heavy demand from large private investors for the stock. One purchase of 200,000 shares was made last week. In addition there is a tender offer of $30 a share for 500,000 shares on the stock and there are also reports Allied Products is making purchases. Allied Products soared 13 points.

Autos were weak. General Motors fell 3½, Chrysler 1½ and Ford 1. American Motors, slid ⅜ after it announced plans to shut down operations for 10 days—its second suspension in two months because of lagging sales.

Steels were mostly lower. Lukens fell 1¼ despite a $4 a ton increase in the extra charges on some of its plate products. U.S. Steel, which made a similar move Friday, lost ¼.

* * * *

ELECTRONICS were hit by some profit-taking but still finished mostly higher. IBM fell 12¼, Zenith 2, Litton 4⅛, and Texas Instruments 3¾. Motorola lost 7½ but Magnavox gained the same amount. Fairchild Camera rose 1, Admiral 2⅞, Honeywell 3⅜ and Collins Radio 8¾. On Friday, Collins reported sharply higher 1965 profits.

Boeing gained 2¾ with the aid of an 8-point jump on Friday. The issue was depressed until the final session rally by a demand from a U.S. congressman that the company's 727 jets be grounded until the cause of several recent crashes was discovered. The Civil Aeronautics Board said it found no fault with the craft.

Douglas Aircraft gained 4½ but United Aircraft fell 3½. Grumman advanced 2¾. Airlines were lower as traders cashed in profits run up last week. Eastern fell 5⅞, American 2¾, KLM 2¼ and Pacific Southwestern 4¾.

* * * *

BRACH & SONS soared 7¾ to 47 on news of a tender offer of $50 a share for 700,000 shares from W. R. Grace. Grace dropped 2¾.

Texas Gulf Sulphur added 4⅝ after traders overcame their initial disappointment over the company's declaration of the usual quarterly dividend. Some traders expected a large dividend or a stock split. Hammermill Paper gained 1¾ on plans for a stock split and dividend boost. International Harvester gained 1½. It boosted the quarterly dividend.

Peace Talk Ends Without Peace

NEW DELHI (AP) — Prime Minister Indira Gandhi ended two days of talks Saturday with leaders of rebellious Naga tribes, apparently without finding a peace formula for the jungles of northeast India.

A Naga spokesman said it was agreed violence should stop but how this was to be accomplished was not determined.

Transient Killed as Train Derails

PUEBLO, Colo (AP) — The body of a 39-year-old transient was found late Saturday in the wreckage of a derailed Santa Fe freight train seven miles east of Pueblo.

The man, whose name was withheld by authorities, was found under slag, left over from the steelmaking process. Officials said apparently he had been riding in the open slag car that was among 32 cars that overturned. Thirty-five cars of the 55-unit train left the rails.

SME BESTOWS HONORS

Distinguished L.B. Salesmen Receive 'Sammy' Awards

The Sales and Marketing Executives of Long Beach, a professional educational fraternity of executives, chose Herman H. Ridder as salesman of the year, one of the highest honors in the business community, and nineteen outstanding Long Beach salesmen for distinguished "Sammy" awards. This is in conjunction with National Salesman's Week beginning February 20.

DAVE DAVIS joined Beach City Chevrolet Co. in September, 1952. He was the first man to be nominated for the Sammy Award in 1955. He has been in strong contention for the D.S.A. Award every year since that time. A consistent producer, a tireless worker on community projects, and, co-workers say, a great guy.

ROBERT L. KRUEGER has been with Coast Specialties since 1960. He produced the company's largest increase in personal sales during 1965. In addition to his duties as General Manager of Coast Specialties, he is Vice President of the Long Beach Junior Chamber of Commerce, Arena Governor of Toastmaster International, and belongs to the Advertising Club.

L. C. KEMP joined Johnny Gillette Tire Co. as a tire installer in 1959. After literally learning the business from the ground up, he is now the firm's top salesman, and is also Store Manager for the Johnny Gillette store in El Segundo. He lists his hobbies as hunting and fishing—for new customers.

LEW HINDLEY of New York Life Insurance Company was selected from a group of 27 agents as the Most Valued Associate of the Long Beach general office for 1965. He acquired his C.L.U. degree in 1957, and has just completed 20 years with New York Life. A native of California, he is very active civicly.

EARL SMITH of Interstate Bakeries Corporation . . . that's Weber's bread . . . a two-time winner of the D.S.A. Award. He was the company's top producer during the past year, with a 26% increase above his quota. He has a never-give-up attitude and an enthusiastic manner that makes him an extremely valuable salesman.

KEN KIDDER of Glenn E. Thomas Dodge began his automobile selling career as a new car salesman with Glenn E. Thomas in 1933. In 1938 he started his own used car business, a successful venture which he later sold to become general manager of another Long Beach new car agency. Now back with Glenn E. Thomas Co., where he has distinguished himself as a top salesman during the past year.

JACK KIENZLE of Martin-Decker Corporation lives in Chicago. No picture of him was available on short notice. He is president of Acme Scale Company in Chicago, has distributed Martin-Decker precision pressure instruments for nine years and is easily the number one in dollar volume sales for the past year.

GEORGE POGAN of Eastman, Inc. is beginning his tenth year with the company. He won his Distinguished Salesman Award in competition with 16 other salesmen of office supplies, printing and office equipment. As this line is, by its nature, mostly repeat business, his habit of rendering service is the key to his success.

ROBERT H. SUMRALL of Dick Browning Oldsmobile is known as the 'Toronado King' by his fellow salesmen. This is his third D.S.A. Award, with previous wins in 1961 and 1962. His 1965 gross sales amounted to more than three quarters of a million dollars. Even with his many civic and community duties, he still finds time for golf.

HARRY B. DIXON of Glenn E. Thomas Dodge is enjoying his fourth consecutive year as a D.S.A. Award winner. In spite of being off two months because of illness and an extended vacation, he sold 18 more cars in 1965 than in 1964. He has yet to fail in his goal, which is to sell more cars during the current year than he sold during the previous year.

JAMES MURRIN has been a route salesman for American Linen Supply Co. since 1963. He almost won the Sammy Award in 1964, was successful in 1965 when his sales total was 32% above his next competitor. His customers have nothing but the highest praise for the service he renders them.

BUD LOWE of General Telephone Company is the youngest man to win the coveted Sammy Award from this company. In 1965, working in totally unfamiliar territory, he exceeded his objective by 64%, while making a sale on 47% of his contacts. He has recently been promoted to General's "Industry Accounts Group."

GEORGE KOURY of Murphy Lincoln-Mercury has been Lincoln Continental Sales Manager since 1963. He is a member of the Diamond Star Chapter of the Lincoln-Mercury Division, as number one salesman in the Los Angeles district. There are only 18 members of this exclusive group in the entire United States.

WILLIAM "BILL" BENKENDORFER has been selling lumber for Rossman Mill & Lumber Co. for over 11 years. He led the sales race with a total volume of $1,200,000 in 1965, and was the only salesman in a staff of 16 to show a plus percentage over his 1964 volume. He has been over the $1 million figure for the past five years.

MARTIN V. "MARTY" JONES is the recipient of the 1965 Sammy Award at IBM. The hallmark of the professional specialty salesman is his ability to put new products successfully into the market place. Having this ability, he topped every one of his 1965 sales quotas in electric typewriters, dictating equipment and supplies.

GUY J. GAGNON has been associated with Rex L. Hodges Realty Company for 18 months. Having completed the company's sales training course, he made a remarkable success in real estate, ending the year 1965 with a million dollar sales volume. He was originally from Montreal, Canada.

LOUIS J. WRABEL of Mel Burns Ford has always been in the top ten per cent of the company's sales force, and during 1965 was for and away the sales leader. His hobbies include rebuilding old bicycles for boys and girls in his neighborhood. He is also a skilled and avid fisherman.

MARVIN "MARV" CATCHPOLE of Monroe International earned his Sammy Award by exceeding his assigned 1965 quota by 45%. He was among the top ten Monroe salesmen of Monroe products on the entire Pacific Coast. The secret of his success is customer service, plus hard work.

YVONNE SHAHEEN REESHA of Moore Realty began her business career just one year ago, and immediately started earning her "salesman of the year" title. A member of the Shaheen family, pioneer realtor-builders in the Long Beach-Compton area, her hobbies are music, books and art.

THOMAS C. SADLER began his employment with Boulevard Buick in 1961. During 12 years participation in these awards, he is the first used car salesman to be honored. The award was based not only on his sales ability, but in the manner in which he handles his customers, and his attention to company policy.

DONNELL CULPEPPER

Busy Weekend for Outdoors

Where else but in Southern California could you find thousands of yachtsmen and hundreds of casters taking part in two big events this weekend? Looking over the enormous spread of yachts from up and down the Pacific Coast, I almost forgot that the Long Beach Casting Club is having its largest tournament of the year—the annual Midwinter.

That also is the name of the yacht event that is being hosted by five clubs today, the final period of the three-day events.

Some accuracy events were held by the Casting Club Saturday. Today's schedule calls for a breakfast at 8 a.m., wet fly accuracy at 9 a.m., to be followed with dry fly accuracy and the three-eighths-ounce plug accuracy.

Women of Long Beach Women's Casting Club will serve lunch today at noon. The afternoon events embrace the five-eighths-ounce plug accuracy, three-eighths-ounce spinning distance and, finally, steelhead distance fly.

Spectators are welcomed by the Casting Club at any of its events. The club is situated at Federation Drive and East Seventh Street, and if you wish to watch some real experts in action, take a look at those men and women today.

* * * *

THE MIDWINTER REGATTA, the 37th annual, by the way, is not especially a spectator sport unless you have your own power boat and elect to follow the great fleet of yachts ranging from seven-foot Sabots through the Cal-40s and K-40s and on to the larger ocean racing classes such as Chubasco, a 12-meter, 66-foot boat.

Few persons realize that the Midwinter Regatta was started in the late '20s for the express purpose of attracting tourists to Southern California.

As the matter now stands, says Curtis Winters, the regatta's public information chairman, the events probably attract more sailors than tourists. With roughly 1,000 boats in the 80-odd classes being hosted by five clubs, it is safe to say that thousands of persons from out of the city are here crewing on the yachts.

One excellent vantage point for spectators is the bluff at Point Fermin Park, San Pedro, but be sure that you take field glasses if you want to get a good view of the Ocean Racing Classes.

There will be much interest in the Cal-40 class today, with Barney Flam in Flambuoyant II as the favorite. Cal-40s were used exclusively in the recent Long Beach Yacht Club's Congressional Cup Race, now one of the most interesting racing events on the Pacific Coast.

DON MARTIN SENDS WORD that Railroad Canyon Lake Resort will open for the season Saturday, March 5. The lake is almost full from the winter rains, the water is clearing rapidly and all indications point to a most successful season.

Railroad Canyon Lake is situated a few miles above Elsinore in Riverside County and offers fishing for bass, crappie, bluegill and catfish.

Martin says that the camping area will be open March 4. Rowboats and boats with motors are available and there is a ramp for launching private boats. Tackle and bait will be available at the store. Bottom-bumping rubber worms, deep-running lures and night crawlers are the best baits for bass this time of the year.

For reservations write to Railroad Canyon Lake, 23250 Railroad Canyon Road, Romoland, Calif. Area code is 714 and the telephone number 674-2725.

Isabella Lake is slow at this writing, although some fair-sized trout have been taken on red salmon eggs in the section of the lake that was old Kernville.

Cachuma and Piru Lakes in Ventura County are yielding catchable-size rainbow trout, part of the plants that have been made by the Department of Fish and Game.

* * * *

FRESH-WATER NOTES — Department of Fish and Game regulations take effect March 1, but it will be April 30 before most of the northern waters are open for fishing. Also, it will be April 30 before the present five-trout limit in Southern California goes to 10 fish. That 10-trout limit will apply through Oct. 31, when the Southland limit automatically reverts to five fish.

There are exceptions, however. Orange and San Diego Counties have a 10-trout limit from Feb. 26 through Sept. 9, and the five-fish limit from Sept. 10 through Feb. 25 of 1967.

Nine additional inland areas have been added to the night-fishing list this year. Fish of all species may be taken at any time of night in Madera, Fresno, Tulare and Kings Counties, and in Woodward Lake, Stanislaus County.

Part of Plumas County will be open to night fishing for catfish, carp, hardhead, squawfish and sucker. To be opened are Butt Valley Lake, Snake Lake and Smith Lake. Also opened for the same species will be the Lower Russian River in northwestern California.

Big Bear Lake's level is up to 50 feet, but it is still iced over and not fishable. Ditto for Green Valley Lake. Arrowhead Lake is so cold that fishing pressure there is way down. Some kokanee trollers are getting fish and frosty hands.

Dodger Farm Club vs. Rockets

By CHUCK MEDICK

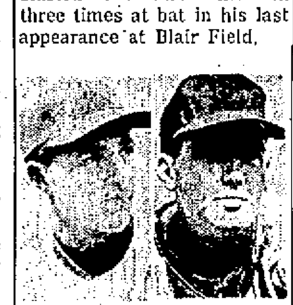

The Dodger Minor Leaguers, managed by Tom LaSorda, invade Blair Field today for the second game of their three-game series with the Long Beach Rockets at 1:30.

The Rockets won the opener 11-4 several weeks ago, but rain and the medical benefit game forced postponement of the second meeting.

Former Lakewood mound ace Jim Strickland probably will start for the Dodgers, while Don Rowe or Butch Hughes will be on the firing line for the Rockets.

Rocket manager Jack Graham is beaming about his newest Rocket, Albert Thompson, who doubled and tripled in the same inning in his Rocket debut. Thompson will be back in left field today.

Dodger catcher Jim Campanis again will be behind the plate. The slugging son of the Dodger farm director blasted out three hits in three times at bat in his last appearance at Blair Field.

4 WINS FOR SHOEMAKER

Cedar Key, Polar Sea Score

By ERNIE MASON

Defending champion Cedar Key and Polar Sea won divisions of the split $75,000 San Luis Rey Handicap Saturday at Santa Anita.

In another feature, Lucky Debonair continued his successful comeback toward next week's $145,000 Santa Anita Handicap by winning a $15,000 overnight purse. Lucky Debonair, sidelined in January because of a leg injury, won by 3½ lenghts in the swift time of 1:48 1-5 for 1⅛ miles.

The San Luis Rey is run over the grass at 1½ miles and is the last major test for the $125,000 San Juan Capistrano Handicap on March 12.

Jockey Bill Shoemaker, riding his fourth winner of the day, whipped Cedar Key into a tight photo finish over Plaque in a head-to-head battle down the stretch.

Shoemaker kept Cedar Key, the betting favorite, in the middle of the field of 10 until he began to drive to the wire. O'Hara was third, while Canada's George Royal, the second betting choice, came up too late in the stretch and ran fifth.

The time was 2:25.1.

The winner paid $7.40, $4.80 and $3.40; Plaque, ridden by Eddie Belmonte, returned $7.40 and $4.40. O'Hara paid $3.60.

Cedar Key's triumph was his first since he won this same stakes last year.

Tudor Fame was second by a nose over Ask Father, who almost stole the race in a front-running ride by Shoemaker. The time was 2:26 2/5.

Polar Sea, owned by Edward and Harry Seltzer of Chicago, had displayed grass ability in the East and Midwest the past two years. He won six of 15 starts in 1965, including the Chicago Handicap at Hawthorne and the Absecon Handicap at Atlantic City.

For Shoemaker, it was his first quadruple riding success of the meeting after he had ridden seven triples. He booted in China Marine ($6.60) in the first race and Baron Gruder ($4.80) in the second for a $17.60 daily double and was aboard Lucky Debonair in the fourth, who paid $4 to win.

Pia Star Hialeah Star; Kelso Return Muddied

HIALEAH, (UPI) — Mrs. Ada Rice's Pia Star, a horse many trackmen said hated the mud, romped for a mile and a quarter on the sloppy Hialeah strip like a happy piglet Saturday to win the $134,800 Widener Handicap.

At the end, Pia Starr managed only by the length of his outstretched nose to hold on to the victory.

For the fifth consecutive race, Valley Farm's Selari charged home too late to finish second. Five lengths further back came Slystitch for third money in the field of nine handicap stars.

Convex, favorite of the rainy day crowd of 29,138, for his victory in the recent $50,000-added Seminole Handicap, finished seventh, packing high weight of 120 pounds.

As third choice of the crowd, Pia Star paid $9.20; $5.20 and $3.80 across the board. Selari returned $4.20 and $3 and Slystitch paid $6.60 for show.

Mrs. Richard C. DuPont's Kelso, scheduled to make his winter debut in a Hialeah allowance race, was scratched after the heavy rains.

BALTIMORE (UPI) — Alder Branch Farm's Exceedingly, a stretch-running son of Third Brother, sprinted to the front in the final yards at Pimlico to win the $17,825 Challedon Stakes by three quarters of a length.

The Maryland-bred 3-year-old was timed in 1:47 and paid $3.80 and $2.40 to place and show. Bay Hawk paid $2.60 to place and show while Buck's Charger returned $4.

NEW ORLEANS (AP)—Miss Sun Tan sped to a decisive 3½ length victory in the $15,000-added A. B. Letellier Handicap at the New Orleans Fair Grounds.

Miss Sun Tan paid $42.40, $12.40 and $5.20. Flamisan returned $10.80 and $5.60, while R. Thomas paid $3.80.

LINCOLN (AP) — A single ticket holder from Brooklyn, N. Y., among 16,827 fans at Lincoln Downs, won $54,838.40, the highest twin double payoff ever at Lincoln.

MY LARK broke on top, permitted AZURE TE the early lead, went up to challenge entering the stretch and while dueling began to lug in on AZURE TE, was pulled off to win narrowly. AZURE TE sprinted up along the rail to take command, repeatedly fought back while in tight along the rail in a game showing. BLACK POOL, outrun early, rallied in the stretch while between horses.

CEDAR KEY dropped in along the rail early, remained on the fence while making up ground into the stretch and under clever handling outfinished PLAQUE. Latter disposed of PELEGRIN early, shook off SHADY LIVING then gamely engaged the winner in the long, hard drive and just missed. O'HARA, outrun to the mile, found room along the rail to make up ground, was well placed out of the final turn but was not good enough. AURELIUS II was forced to make his bid around the far turn while on the outside and tired. GEORGE ROYAL went wide around the final turn during his mild bid and hung. SWITCHBACK was done early. SHADY LIVING had a flash of early speed and gave way.

Retired Jockey Protests Whip

MELBOURNE, Australia (AP)—A retired Australian jockey fired a double-barreled shotgun harmlessly over the heads of the horses about to start a hurdle race at Flemington race track Saturday and held up the event for 16 minutes.

Walter J. Hoysted, 52, who kept police and track officials at bay while demanding that jockeys would not whip their mounts in the two-mile race, was arrested after being induced to remove the shells from his gun.

"It is a nice state of affairs," Hoysted said after his arrest, "when a man has to make a fool of himself to get justice."

Stocks Continue to Draw Back; Market Active

By C. J. PARNOW

Only a modest plus sign midweek broke a string of declines in the Dow-Jones industrial average as it continued to draw back from the 1,000 mark which it failed to penetrate the week before.

The indicator was hit with a 1.34 loss on Monday and plunged 6.12 on Tuesday. A modest 0.83 gain was scored Wednesday but the list sold off 7.13 on Thursday. Friday's session saw another 0.05 added to the deficit.

* * * *

FOR THE week, the senior average lost 13.81 at 975.22. Rails fared somewhat better but were still down 1.67 at 267.73 as traders continued to take profits in the group. Utilities shed 3.12 at a new 1965-66 low of 144.51. Standard & Poor's 500 stock index dropped 1.40 to 92.41.

Trading shrank to 44,064,920 shares from 46,736,890 shares a week before and compared with 27,889,821 shares in the same week last year.

Of the 1,548 issues traded, 950 retreated, 150 to new 1965-66 lows, while 489 advanced, 224 to new highs.

* * * *

AS THE technicians see it, the market's decline was sparked by its failure to penetrate the 1,000 level in the Dow-Jones industrial average and, according to past history, a correction was due. The experts agree the reaction will probably move the indicator back quite a distance before a new upswing begins but disagree on how far it will go. Some analysts are predicting a drop past the 960 level in Dow-Jones average and some are even forecasting a slide back to the 939 area in the average.

From a fundamental standpoint, the analysts say the uncertainty of what the course of the Viet Nam War will be plus indications of a possible income tax increase and government anti-inflation moves are keeping buyers on the sidelines.

Pan American Sulphur was the most active issue of the week. It fell 2½ to 22⅞ on 665,800 shares. The stock was depressed by news of lower 1965 earnings and a report the company may not be allowed to export as much sulphur from Mexico as it did last year.

High Voltage Engineering was second in the active list with a gain of 4 at 25 on 661,800 shares. Atlas Corp. placed third with a gain of ⅜ at 4⅛ on 630,500 shares.

* * * *

STUDEBAKER took fourth spot with a gain of 8⅛ at 38 on 533,500 shares in response to reports of heavy demand from large private investors for the stock. One purchase of 200,000 shares was made last week. In addition there is a tender offer of $30 a share for 500,000 shares on the stock and there are also reports Allied Products is making purchases. Allied Products soared 13 points.

Autos were weak. General Motors fell 3¼, Chrysler 1½ and Ford 1. American Motors, slid ¾ after it announced plans to shut down operations for 10 days—its second suspension in two months because of lagging sales.

Steels were mostly lower. Lukens fell 1¼ despite a $4 a ton increase in the extra charges on some of its plate products. U.S. Steel, which made a similar move Friday, lost ¼.

* * * *

ELECTRONICS were hit by some profit-taking but still finished mostly higher. IBM fell 12¼, Zenith 2, Litton 4⅛ and Texas Instruments 3¾. Motorola lost 7½ but Magnavox gained the same amount. Fairchild Camera rose 1, Admiral 2⅞, Honeywell 3⅜ and Collins Radio 8⅜. On Friday, Collins reported sharply higher 1965 profits.

Boeing gained 2¾ with the aid of an 8-point jump on Friday. The issue was depressed until the final session rally by a demand from a U.S. congressman that the company's 727 jets be grounded until the cause of several recent crashes was discovered. The Civil Aeronautics Board said it found no fault with the craft.

Douglas Aircraft gained 4½ but United Aircraft fell 3½. Grumman advanced 2⅝. Airlines were lower as traders cashed in profits run up last week. Eastern fell 5⅞. American 2⅜, KLM 2¼ and Pacific Southwestern 4⅜.

* * * *

BRACH & SONS soared 7⅜ to 47 on news of a tender offer of $50 a share for 700,000 shares from W. R. Grace. Grace dropped 2⅞.

Texas Gulf Sulphur added 4⅜ after traders overcame their initial disappointment over the company's declaration of the usual quarterly dividend. Some traders expected a large dividend or a stock split. Hammermill Paper gained 1¾ on plans for a stock split and dividend boost. International Harvester gained 1½. It boosted the quarterly dividend.

Peace Talk Ends Without Peace

NEW DELHI (AP) — Prime Minister Indira Gandhi ended two days of talks Saturday with leaders of rebellious Naga tribes, apparently without finding a peace formula for the jungles of northeast India.

A Naga spokesman said it was agreed violence should stop but how this was to be accomplished was not determined.

Transient Killed as Train Derails

PUEBLO, Colo (AP) — The body of a 39-year-old transient was found late Saturday in the wreckage of a derailed Santa Fe freight train seven miles east of Pueblo.

The man, whose name was withheld by authorities, was found under slag, left over from the steelmaking process. Officials said apparently he had been riding in the open slag car that was among 32 cars that overturned. Thirty-five cars of the 55-unit train left the rails.

SME BESTOWS HONORS

The Sales and Marketing Executives of Long Beach, a professional educational fraternity of executives, chose Herman H. Ridder as salesman of the year, one of the highest honors in the business community, and nineteen outstanding Long Beach salesmen for distinguished "Sammy" awards. This is in conjunction with National Salesman's Week beginning February 20.

DAVE DAVIS joined Beach City Chevrolet Co. in September, 1952. He was the first man to be nominated for the Sammy Award in 1955. He has been in strong contention for the D.S.A. Award every year since that time. A consistent producer, a tireless worker on community projects, and, co-workers say, a great guy.

ROBERT L. KRUEGER has been with Coast Specialties since 1960. He produced the company's largest increase in personal sales during 1965. In addition to his duties as General Manager of Coast Specialties, he is Vice President of the Long Beach Junior Chamber of Commerce, Arena Governor of Toastmaster International, and belongs to the Advertising Club.

L. C. KEMP joined Johnny Gillette Tire Co. as a tire installer in 1959. After literally learning the business from the ground up, he is now the firm's top salesman, and is also Store Manager for the Johnny Gillette store in El Segundo. He lists his hobbies as hunting and fishing—for new customers.

LEW HINDLEY of New York, Life Insurance Company was selected from a group of 27 agents as the Most Valued Associate of the Long Beach general office for 1965. He acquired his C.L.U. degree in 1957, and has just completed 20 years with New York Life. A native of California, he is very active civicly.

EARL SMITH of Interstate Bakeries Corporation . . . that's Weber's bread . . . a two-time winner of the D.S.A. Award. He was the company's top producer during the past year, with a 26% increase above his quota. He has a never-give-up attitude and an enthusiastic manner that makes him an extremely valuable salesman.

KEN KIDDER of Glenn E. Thomas Dodge began his automobile selling career as a new car salesman with Glenn E. Thomas in 1933. In 1938 he started his own used car business, a successful venture which he later sold to become general manager of another Long Beach new car agency. Now back with Glenn E. Thomas Co., where he has distinguished himself as a top salesman during the past year.

JACK KIENZLE of Martin-Decker Corporation lives in Chicago. No picture of him was available on short notice. He is president of Acme Scale Company in Chicago, has distributed Martin-Decker precision pressure instruments for nine years and is easily the number one in dollar volume sales for the past year.

GEORGE POGAN of Eastman, Inc. is beginning his tenth year with the company. He won his Distinguished Salesman Award in competition with 16 other salesmen of office supplies, printing and office equipment. As this line is, by its nature, mostly repeat business, his habit of rendering service is the key to his success.

ROBERT H. SUMRALL of Dick Browning Oldsmobile is known as the 'Toronado King' by his fellow salesmen. This is his third D.S.A. Award, with previous wins in 1961 and 1962. His 1965 gross sales amounted to more than three quarters of a million dollars. Even with his many civic and community duties, he still finds time for golf.

HARRY B. DIXON of Glenn E. Thomas Dodge is enjoying his fourth consecutive year as a D.S.A. Award winner. In spite of being off two months because of illness and an extended vacation, he sold 18 more cars in 1965 than in 1964. He has yet to fail in his goal, which is to sell more cars during the current year than he sold during the previous year.

JAMES MURRIN has been a route salesman for American Linen Supply Co. since 1963. He almost won the Sammy Award in 1964, was successful in 1965 when his sales total was 32% above his next competitor. His customers have nothing but the highest praise for the service he renders them.

BUD LOWE of General Telephone Company is the youngest man to win the coveted Sammy Award from this company. In 1965, working in totally unfamiliar territory, he exceeded his objective by 64%, while making a sale on 47% of his contacts. He has recently been promoted to General's "Industry Accounts Group."

GEORGE KOURY of Murphy Lincoln-Mercury has been Lincoln Continental Sales Manager since 1963. He is a member of the Diamond Star Chapter of the Lincoln-Mercury Division, as number one salesman in the Los Angeles district. There are only 18 members of this exclusive group in the entire United States.

WILLIAM "BILL" BENKENDORFER has been selling lumber for Rossman Mill & Lumber Co. for over 11 years. He led the sales race with a total volume of $1,200,000 in 1965, and was the only salesman in a staff of 16 to show a plus percentage over his 1964 volume. He has been over the $1 million figure for the past five years.

MARTIN V. "MARTY" JONES is the recipient of the 1965 Sammy Award at IBM. The hallmark of the professional specialty salesman is his ability to put new products successfully into the market place. Having this ability, he topped every one of his 1965 sales quotas in electric typewriters, dictating equipment and supplies.

GUY J. GAGNON has been associated with Rex L. Hodges Realty Company for 18 months. Having completed the company's sales training course, he made a remarkable success in real estate, ending the year 1965 with a million dollar sales volume. He was originally from Montreal, Canada.

LOUIS J. WRABEL of Mel Burns Ford has always been in the top ten per cent of the company's sales force, and during 1965 was far and away the sales leader. His hobbies include rebuilding old bicycles for boys and girls in his neighborhood. He is also a skilled and avid fisherman.

MARVIN "MARV" CATCHPOLE of Monroe International earned his Sammy Award by exceeding his assigned 1965 quota by 45%. He was among the top ten Monroe salesmen of Monroe products on the entire Pacific Coast. The secret of his success is customer service, plus hard work.

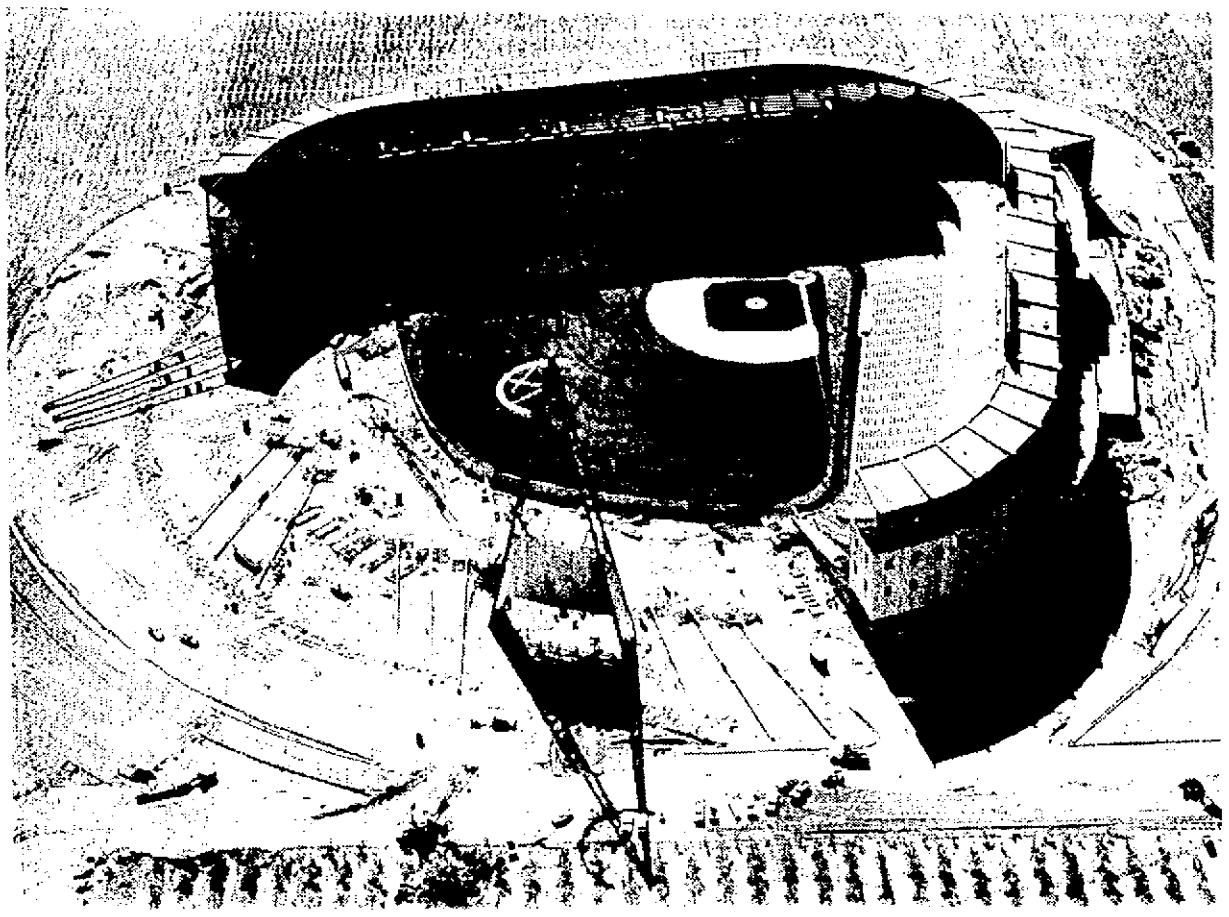

YVONNE SHAHEEN REESHA of Moore Realty began her business career just one year ago, and immediately started earning her "salesman of the year" title. A member of the Shaheen family, pioneer realtor-builders in the Long Beach-Compton area, her hobbies are music, books and art.

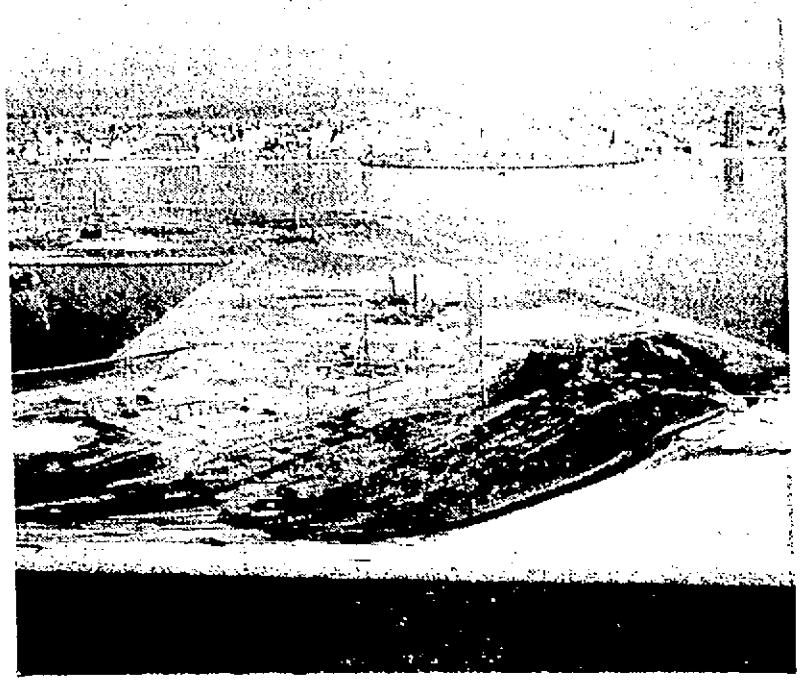

THOMAS C. SADLER began his employment with Boulevard Buick in 1961. During 12 years participation in these awards, he is the first used car salesman to be honored. The award was based not only on his sales ability, but in the manner in which he handles his customers, and his attention to company policy.

Full-Scale War Against Pollution to Be Costly

By KEN CHILCOTE
Business Editor

The problem of overcoming water and air pollution is something everyone knows is of prime importance.

Everyone talks about it and feeble efforts are made to get results, but when an all-out attack is launched against air and water pollution it will be one of the most costly ventures ever attempted—probably more than the U.S. space efforts.

Financing a control problem will be a stumbling block because the benefits of such controls are usually enjoyed by people other than those who must pay the bill.

A community or industry that treats its sewage before discharging it into a stream, or the plant that does everything possible to avoid sending smoke-making chemicals into the air, get little or no benefit from the efforts.

A neighborhood downstream or downwind will get the benefits and they in turn may be doing nothing to correcting the problem locally.

Business firms and communities will need some incentives if any great steps are taken by them to clean air and water. We can't expect individual business units to assume unusual costs to reduce or prevent pollution if competitors aren't doing the same.

* * * *

PUBLIC SPENDING on pollution abatement—on a local level—will be hard pressed. Cities everywhere are forced to provide increased services to the growing population. There's not much voter appeal in a new sewage plant when a city needs more schools.

The Morgan Guarantee Survey, published by the New York banking firm, looking into the pollution problems, has suggested granting tax incentives to firms who clean up their own wastes. New York and Ohio are trying such inducements.

In the German Ruhr region charges are levied against companies and communities according to wastes they discharge. But to do so in the U.S. would necessitate creation of a large inspection and measurement force and this would be plenty costly.

Local, state and federal cooperation must be developed to enforce abatement programs. Then we can expect the pollution control costs to be built into business so that society at large ultimately will pay the costs.

They have borne the costs of such social changes as abolition of child labor, factory safety and minimum wages which are accepted costs of doing business.

No longer can we feel that clean air and clean water are free God-given gifts.

AWESOME SIGHT of sky-high maintenance men painting bridge cables may become passe. Bethlehem Steel Corp., has introduced a new color-fast plastic covering for bridge suspension cables.

A joint project between Bethlehem and E. I. du Pont de Nemours, the new plastic system has a ⅛-inch thick coating of Lucite sirup heavily reinforced with glass fibers. The material can be tinted to any color and it is estimated the effective life of the covering will be 50 years.

WHAT'S IN A NAME? Because of vast mergers in the growing trend of diversifying many well known trade names are being engulfed. And loss of a well known trade name might check sales.

Hotpoint, the Chicago-based major appliance manufacturer knows the value of a well-indoctrinated name. The firm is celebrating its 60th anniversary — and it was named after a product it hasn't manufactured in 34 years — an electric flatiron.

The iron was the first electric appliance to reach the consumer. It was the basis for today's appliance industry and a major influence on the development of the electric utility industry.

* * * *

UNTIL THE IRON came along most electricity was generated only at night for lighting. The popularity of the iron started utilities generating during daylight hours on Tuesday — ironing day.

Earl Richardson, a young California inventor, developed the first successful electric flatiron. His early model got too hot in the middle and needed more heat in the tip for pressing buttonholes and pleats.

He changed his design and came up with the "iron with the hot point." He adopted the Hotpoint trademark and in 1908 he launched national advertising in the old Life magazine and in 1909 used a double-page spread in the Saturday Evening Post.

At the end of World War I Richardson merged his firm with the electric heating system of General Electric and the firm became known as Edison Electric, manufacturers of Hotpoint appliances.

By 1931 competition was so great in the appliance field that Hotpoint decided to concentrate on major devices such as stoves, refrigerators, automatic washers, dryers and dishwashers, so the electric iron was among the items dropped. But the name still stands.

Steel Industry Is 'Big Surprise'

	1957-59 Average	Year Ago	Month Ago	Week Ago	Latest Week
BUSINESS WEEK Index	100	139.0	147.9	149.0	149.4

The big business surprise of 1966—so far—has to be the performance of the steel industry.

Because production of steel ingot is an important component in the Business Week Index, the chart reacts as production goes up. This week, thanks in part to booming steel mills, the Index is bouncing just under 150.

When the steel producers signed their labor agreement last September, the mills looked for a bleak fall and winter. Everyone believed customers would have to get rid of some 11 million tons of metal stockpiled during the first eight months of 1965.

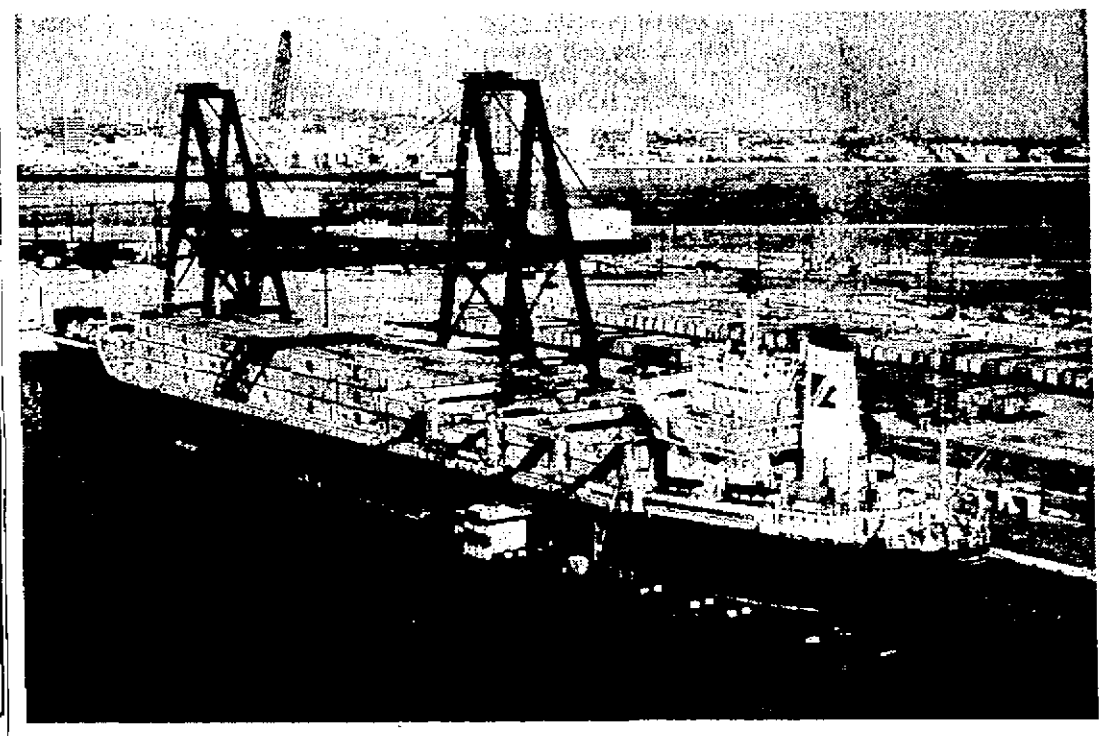

* * * *

EVEN THE OPTIMISTS, who looked for recovery by the middle of first-quarter 1966, are surprised at the way inventories have evaporated. And steel order books are showing a picture of surging demand—which should push production for the first six months close to the extraordinary record chalked up a year ago.

Looking further ahead, steelmen warn that supplies of some products could become tight if demand continues to grow.

How come the boom?

Producers point to continuing high consumption throughout the economy and not the war in Viet Nam—defense needs for steel are still minimal. Another reason is that businessmen are now willing to hold more steel in stock than usual: A higher level of industrial production requires a bigger inventory base.

TESTING OF CRANES SUCCESSFUL

Successful testing of Port of Long Beach's towering 27½-ton gantry crane was completed with unloading and loading of 542 truck vans at the Sea-Land, Inc., terminal on Pier Y. With booms upright, cranes stretch 200 feet above water. Use of dockside cranes, costing $1.3 million, marks departure in cargo-handling technique. New cranes can load or unload 30 sealed vans per hour. Vans are stacked three deep on deck of freighter Elizabethport.

Stock Split Simply Psychological Move

(This is the seventh in a series of 10 articles by an expert writer for Moody's Investors Service and distributed by NEA Special Services.)

By ROLAND GOODMAN

'XYZ Company Splits Stock," says the headline, and your broker congratulates you if you own 100 shares of XYZ. It is a two-for-one split, and soon you receive a certificate for another 100 shares.

It's exciting, until you find that XYZ is now quoted at about half its former price, and you own exactly as big a part of the company as you did before — your 100 shares were one-ten-thousandth of 1,000,000 shares, and now your 200 are one-ten-thousandth of 2,000,000. The market price was adjusted accordingly.

* * * *

SO WHAT'S the excitement about? The fact seems to be that a stock split, though apparently meaningless, usually helps the price on an adjusted basis.

It's psychology; more investors are likely to want a lower-priced stock. If the difference is 10 to 1, it's easier to understand. A small investor hesitates to buy two shares of a $500 stock, but not 20 shares of an equivalent $50 stock.

The same feeling, in a much lesser degree, applies to $50 and $25 shares. And, with greater demand, the price is higher.

* * * *

THERE IS A MORE tangible reason to be happy about a split, however. Nearly always it is accompanied (or preceded) by an increase in cash dividend payments. This also sends the price up, as well as putting more money in the holder's pocket.

While a small stock dividend—say 1 to 5%—should also bring a price adjustment, in practice it rarely has much effect. In such cases, the cash dividend is often left unchanged. This raises your cash income in the same proportion as the stock dividend. If you had been collecting $1 a share on 100 shares you would be getting $102 in dividends on 102 shares after a 2% stock payment.

Industry 'Paying' to Give Money Away

Business and industrial firms are learning that it costs money to give money away.

David B. Norris, partner in the Los Angeles management consultant firm of Norris and Gottfried which has analyzed a number of companies, points out that the larger the company, the greater the cost of philanthropy.

To organize and conduct an in-plant charity fund raising drive in a company with 2,000 employees, he estimates the cost to the company in lost man hours would be $5,000 minimum.

The company would have to give its entire employe group at least an hour away from their productive jobs for an in-plant rally or meeting for such a campaign, and at an average of $1.75 per hour wage per employe, this would amount to $3,500.

* * * *

ADDED TO THIS would be the salary of the campaign chairman, a volunteer within the company, and two assistants, the former giving about $1,000 of his time and the assistant about $600 each in directing, organizing and handling the details of the drive within the company.

Robert P. Graham Promoted, Moving to San Diego March 1

Robert P. Graham, who has directed the big expansion of the Los Altos Shopping Center here in recent years, has received a major promotion that will require his moving to San Diego March 1.

As vice president of the Westgate-California Corp., Graham has been responsible for the corporation's northern realty division which includes several branch office buildings and the Redlands Plaza Shopping Center as well as Los Altos Center.

He will become administrative assistant to C. Arnholt Smith, chairman of the board and president of Westgate and United States National Bank.

GRAHAM came to Long Beach when the Smith holdings purchased the L. S. Whaley Co.'s National Banks and the Los Altos Center.

He has been active in Long Beach civic affairs and only recently was named the "Long Beach Man of the Year" by the Junior Chamber of Commerce.

Graham is president of Long Beach Promotion Inc., a non-profit civic group responsible for the advertising and promotion of industrial development, tourist trade and news bureau services in the Long Beach area.

* * * *

HE IS immediate past president of Sales and Marketing Executives and is a director of the Long Beach Chamber of Commerce, Civic Light Opera and the Los Angeles County branch of the American Cancer Society. He also is a director of World Title Co., Los Angeles.

Under Graham's direction, the Los Altos Shopping Center doubled in size and in the number of stores. Broadway-Los Altos added a complete new floor and the J. C. Penney Co. has a major expansion under way. The U.S. National Bank Building underwent major improvements and is one of the most attractive banks in the area.

Local Plant Key to Man's Return From Moon

By LEE CRAIG
Aerospace Editor

An 85-pound metal sphere made in Downey will provide the boost when America's astronauts begin their homeward journey from the moon in 1969.

If the four-foot sphere malfunctions — there is no back-up system — the astronauts will never touch earth again.

Therefore, Aerojet-General Corporation's Downey plant, subcontractors to Grumman for producing fuel tanks for the lunar excursion module's ascent propulsion system, must conform to rigid safety specifications.

"IT'S LIKE making a refrigerator light enough for a housewife to carry, yet strong enough to be dropped from a 10-story building and still work properly," explains Bruce L. Baird, Aerojet's program manager at Downey.

Because of their critical role, the tanks have been designed with a reliability goal specifying that a chance of failure must be less than two in a million.

Walls of the tanks are only two-thousandths of an inch thick — about as thick as ten sheets of paper. Yet each must hold more than a ton of fuel.

Moment of truth during the moon trip, as far as Aerojet employes are concerned, will come when the two astronauts attempt to leave the moon and rise to rejoin the remaining astronaut, orbiting above in the Apollo mother ship.

IF THE PROPELLANT tanks have been damaged in landing, or fail to work for some other reason, the two men are doomed.

Components of each tank include upper and lower halves, two "cones" used to mount the tank in the LEM spacecraft, an access cover, a helium inlet, an anti-vortex baffle and an anti-slosh baffle assembly of 106 parts.

To maintain maximum reliability in manufacturing, a white-glove treatment in a "clean room" is given to the tank during its final assembly.

PARTICULARLY critical is a 75-minute automatic welding operation in Aerojet's special 90-cubic-foot vacuum chamber to weld the hemispheres together.

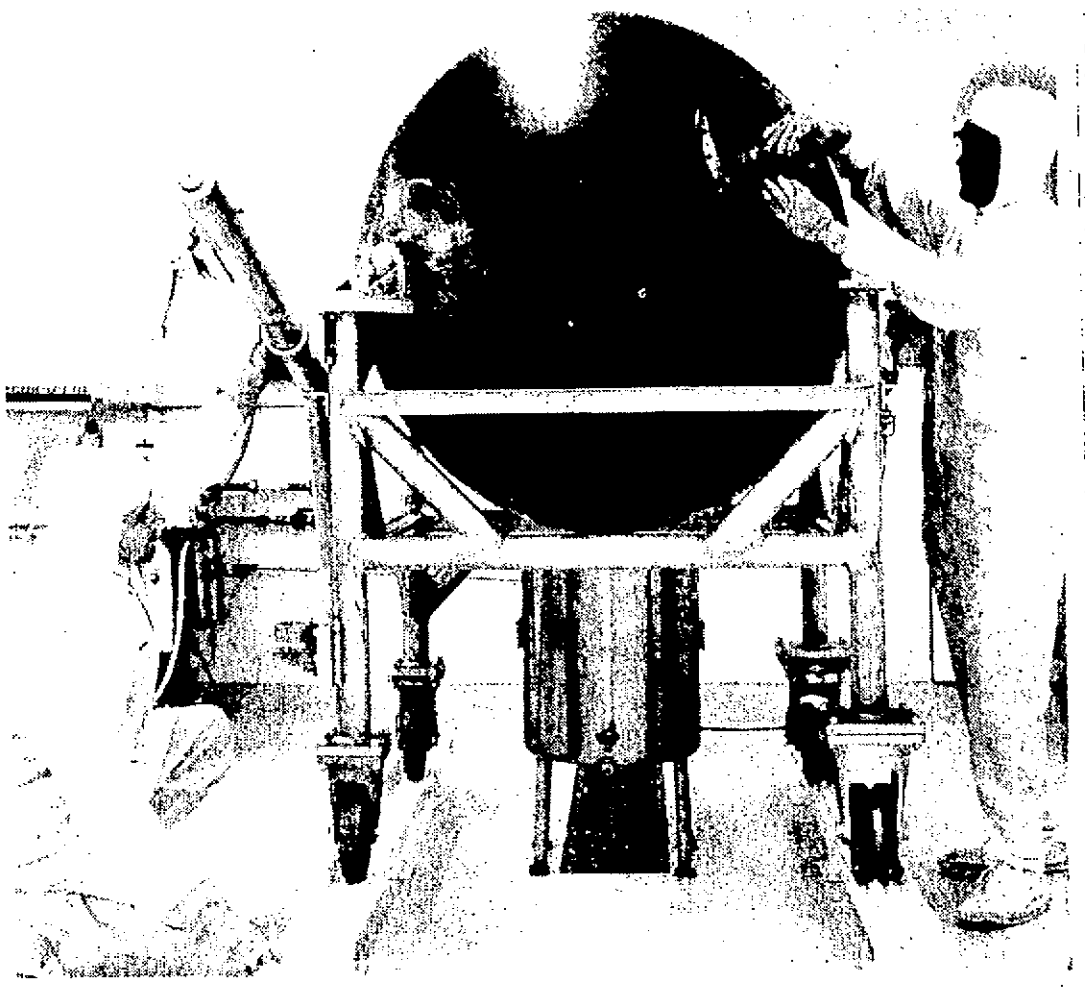

In order to avoid intersecting the four high-stress areas of the tank, where the cover, cones and inlet are attached, the two hemispheres must be welded together at a 45-degree angle from the tank's center-line. No mistakes can be tolerated. It must be done right the first time.

THE PRODUCTION tank must pass such major trials as hydrostatic testing at 333 pounds per square inch, vibration at 20 to 2,000 cycles per second along each axis, plus balance, capacity and leak tests.

Qualification models of the tank must also pass acceleration and shock testing to 15 times the normal pull of gravity as well as burst, hydrostatic cycling, vibration while full and other tests.

First production models have passed their tests and were recently shipped to Grumman.

FINAL LEM TANK ASSEMBLY . . . Performed in Dust-Free Room

Santa Rosa Seafood Operation Is Moving to Wilmington Pier

A new seafood center in Wilmington where such items as 4 Fishermen seafood products will be produced, will be built by Fulham Brothers of California, a division of the Gorton Corp., Gloucester, Mass.

Gaylord E. Lewis, Fulham president, said the new plant will house operations currently performed at the company's Seafood Center in Santa Rosa.

THE Wilmington facility will represent one of the largest seafood plants in the West and will permit doubling the present production capacity for Fulham.

Lewis said the Wilmington plant will process some Gorton brands distributed in the West as well as the 4 Fishermen products. It will turn out a variety of products for Blue Water Seafoods and also Red L products, both divisions of Gorton's.

* * *

THE NEW expanded facility will enable the company to provide a wide range of warehousing and other distributor services not now possible at Santa Rosa, said Lewis.

The Seafood Center complex will be operated under a lease with the Union Ice Co. on a pier owned by the Los Angeles Harbor Department.

Full-Scale War Against Pollution to Be Costly

By KEN CHILCOTE
Business Editor

The problem of overcoming water and air pollution is something everyone knows is of prime importance.

Everyone talks about it and feeble efforts are made to get results, but when an all-out attack is launched against air and water pollution it will be one of the most costly ventures ever attempted—probably more than the U.S. space efforts.

Financing a control problem will be a stumbling block because the benefits of such controls are usually enjoyed by people other than those who must pay the bill.

A community or industry that treats its sewage before discharging it into a stream, or the plant that does everything possible to avoid sending smoke-making chemicals into the air, get little or no benefit from the efforts.

A neighborhood downstream or downwind will get the benefits and they in turn may be doing nothing to correcting the problem locally.

Business firms and communities will need some incentives if any great steps are taken by them to clean air and water. We can't expect individual business units to assume unusual costs to reduce or prevent pollution if competitors aren't doing the same.

* * * *

PUBLIC SPENDING on pollution abatement—on a local level—will be hard pressed. Cities everywhere are forced to provide increased services to the growing population. There's not much voter appeal in a new sewage plant when a city needs more schools.

The Morgan Guarantee Survey, published by the New York banking firm, looking into the pollution problems, has suggested granting tax incentives to firms who clean up their own wastes. New York and Ohio are trying such inducements.

In the German Ruhr region charges are levied against companies and communities according to wastes they discharge. But to do so in the U.S. would necessitate creation of a large inspection and measurement force and this would be plenty costly.

Local, state and federal cooperation must be developed to enforce abatement programs. Then we can expect the pollution control costs to be built into business so that society at large ultimately will pay the costs.

They have borne the costs of such social changes as abolition of child labor, factory safety and minimum wages which are accepted costs of doing business.

No longer can we feel that clean air and clean water are free God-given gifts.

WHAT'S IN A NAME? Because of vast mergers in the growing trend of diversifying many well known trade names are being engulfed. And loss of a well known trade name might check sales.

Hotpoint, the Chicago-based major appliance manufacturer knows the value of a well-indoctrinated name. The firm is celebrating its 60th anniversary — and it was named after a product it hasn't manufactured in 34 years — an electric flatiron.

The iron was the first electric appliance to reach the consumer. It was the basis for today's appliance industry and a major influence on the development of the electric utility industry.

* * * *

UNTIL THE IRON came along most electricity was generated only at night for lighting. The popularity of the iron started utilities generating during daylight hours on Tuesday — ironing day.

Earl Richardson, a young California inventor, developed the first successful electric flatiron. His early model got too hot in the middle and needed more heat in the tip for pressing buttonholes and pleats.

He changed his design and came up with the "iron with the hot point." He adopted the Hotpoint trademark and in 1908 he launched national advertising in the old Life magazine and in 1909 used a double-page spread in the Saturday Evening Post.

At the end of World War I Richardson merged his firm with the electric heating system of General Electric and the firm became known as Edison Electric, manufacturers of Hotpoint appliances.

By 1931 competition was so great in the appliance field that Hotpoint decided to concentrate on major devices such as stoves, refrigerators, automatic washers, dryers and dishwashers, so the electric iron was among the items dropped. But the name still stands.

PORTS O' PROGRESS

Princess Louise to Be Floating Restaurant

By JACK O. BALDWIN
Marine Reporter

A unique restaurant with banquet facilities for 1,600 soon will be floated into Los Angeles Harbor.

Jerry Sutton, former manager of the Ports O' Call Restaurant, says he is bringing the former 330-foot luxury liner, Princess Louise, from Vancouver, B.C., and converting it at a cost of $600,000 into a plush 585-stool cocktail lounge and banquet hall.

Some of the staterooms will be remodeled into posh shops.

Sutton, still looking for the most desirable dockside location, claims the Louise will be open for business about June 1.

Many Southlanders who have taken the Canadian Pacific Railroad's boat trip out of Vancouver to Alaska have fond vacation memories of days spent abnard the Princess Louise, sister ship to the Princess Patricia, currently sailing fortnightly out of Long Beach on cruises to Baja California and Mexico.

500,000TH TELEPHONE for General Telephone Company's southern area is installed by Wayne Moore (left) for honored customers Mr. and Mrs. Sidney Rodd at new International Tower in Long Beach.

New Milestone Gained by General Telephone

General Telephone Company's southern area reached another milestone last week: the installation of the 500,000th telephone.

Announcement was made by Herbert W. Frahm, southern area general manager.

The installation was made in the apartment of Mr. and Mrs. Sidney Rodd, new residents in the International Tower, 666 E. Ocean Boulevard, Long Beach.

The southern area includes 35 communities served by the Bellflower-Norwalk, Downey, Downtown Long Beach, East Long Beach, Lakewood-Alamitos, Uptown Long Beach and Orange divisions and serves a population of 995,000.

* * * *

"SINCE THE beginning of 1951," Frahm said, "we have increased our telephones in the southern area by more than 300,000.

"This means that in the past 15 years we have experienced a growth of 1½ times the amount of telephones served during the previous 54 years."

Elaborating on last month's announcement in the Progress Section of this newspaper of a $20 million expansion program in 1966 in this area for General Telephone, Frahm said:

"The many plans for 1966 will exceed any year to date for growth and expansion.

* * * *

"WE EXPECT to gain over 15,000 telephones in the four divisions, bringing that new total to 265,000. During the year our payroll in these areas also will increase to approximately $12,400,000."

Frahm concluded:

"We recognize the responsibilities that go along with the role we play in the Southern California economy."

Computerized Construction Data Available to Dodge Co. Clients

A $20 billion dollar annual construction industry involving more than 50,000 projects in any one year is seen as the level of construction activity by 1975 in the 10 western states, according to officials of the F. W. Dodge Company.

This is double the construction contract values of $10 billion recorded in this geographical area in 1965.

Preparing for this "building boom," Dodge has opened western regional operations at 3109 Wilshire Blvd., Los Angeles, with a beginning work force of 215.

Focal center of these new facilities is a specially designed computer center which, according to Dodge, has been under development for more than three years, representing the first computerized issuance of construction project news reports in the country.

* * * *

THIS COMPUTER has the capability of storing and issuing information, instantaneously, on some 30,000 planned construction projects in a geographical area stretching westward from New Mexico to the Pacific Ocean, south to the Mexican border and north to Canada.

"With the projected phenomenal growth for the west's construction industry," said J. Dexter Bowers Jr., western regional vice president, "the computerization of marketing information and statistical data for the construction industry is essential.

"There is no other practical way this mass of data can be compiled, disseminated and made useful to all segments of the building industry when construction activity reaches a level double of what it is today."

* * * *

DEVELOPED BY IBM to meet Dodge's special needs, the computer can store data on tens of thousands of construction projects, cross-referenced in 70 different building and nonbuilding categories according to geographical area and size (dollar value) of project.

Local Plant Key to Man's Return From Moon

By LEE CRAIG
Aerospace Editor

An 85-pound metal sphere made in Downey will provide the boost when America's astronauts begin their homeward journey from the moon in 1969.

If the four-foot sphere malfunctions — there is no back-up system — the astronauts will never touch earth again.

Therefore, Aerojet-General Corporation's Downey plant, subcontractors to Grumman for producing fuel tanks for the lunar excursion module's ascent propulsion system, must conform to rigid safety specifications.

* * * *

"IT'S LIKE making a refrigerator light enough for a housewife to carry, yet strong enough to be dropped from a 10-story building and still work properly," explains Bruce L. Baird, Aerojet's program manager at Downey.

Because of their critical role, the tanks have been designed with a reliability goal specifying that a chance of failure must be less than two in a million.

Walls of the tanks are only two-thousandths of an inch thick — about as thick as ten sheets of paper. Yet each must hold more than a ton of fuel.

Moment of truth during the moon trip, as far as Aerojet employes are concerned, will come when the two astronauts attempt to leave the moon and rise to rejoin the remaining astronaut, orbiting above in the Apollo mother ship.

* * * *

IF THE PROPELLANT tanks have been damaged in landing, or fail to work for some other reason, the two men are doomed.

Components of each tank include upper and lower halves, two "cones" used to mount the tank in the LEM spacecraft, an access cover, a helium inlet, an anti-vortex baffle and an anti-slosh baffle assembly of 106 parts.

To maintain maximum reliability in manufacturing, a white-glove treatment in a "clean room" is given to the tank during its final assembly.

* * * *

PARTICULARLY critical is a 75-minute automatic welding operation in Aerojet's special 90-cubic-foot vacuum chamber to weld the hemispheres together.

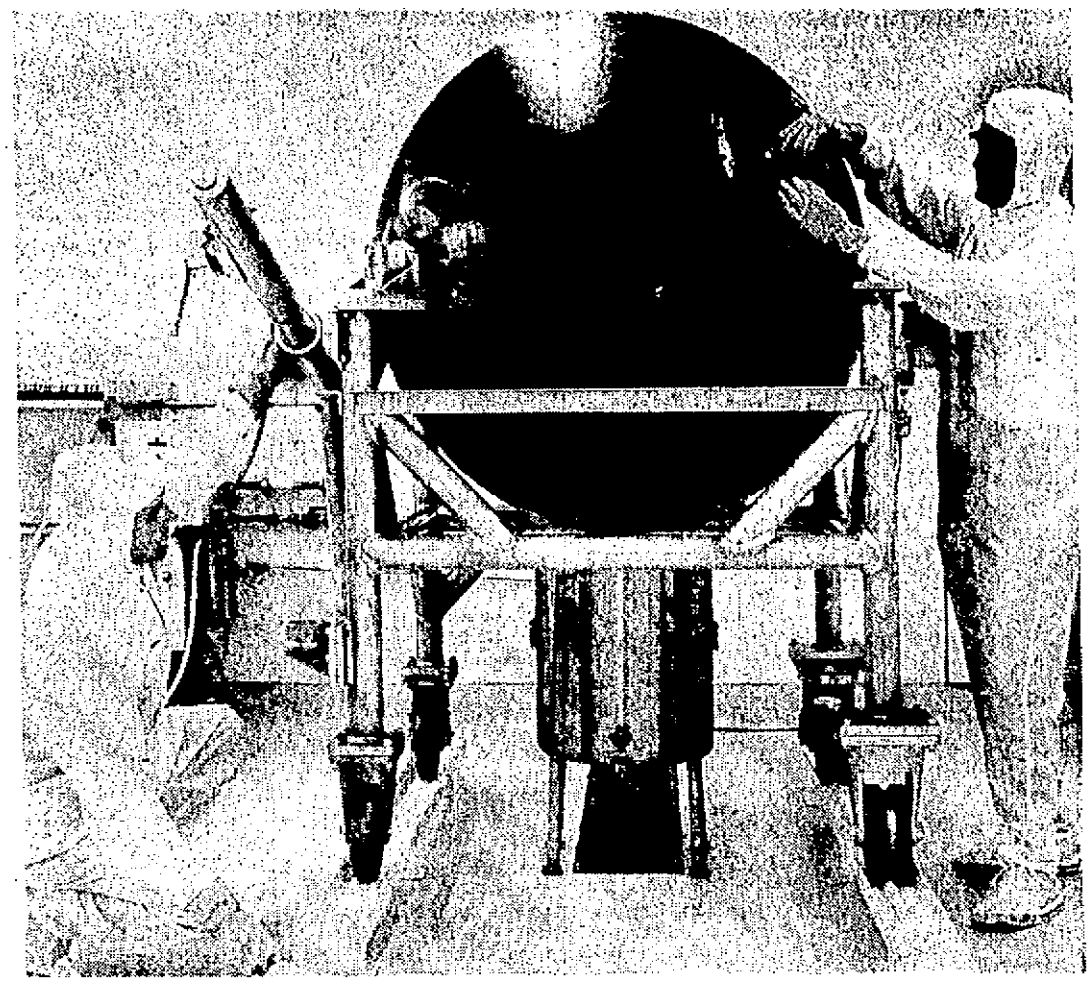

In order to avoid intersecting the four high-stress areas of the tank, where the cover, cones and inlet are attached, the two hemispheres must be welded together at a 45-degree angle from the tank's center-line. No mistakes can be tolerated. It must be done right the first time.

* * * *

THE PRODUCTION tank must pass such major trials as hydrostatic testing at 333 pounds per square inch, vibration at 20 to 2,000 cycles per second along each axis, plus balance, capacity and leak tests.

Qualification models of the tank must also pass acceleration and shock testing to 15 times the normal pull of gravity as well as burst, hydrostatic cycling, vibration while full and other tests.

First production models have passed their tests and were recently shipped to Grumman.

FINAL LEM TANK ASSEMBLY . . . Performed in Dust-Free Room

Santa Rosa Seafood Operation Is Moving to Wilmington Pier

A new seafood center in Wilmington where such items as 4 Fishermen seafood products will be produced, will be built by Fulham Brothers of California, a division of the Gorton Corp., Gloucester, Mass.

Gaylord E. Lewis, Fulham president, said the new plant will house operations currently performed at the company's Seafood Center in Santa Rosa.

* * * *

THE Wilmington facility will represent one of the largest seafood plants in the West and will permit doubling the present production capacity for Fulham.

Lewis said the Wilmington plant will process some Gorton brands distributed in the West as well as the 4 Fishermen products. It will turn out a variety of products for Blue Water Seafoods and also Red L products, both divisions of Gorton's.

* * * *

THE NEW expanded facility will enable the company to provide a wide range of warehousing and other distributor services not now possible at Santa Rosa, said Lewis.

The Seafood Center complex will be operated under a lease with the Union Ice Co., on a pier owned by the Los Angeles Harbor Department.

Grocers Urged to Woo Area's New Families

Abundant opportunities for winning the patronage of the 20% of U.S. families who move each year, but food retailers for the most part are not doing the job necessary to attract and keep these customers.

So reports the Progressive Grocer magazine in releasing findings of a survey of families who moved recently.

The survey is part of the massive "Consumer Dynamics in the Super Market" study being conducted in the Cleveland area by the magazine in cooperation with The Kroger Company, the nation's third largest food retailer, and the Reuben H. Donnelley Corporation, a leading research firm.

Families who move were found to be "a special breed" distinct from the rest of the U.S. population.

They are younger (60% are in the 21-34 age bracket), have more children, higher income, and are generally on the upgrade — their main reasons for the move are buying a home, the need for more space, a job transfer or seeking better economic opportunities.

In size, the market is larger than the total U.S. Negro population, twice the size of the "over $10,000" category and twice the size of the teen-age population.

In terms of retail food purchases, these families account for $12.9 billion a year or more than the annual sales of A&P, Safeway, Kroger, Acme Market and Food Fair combined.

The magazine described these families as "psychologically as well as physically predisposed to change."

For example, brand switching among moving families was very high in eight product categories measured (white bread, coffee, frozen juice, frozen peas, margarine, canned peas, canned peaches, facial tissue, detergent).

The percentage of brand switches among those who moved from out-of-town (one-third of the Cleveland movers) ranged from 25 to 77%, depending on the product.

Among families who moved within the Cleveland area or "locals", the rate of switching was lower, 15% to 50%, but still substantial.

In addition to brand switching, there were some significant differences in attitudes and experiences among families who moved from out-of-town and those who moved locally.

Both groups, however, showed similar patterns in the number of stores shopped in — three — before settling down to a favorite. The most time it took before making a final store preference was one month.

Thus, the survey concluded, the chain or independent store has at most four weeks to woo and win these new customers.

Some 85% of the out-of-towners and 75% of the locals, however, described their first shopping experience as an unhappy one. The main reasons given for this unhappiness were not being able to find things easily, unsureness about meats and service and not finding favorite brands.

Among the out-of-towners, meat quality and cleanliness were the main reasons given for selecting a favorite store. Locals listed location and convenience, brand selection and variety first.

At least, 46% of the out-of-towners did not receive invitations to shop in at least one food store in the neighborhood.

Another 84% of the local movers did not receive invitations and half of the locals went back to a store in their old neighborhood to shop, traveling in some cases as much as 10 miles.

When they made their initial store visits, three-quarters of the out-of-towners and one-half of the locals reported they were recognized as newcomers—usually by identifying themselves as such or when they sought to cash checks.

Yet, the survey found, two-thirds of the recognized out-of-towners and four-fifths of the locals were not invited to become regular customers. Many of those surveyed complained of "coolness" when they sought to make check cashing arrangements.

These oversights cannot be blamed on lesser store personnel, Progressive Grocer reports. In most cases the person recognizing the newcomer was the store manager.

The magazine recommends a program be instituted to welcome the newcomer to the store, offering help in finding things and cooperation in filling out forms for check cashing.

Store personnel should be trained to be on the lookout for newcomers and to offer assistance. Follow-ups should be made to see how satisfied the newcomers are with the store's services and to check on the performance of store personnel.

"Moving is a harrowing experience," the magazine said. "If ever there's a time that a customer needs a friend who can offer attention, recognition, friendliness, courtesy, service and plain old-fashioned help, it's when she's just moved."

L.B. Realtors Host Sales Conference on March 1

The Long Beach District Board of Realtors and the California Real Estate Association will co-sponsor an education and sales conference for Long Beach area Realtors and salesmen at the Long Beach Municipal Auditorium March 1.

Announcement of the conference was made by Harold K. Steele, president of the Long Beach board; Burton E. Smith of Bellflower, CREA president, and H. Jackson Pontius, CREA executive vice president.

The three met last week with members of the CREA education committee to plan the day-long activity.

Conference theme is "Real Estate Salesmanship."

Steele said the sessions are planned to enable Realtors and their salesmen to update their knowledge of listing and selling fundamentals.

Golden Sails Motel, Restaurant Complex Rising in Long Beach

Groundbreaking ceremonies last week marked the start of construction on the restaurant portion of the Golden Sails Resort-by-the Sea complex at Pacific Coast Highway and Loynes Drive, adjacent to the Bahia Yacht Harbor and the Long Beach Marina.

John Apostle, president of the Apollo Management Corp. which will operate the restaurant and adjoining motor hotel, said the steel framing which has existed at the site for some time is being developed into a one-story restaurant of 20,300 square feet.

The Golden Sails Restaurant will have a seating capacity of 140 in the main dining room. The cocktail lounge and bar will accommodate 135, while a deck overlooking the yacht harbor will seat an additional 50 patrons.

Banquet facilities for 350 will also be provided.

* * *

THE RESTAURANT building will contain a 2,000-square-foot coffee shop and 8,000 square feet of space which will be developed into moderate-sized retail stores and service shops to be operated on a lease basis.

JOHN APOSTLE

Styled with the atmosphere of a Southern France seaport to give Long Beach still another plank in its "International City" platform, the Golden Sails restaurant will feature bright colors, a large arched open fireplace, a distinctive aquarium and a cocktail lounge decor depicting the authenticity of a French wine cellar.

Construction of the restaurant is expected to be completed by May 15 of this year, Apostle said, by William J. O'Brien Jr., general contractor.

* * *

THE GOLDEN SAILS MOTOR HOTEL, according to Apostle, is now in the process of being completed with the installation of wall-to-wall carpeting, all king and queen-sized beds and color TV. It will be in operation by April 1, he predicts.

The motor hotel will be headquarters for 500 members of the Rainbow Girls, who will hold their annual convention in Long Beach April 3-6.

Lease arrangements for the shop area in the restaurant building are now being negotiated, Apostle said, and banquet and room reservations are being accepted.

Grocers Urged to Woo Area's New Families

Abundant opportunities for winning the patronage of the 20% of U.S. families who move each year, but food retailers for the most part are not doing the job necessary to attract and keep these customers.

So reports the Progressive Grocer magazine in releasing findings of a survey of families who moved recently.

The survey is part of the massive "Consumer Dynamics in the Super Market" study being conducted in the Cleveland area by the magazine in cooperation with The Kroger Company, the nation's third largest food retailer, and the Reuben H. Donnelley Corporation, a leading research firm.

Families who move were found to be "a special breed" distinct from the rest of the U.S. population.

They are younger (60% are in the 21-34 age bracket), have more children, higher income, and are generally on the upgrade — their main reasons for the move are buying a home, the need for more space, a job transfer or seeking better economic opportunities.

In size, the market is larger than the total U.S. Negro population, twice the size of the "over $10,000" category and twice the size of the teen-age population.

In terms of retail food purchases, these families account for $12.9 billion a year or more than the annual sales of A&P, Safeway, Kroger, Acme Market and Food Fair combined.

The magazine described these families as "psychologically as well as physically predisposed to change."

For example, brand switching among moving families was very high in eight product categories measured (white bread, coffee, frozen juice, frozen peas, margarine, canned peas, canned peaches, facial tissue, detergent).

The percentage of brand switches among those who moved from out-of-town (one-third of the Cleveland movers) ranged from 25 to 77%, depending on the product.

Among families who moved within the Cleveland area or "locals", the rate of switching was lower, 15% to 50%, but still substantial.

In addition to brand switching, there were some significant differences in attitudes and experiences among families who moved from out-of-town and those who moved locally.

Both groups, however, showed similar patterns in the number of stores shopped in — three — before settling down to a favorite. The most time it took before making a final store preference was one month.

Thus, the survey concluded, the chain or independent store has at most four weeks to woo and win these new customers.

Some 85% of the out-of-towners and 75% of the locals, however, described their first shopping experience as an unhappy one. The main reasons given for this unhappiness were not being able to find things easily, unsureness about meals and service and not finding favorite brands.

Among the out-of-towners, meat quality and cleanliness were the main reasons given for selecting a favorite store. Locals listed location and convenience, brand selection and variety first.

At least, 46% of the out-of-towners did not receive invitations to shop in at least one food store in the neighborhood.

Another 84% of the local movers did not receive invitations and half of the locals went back to a store in their old neighborhood to shop, traveling in some cases as much as 10 miles.

When they made their initial store visits, three-quarters of the out-of-towners and one-half of the locals reported they were recognized as newcomers—usually by identifying themselves as such or when they sought to cash checks.

Yet, the survey found, two-thirds of the recognized out-of-towners and four-fifths of the locals were not invited to become regular customers. Many of those surveyed complained of "coolness" when they sought to make check cashing arrangements.

These oversights cannot be blamed on lesser store personnel, Progressive Grocer reports. In most cases the person recognizing the newcomer was the store manager.

The magazine recommends a program be instituted to welcome the newcomer to the store, offering help in finding things and cooperation in filling out forms for check cashing.

Store personnel should be trained to be on the lookout for newcomers and to offer assistance. Follow-ups should be made to see how satisfied the newcomers are with the store's services and to check on the performance of store personnel.

"Moving is a harrowing experience," the magazine said. "If ever there's a time that a customer needs a friend who can offer attention, recognition, friendliness, courtesy, service and plain old-fashioned help, it's when she's just moved."

L.B. Realtors Host Sales Conference on March 1

The Long Beach District Board of Realtors and the California Real Estate Association will co-sponsor an education and sales conference for Long Beach area Realtors and salesmen at the Long Beach Municipal Auditorium March 1.

Announcement of the conference was made by Harold K. Steele, president of the Long Beach board; Burton E. Smith of Bellflower, CREA president, and H. Jackson Pontius, CREA executive vice president.

The three met last week with members of the CREA education committee to plan the day-long activity.

Conference theme is "Real Estate Salesmanship."

Steele said the sessions are planned to enable Realtors and their salesmen to update their knowledge of listing and selling fundamentals.

Golden Sails Motel, Restaurant Complex Rising in Long Beach

Groundbreaking ceremonies last week marked the start of construction on the restaurant portion of the Golden Sails Resort-by-the Sea complex at Pacific Coast Highway and Loynes Drive, adjacent to the Bahia Yacht Harbor and the Long Beach Marina.

John Apostle, president of the Apollo Management Corp. which will operate the restaurant and adjoining motor hotel, said the steel framing which has existed at the site for some time is being developed into a one-story restaurant of 20,300 square feet.

The Golden Sails Restaurant will have a seating capacity of 140 in the main dining room. The cocktail lounge and bar will accommodate 135, while a deck overlooking the yacht harbor will seat an additional 50 patrons.

JOHN APOSTLE

Banquet facilities for 350 will also be provided.

* * * *

THE RESTAURANT building will contain a 2,000-square-foot coffee shop and 8,000 square feet of space which will be developed into moderate-sized retail stores and service shops to be operated on a lease basis.

Styled with the atmosphere of a Southern France seaport to give Long Beach still another plank in its "International City" platform, the Golden Sails restaurant will feature bright colors, a large arched open fireplace, a distinctive aquarium and a cocktail lounge decor depicting the authenticity of a French wine cellar.

Construction of the restaurant is expected to be completed by May 15 of this year, Apostle said, by William J. O'Brien Jr., general contractor.

* * * *

THE GOLDEN SAILS MOTOR HOTEL, according to Apostle, is now in the process of being completed with the installation of wall-to-wall carpeting, all king and queen-sized beds and color TV. It will be in operation by April 1, he predicts.

The motor hotel will be headquarters for 500 members of the Rainbow Girls, who will hold their annual convention in Long Beach April 3-6.

Lease arrangements for the shop area in the restaurant building are now being negotiated, Apostle said, and banquet and room reservations are being accepted.

Promoters of Panic Selling Face Penalty

Any property owner who feels a real estate agent is trying to panic him into selling at a low price because some change is imminent in the neighborhood often has recourse through law or the local real estate board, according to Burton E. Smith of Bellflower, president of the California Real Estate Association.

His comment came after published reports that a Los Angeles civil rights group official was claiming "panic selling" activity by real estate operators in the Watts riot area.

* * * *

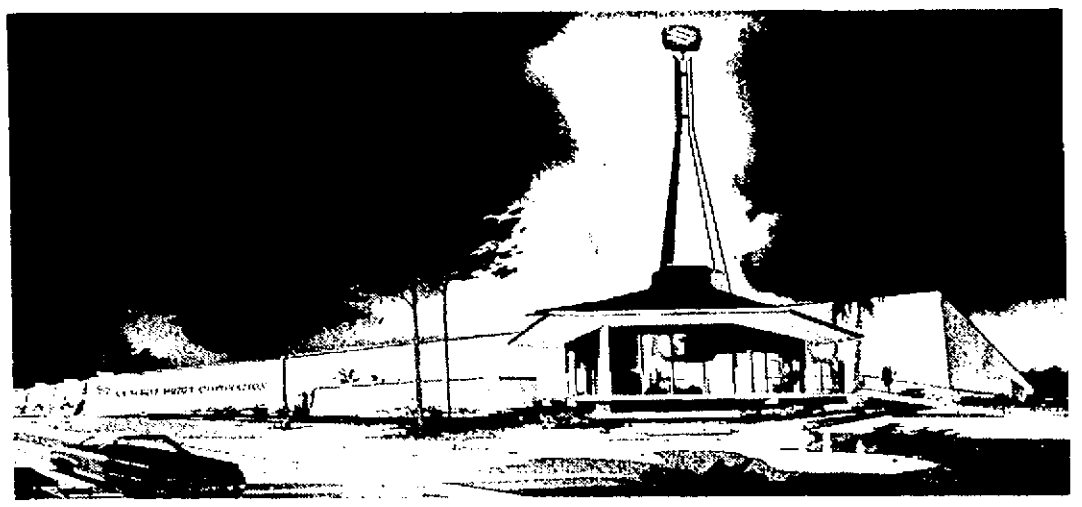

"OUR ASSOCIATION backed a bill passed by the last session of the California legislature," Smith said, "making panic selling practices by real estate licensees illegal.

"For years," he added, "CREA, through its 176 local boards, has provided penalties for any such conduct by its members, but it must be recognized that not all real estate agents are members of CREA.

"The law now gives the real estate commissioner power to revoke the license of agents guilty of such practices, or to take other disciplinary action."

* * * *

THE STATUTE to which Smith referred is Section 10177 of the Business and Professions Code of California. Its penalties are for soliciting the sale of property on the grounds that a drop in property values, an increase in crime, or a decline in the quality of schools is imminent because persons of another race, color or religion are coming into the neighborhood.

ALL-GLASS PAGODA MARKS STRUCTURE

Ground was broken last week for national headquarters building of United States Suzuki Motor Corp. at 13767 Freeway Drive, Santa Fe Springs. Daring Oriental design will be given to 80,000-square-foot structure—for 200 administrative employes and executives—expected to be completed late this year. Striking all-glass pagoda will hold two authentic arched bridges, one enclosed and air conditioned. Running stream will cut through garden at pagoda base.

LOUDSPEAKER 'ANNOUNCES' FIRES

Equipment of New Washington, D.C., Building Controlled by Computer

The new headquarters building of the International Monetary Fund in Washington, D. C., scheduled for completion late this year, will be the first office building with basic equipment operated by a computer.

According to Robertshaw Controls Company, Richmond, Va., Washington consulting engineer Nash M. Love, and Westinghouse Electric Corporation, Pittsburgh, the computer automatically will determine air conditioning needs and operate equipment to provide the correct amount of cooling; control operation of the heating plant; start and stop ventilating fans, and turn lights on and off.

It also automatically will keep track of and analyze such data as power and fuel consumption and will print out a concise daily summary of facts and figures important to the building's operation.

* * * *

THE 13-STORY building, at 1900 Pennsylvania Ave., is an addition to an existing structure, and both will be controlled by the computer installation.

Another "first" in the building will be an automatic fire-alarm system which will include pre-recorded voice messages.

Instead of warning gongs or buzzers, the system automatically will select the proper recording and the building loudspeaker system will announce to building operating personnel and in the building superintendent's office something like:

"Attention, fire brigade . . . there is an alarm in building area 9-B."

* * * *

KEY ELEMENT in the closed-loop control system are new direct-digital valve positioning devices developed by Robertshaw. These automatically convert electronic impulses from the computer to precisely-measured, pneumatically-operated "push-pull" movements which partially or fully open or close vanes which regulate output of air conditioning equipment.

A built-in feedback device then automatically reports to the computer that its command has been carried out, enabling the computer to control building conditions exactly as instructed by its program.

Property Tax Bills Increasing Faster Than Cal. Growth Rate

During the past 10 years property tax bills have grown twice as fast as federal taxes, at a rate far exceeding California's growth.

According to a chart prepared by Property Research Corp., land investment consultants of Los Angeles, local property taxes jumped 172% between 1955 and 1965.

Federal taxes were up only 79%. Property taxes levied by school districts alone more than tripled during the period, from $491 million to $1.6 billion.

* * * *

AT THE SAME time, while California's population increased 44% and its industrial employment only 25%, the total tax burden increased by 112%.

That comes out to a staggering $16.7 billion in 1965, or more than $900 for every man, woman and child in the state.

Local property taxes jumped, the research firm reported, from an average of $91 per person in 1955 to $171 today.

'EXPRESSIVE USE OF CONCRETE'

A special award has been presented to California Division of Highways in Sacramento by Portland Cement Association in recognition of "creative design and expressive use of concrete" in San Diego-Santa Monica Freeway interchange in Los Angeles. The three-level interchange occupies 90 acres, was opened to traffic last year. Thirty traffic lanes are incorporated in structure with some curves banked to maximum of 12%.

NAREB Says Loan Rate Hike Won't End Housing Slowdown

The newly announced increase in the rate of interest for FHA-insured loans is insufficient to make this type of financing completely competitive in the money market, Jack Justice, Miami Beach, president of the National Association of Real Estate Boards, said.

As a result, the slowdown, in the housing sales market cannot be corrected until such time as FHA sees fit to raise the rate another ¼% to 5¾% he added.

"Funds for this type of investment have been rapidly disappearing as they seek the higher interest rates available elsewhere under the stimulus of the upward movement brought about by the change in the rediscount rate by the Federal Reserve Board late last year," he explained.

* * * *

"THIS MOVE by the government to lift the rates only ¼% may temporarily ease the situation in the East where discounts have amounted to only 2 points, but will not completely rectify the problem in the West where discounts are ranging up to 6 points." (A discount represents the difference between the amount specified on a loan and the actual total received by the borrower.)

Since many sellers are unwilling or unable to absorb such discounts, they simply refuse to sell their homes, thus slowing down the real estate market, he explained.

"It is unfortunate that the Administration took only this partial step, since the FHA will be faced with additional action if it hopes to bring its program into balance with the rest of the money market.

Most House Sales Free of Discrimination

Discrimination against members of minority groups by property owners selling their houses and apartments in California through multiple listing services is practically nonexistent, according to David N. Robinson of Berkeley, president of the California Real Estate Association.

He drew that conclusion as he announced last week that a survey made by CREA had set the figure at one half of one per cent.

"This would represent at least 95% of all the residential property sold through multiples in the state this year," he said, 'because most multiple listing services are operated by our member boards."

* * * *

HE ALSO POINTED OUT that multiple listing services offer "the largest source of housing for sale wherever they operate. This is especially true in densely populated areas," he stated, "where concern over possible racial or religious discrimination seems strongest."

Robinson said that approximately 80 of CREA's member real estate boards operate multiples and that the survey sampling covered 50 of those. "They were in heavily populated areas and less populated ones, and geographically representative of the whole state," he said.

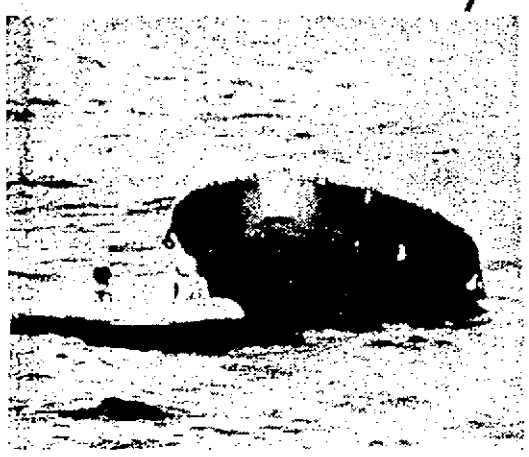

* * * *

THIS REPORT also makes clear," Robinson declared, "that the people of California voted overwhelmingly in favor of Proposition 14 because they wanted to retain their traditional right to sell to anyone they choose—not because they wanted to discriminate against Negroes or any other minority.

"I think it's high time," he commented, "that those who claim they want to combat racial and religious discrimination stop accusing property owners of California and Realtors who carry out their instructions of fostering such discrimination.

"I also want to point out that 173 of the 176 local real estate boards within CREA have adopted the CREA recommended Code of Practices. The code is intended to let Californians know that members stand ready to show property to anyone."

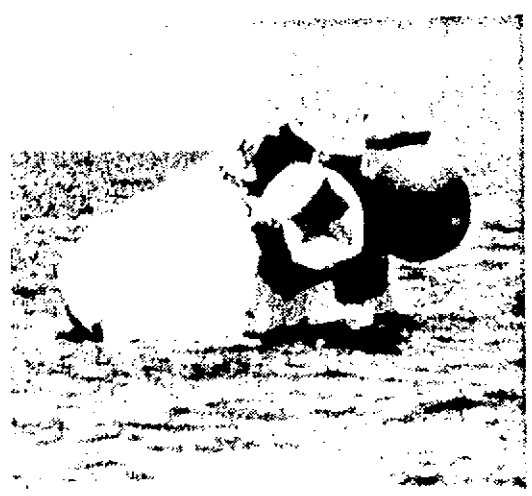

Apollo Spacecraft to Ride Waves Safely

SEQUENCE SHOTS taken during recent tests show how Apollo Moon-mission spacecraft is righted by inflatable flotation bags after splashdown. Bags are being produced under contract from North American Aviation's Space and Information Systems Division, Downey.

FLOTATION BAGS, developed by Goodyear Aerospace Corporation of Akron, O., start to inflate. They are 43 inches in diameter with 24-cubic-foot volume. In current Gemini program, Navy paramedics must attach inflatable flotation collar after splashdown.

TILTED UPRIGHT, inflatable spheres will hold the three-man spacecraft stable during recovery operations. Bags are made of polyurethane-coated fabric.

Security Storage Breaks Ground for Warehouse

Ground was broken last week for a new warehouse for Security Storage and Moving Company at 1945 E. 223rd St., in the Dominguez area.

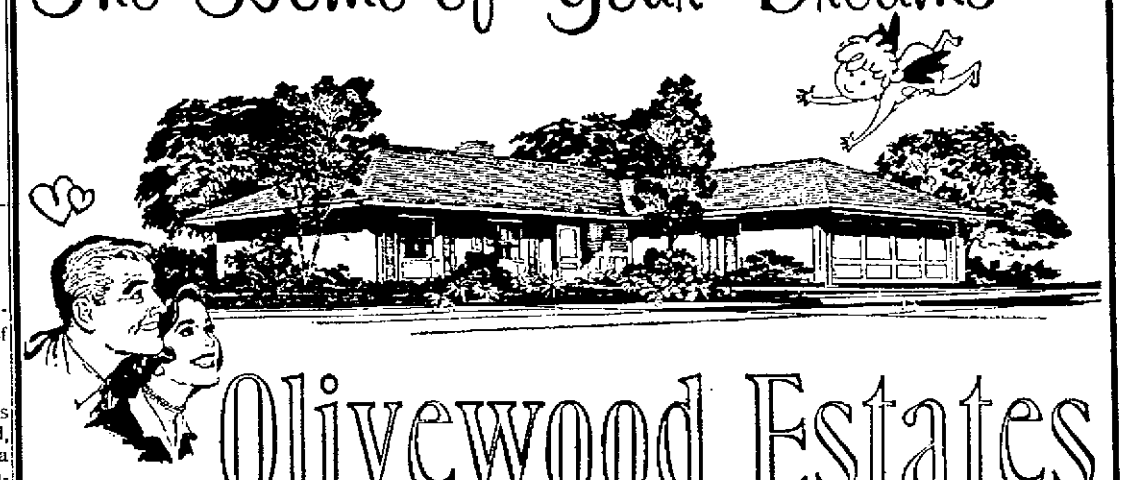

The 154-foot-long building, 80 feet in width, will be one of a complex of industrial buildings for lease by the developer, Wag-Pro, Ltd., Los Angeles.

* * * *

SECURITY Storage's new quarters will be an all-steel structure fabricated and erected by the Soule Steel Company. The 700-foot-square office area will be gas air-conditioned and the entire building will be sprinklered for fire protection.

An innovation, new to the West Coast but successfully used by the firm in its Louisiana and East Coast warehouses, is the stacking of storage boxes four high, all designed for quick handling by fork-lift equipment.

LAUNCHED AT ORANGE

Promoters of Panic Selling Face Penalty

Any property owner who feels a real estate agent is trying to panic him into selling at a low price because some change is imminent in the neighborhood often has recourse through law or the local real estate board, according to Burton E. Smith of Bellflower, president of the California Real Estate Association.

His comment came after published reports that a Los Angeles civil rights group official was claiming "panic selling" activity by real estate operators in the Watts riot area.

* * * *

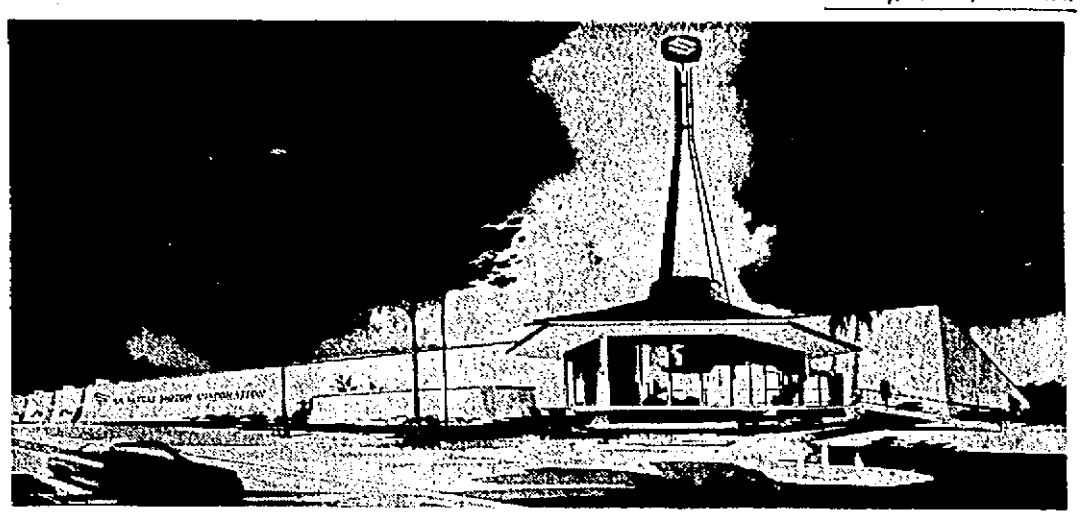

"OUR ASSOCIATION backed a bill passed by the last session of the California legislature," Smith said, "making panic selling practices by real estate licensees illegal.

"For years," he added, "CREA, through its 176 local boards, has provided penalties for any such conduct by its members, but it must be recognized that not all real estate agents are members of CREA.

"The law now gives the real estate commissioner power to revoke the license of agents guilty of such practices, or to take other disciplinary action."

* * * *

THE STATUTE to which Smith referred is Section 10177 of the Business and Professions Code of California. Its penalties are for soliciting the sale of property on the grounds that a drop in property values, an increase in crime, or a decline in the quality of schools is imminent because persons of another race, color or religion are coming into the neighborhood.

ALL-GLASS PAGODA MARKS STRUCTURE

Ground was broken last week for national headquarters building of United States Suzuki Motor Corp. at 13767 Freeway Drive, Santa Fe Springs. Daring Oriental design will be given to 80,000-square-foot structure—for 200 administrative employes and executives—expected to be completed late this year. Striking all-glass pagoda will hold two authentic arched bridges, one enclosed and air conditioned. Running stream will cut through garden at pagoda base.

LOUDSPEAKER 'ANNOUNCES' FIRES

Equipment of New Washington, D.C., Building Controlled by Computer

The new headquarters building of the International Monetary Fund in Washington, D. C., scheduled for completion late this year, will be the first office building with basic equipment operated by a computer.

According to Robertshaw Controls Company, Richmond, Va., Washington consulting engineer Nash M. Love, and Westinghouse Electric Corporation, Pittsburgh, the computer automatically will determine air conditioning needs and operate equipment to provide the correct amount of cooling; control operation of the heating plant; start and stop ventilating fans, and turn lights on and off.

It also automatically will keep track of and analyze such data as power and fuel consumption and will print out a concise daily summary of facts and figures important to the building's operation.

* * * *

THE 13-STORY building, at 1900 Pennsylvania Ave., is an addition to an existing structure, and both will be controlled by the computer installation.

Another "first" in the building will be an automatic fire-alarm system which will include pre-recorded voice messages.

Instead of warning gongs or buzzers, the system automatically will select the proper recording and the building loudspeaker system will announce to building operating personnel and in the building superintendent's office something like:

"Attention, fire brigade . . . there is an alarm in building area 9-B."

* * * *

KEY ELEMENT in the closed-loop control system are new direct-digital valve positioning devices developed by Robertshaw. These automatically convert electronic impulses from the computer to precisely-measured, pneumatically-operated "push-pull" movements which partially or fully open or close vanes which regulate output of air conditioning equipment.

A built-in feedback device then automatically reports to the computer that its command has been carried out, enabling the computer to control building conditions exactly as instructed by its program.

Property Tax Bills Increasing Faster Than Cal. Growth Rate

During the past 10 years property tax bills have grown twice as fast as federal taxes, at a rate far exceeding California's growth.

According to a chart prepared by Property Research Corp., land investment consultants of Los Angeles, local property taxes jumped 172% between 1955 and 1965.

Federal taxes were up only 79%. Property taxes levied by school districts alone more than tripled during the period, from $491 million to $1.6 billion.

* * * *

AT THE SAME time, while California's population increased 44% and its industrial employment only 25%, the total tax burden increased by 112%.

That comes out to a staggering $16.7 billion in 1965, or more than $900 for every man, woman and child in the state.

Local property taxes jumped, the research firm reported, from an average of $91 per person in 1955 to $171 today.

Irvine Co. Wins 'Gold Shovel' Award

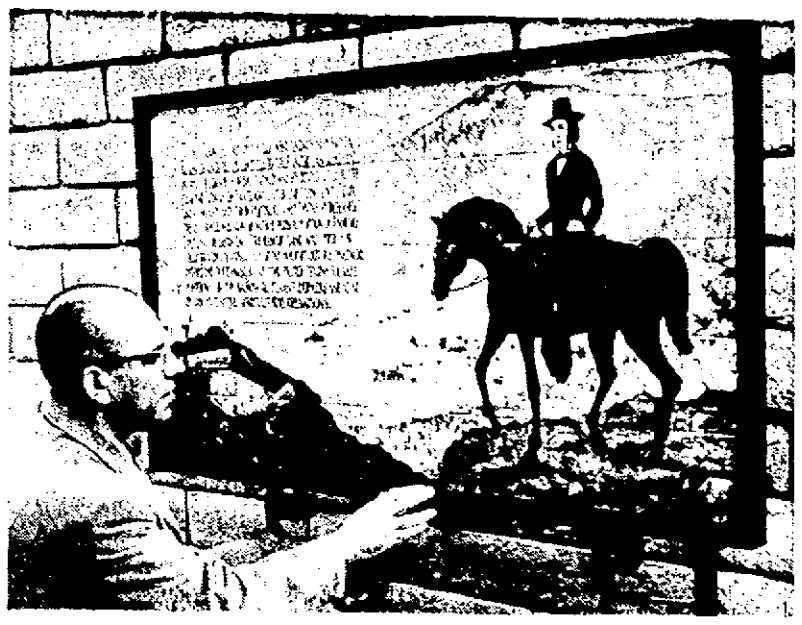

The Irvine Company, owners and developers of the largest "planned" community in the nation, The Irvine Ranch, last week was saluted by the Los Angeles Chamber of Commerce for outstanding contributions to the local economy.

Irvine was presented the Gold Shovel Award, the Chamber's "business Oscar," which is intended to acknowledge the firm's continuing investment in Southern California.

In making the award to Irvine President Charles S. Thomas, Chamber President Daniel P. Bryant stated that "the 88,256 acres of Irvine Ranch, comprising one-fifth the land mass of Orange County, represents a major force in the present and future of Southern California.

"ITS 120 square miles encompass not only the largest, but the finest master planned region on the North American continent."

Cited in the award presentation was the fact that more than 4,200 dwelling units are presently under development on the ranch. Seven individually planned commercial developments, two of which are already open, will serve present and future residents in buildings totalling 1,400,000 square feet.

EXPRESSIVE MURAL
Alberto Rampone, ceramic tile artist and member of Irvine Company staff, checks one of his murals in ranch's new information center which expresses Don Jose Andres Sepulveda overseeing grazing lands in pioneer times. Other Rampone murals depict California conquerors, padres, Indians, missions.

Insurance Executives Join Heart Fund Drive Group

With the slogan, "The best insurance against heart disease is a contribution to the Long Beach Heart Fund," a group of life insurance executives have volunteered for the 1966 Heart Fund campaign.

Under the direction of Herman Wulfsberg Jr., these men are already working throughout the business areas of Long Beach, Lakewood and Signal Hill to raise funds for heart research.

Assisting in this effort are area leaders Claude Murrell, Mutual of New York; Jack Ward, Standard Life; Robert Lindgren, Washington National Life; Loren Evans, State Mutual Life; Harvey Harms, Provident Life; Orville Rundle, New York Life; George McKeehan, Aetna Life, and Donald Tippett, Massachusetts Mutual and president of the Long Beach Association of Life Underwriters.

This effort by the life insurance men of the area is a national public service program of volunteering their assistance in local charity efforts.

AHA Units Scheduling Exposition

President Merrell Sale of the Long Beach AHA said invitations are going out to 79,000 apartment owners and managers, 9,500 motel-hotel owners and 3,700 builders in the Los Angeles Orange County area.

Space for 120 exhibitors has been provided, Sale said.

'EXPRESSIVE USE OF CONCRETE'

A special award has been presented to California Division of Highways in Sacramento by Portland Cement Association in recognition of "creative design and expressive use of concrete" in San Diego-Santa Monica Freeway interchange in Los Angeles. NAREB Says Loan Rate Hike Won't End Housing Slowdown

The newly announced increase in the rate of interest for FHA-insured loans is insufficient to make this type of financing completely competitive in the money market, Jack Justice, Miami Beach, president of the National Association of Real Estate Boards, said.

As a result, the slowdown, in the housing sales market cannot be corrected until such time as FHA sees fit to raise the rate another ¼% to 5¾% he added.

"Funds for this type of investment have been rapidly disappearing as they seek the higher interest rates available elsewhere under the stimulus of the upward movement brought about by the change in the rediscount rate by the Federal Reserve Board late last year," he explained.

* * * *

"THIS MOVE by the government to lift the rates only ¼% may temporarily ease the situation in the East where discounts have amounted to only 2 points, but will not completely rectify the problem in the West where discounts are ranging up to 6 points." (A discount represents the difference between the amount specified on a loan and the actual total received by the borrower.)

Since many sellers are unwilling or unable to absorb such discounts, they simply refuse to sell their homes, thus slowing down the real estate market, he explained.

"It is unfortunate that the Administration took only this partial step, since the FHA will be faced with additional action if it hopes to bring its program into balance with the rest of the money market.

Metal Finishing Seminars in L.A.

A quality metal finishing seminar will be held in Los Angeles March 22 for Southland firms engaged in distributing chemicals and equipment for metal cleaning, polishing and plating.

Most House Sales Free of Discrimination

Discrimination against members of minority groups by property owners selling their houses and apartments in California through multiple listing services is practically nonexistent, according to David N. Robinson of Berkeley, president of the California Real Estate Association.

He drew that conclusion as he announced last week that a survey made by CREA had set the figure at one half of one per cent.

"This would represent at least 95% of all the residential property sold through multiples in the state this year," he said, 'because most multiple listing services are operated by our member boards."

* * * *

HE ALSO POINTED OUT that multiple listing services offer "the largest source of housing for sale wherever they operate. This is especially true in densely populated areas," he stated, "where concern over possible racial or religious discrimination seems strongest."

Robinson said that approximately 80 of CREA's member real estate boards operate multiples and that the survey sampling covered 50 of those. "They were in heavily populated areas and less populated ones, and geographically representative of the whole state," he said.

* * * *

THIS REPORT also makes clear," Robinson declared, "that the people of California voted overwhelmingly in favor of Proposition 14 because they wanted to retain their traditional right to sell to anyone they choose—not because they wanted to discriminate against Negroes or any other minority.

"I think it's high time," he commented, "that those who claim they want to combat racial and religious discrimination stop accusing property owners of California and Realtors who carry out their instructions of fostering such discrimination.

"I also want to point out that 173 of the 176 local real estate boards within CREA have adopted the CREA recommended Code of Practices. The code is intended to let Californians know that members stand ready to show property to anyone."

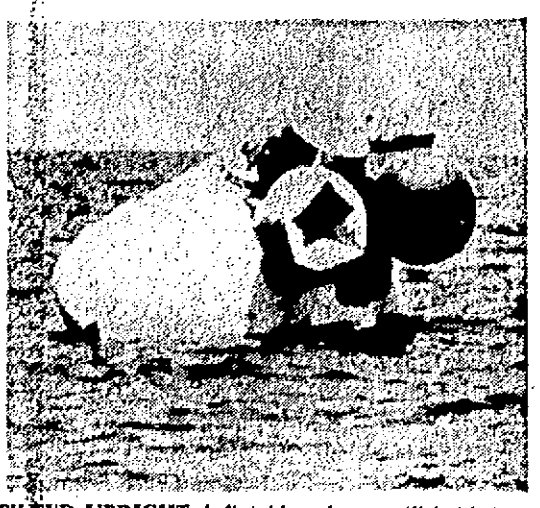

Apollo Spacecraft to Ride Waves Safely

SEQUENCE SHOTS taken during recent tests show how Apollo Moon-mission spacecraft is righted by inflatable flotation bags after splashdown. Bags are being produced under contract from North American Aviation's Space and Information Systems Division, Downey.

FLOTATION BAGS, developed by Goodyear Aerospace Corporation of Akron, O., start to inflate. They are 43 inches in diameter with 24-cubic-foot volume. In current Gemini program, Navy paramedics must attach inflatable flotation collar after splashdown.

TILTED UPRIGHT, inflatable spheres will hold the three-man spacecraft stable during recovery operations. Bags are made of polyurethane-coated fabric.

Security Storage Breaks Ground for Warehouse

Ground was broken last week for a new warehouse for Security Storage and Moving Company at 1945 E. 223rd St., in the Dominguez area.

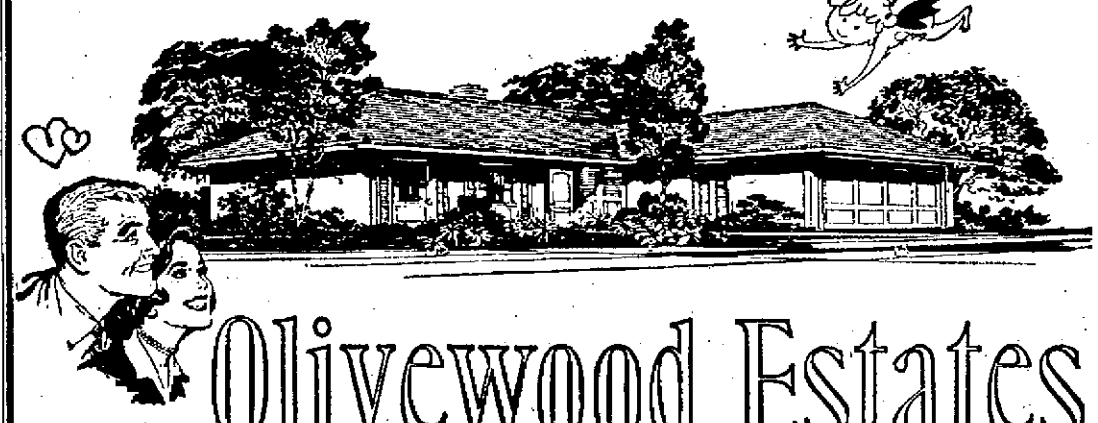

The 154-foot-long building, 80 feet in width, will be one of a complex of industrial buildings for lease by the developer, Wag-Pro, Ltd., Los Angeles.

* * * *

SECURITY Storage's new quarters will be an all-steel structure fabricated and erected by the Soule Steel Company. The 700-foot-square office area will be gas air-conditioned and the entire building will be sprinklered for fire protection.

An innovation, new to the West Coast but successfully used by the firm in its Louisiana and East Coast warehouses, is the stacking of storage boxes four high, all designed for quick handling by fork-lift equipment.

Bedroom Now Regarded As Vital Activity Center

A generation ago, the bedroom was considered a private sleeping area and its door usually was closed when visitors dropped in.

Today, however, many families have come to regard it as a place to work and relax as well as sleep, and in recent years interest in improving the decor of this room has reached a peak.

In many homes, reports the American Home Improvement Institute, national clearing house for design and building information, special areas are being set aside in bedrooms for sewing centers, study corners, hobby alcoves and even such recreational pursuits as television viewing or ping pong.

Because of this trend, many U.S. families are taking steps to update the decor of the bedroom.

* * * *

HOWEVER, unlike the decorating procedure for other rooms in the house, a focal point need never be created (as a wall of shelves or a piece of sculpture, might be the central fixture in a living room).

The bed, because of its size, is the bedroom's natural focal point, and the motif of the bedspread and headboard set the style for the entire room.

Since bedspreads are available in a wide variety of patterns, colors and materials, it's best to start planning the decor with the design of the headboard.

The "in" style today is a headboard that extends upward to the ceiling above the bed, in much the same way as canopies once were used.

* * * *

Similar decorative tie-ins can be achieved by repeating the bedspread material in draperies. Floor and walls in contrasting colors will further dramatize the bed as the room's focal point.

To clean any plumbing fixture, slice up a half bar of naphtha-based soap in quart of hot water. Add two tablespoons of paint-thinner or dry-cleaning solvent. Apply to the fixture with a stiff-bristled brush to remove most simple stains.

CAISSON FOR OFFSHORE OIL DRILLING TOWER

Sixty-ton steel caisson, 45 feet long, is first of 10 similar 18-foot diameter sections of legs for an offshore drilling tower being fabricated at U. S. Steel's American Bridge Division plant, Los Angeles, for Standard Oil Co. of California, Western Operations, Inc., and Richfield Oil Co. Pipes inside leg section are pile sleeves through which pipe pilings will be driven and grouted when the platform is installed on location. When completed, the twin-derrick platform will have a deck measuring about 120 feet square and a total height of nearly 190 feet with 61 feet above the waterline. The big drilling unit, named "Hope," will be located three miles off the California coast near Summerland and is scheduled for assembly at Los Angeles Harbor this summer.

Buffums' to Build in Newport Center

Buffums' seventh Southern California store will be established in Newport Center a vast $20 million regional shopping complex planned for the Irvine Ranch in Orange County.

Construction will begin this summer on the new $1.3 million department store with completion scheduled for the fall of next year. The 54,000 sq. ft. store will feature quality fashions for the entire family and a restaurant for 100 patrons.

STORE NO. 7 FOR BUFFUMS' . . . $1.3 Million Unit in Newport Center

"Buffums' traditions of high quality and fashionable merchandise in a store designed to delight the shopper will be continued in our Newport Center store," Vaile G. Young, president of the pioneer Southern California merchandising firm, stated.

• • • •

"THE UNPRECEDENTED growth of Orange County and the coastal communities established our confidence in the continued economic progress of the Orange Coast area."

As planned, designed and engineered by Welton Becket and Associates, master planners for the entire Newport shopping center, the mall will employ a dark customized split block on the lower level which will contrast with a lighter shade on level store on the south end the upper floor.

Designers Say They Can Save Time and Money

NEW YORK (UPI) — Every now and then in the life of the homeowner comes the big question. Should a professional designer be called in to deal with the decorating?

Naturally, professional designers thing the answer is yes. And they have a number of reasons to buttress their position.

"The truth is, the facts speak for themselves," says La Verne Neil, an interiors expert for the S. M. Hexter Co., of Cleveland. "A designer's assistance will save money and time and insure that your personality is expressed in the best of taste."

• • • •

TIME IS saved, she says, because a professional can go to the heart of the problem. He knows where to find that elusive gilded bird cage or just the right silk for draperies. He knows the field and what fabrics and furniture function best for each particular instance."

A professional also has a knack with saving money. For doesn't waste hours searching for furniture or materials which the average person is unaware of," says Miss Neil. "He knows, for example, that in the end, are nothing more than a mistake.

WHY DO THEY DO IT?

Job-Holding Wives and Mothers Seek Best for Families and Selves

The working wife and mother, like her pioneer forebearers, is seeking the best the world has to offer for her family and herself. It may not be the easiest way to live, but it has distinct advantages, according to a current report.

Findings include that she says she works for the money mostly, but also for stimulation and her main problem is finding time enough for everything that must be done. Shes' among 16,000,000 working women, according to the current issue of Changing Times magazine.

To survey working wives and mothers in 35 states the monthly publication joined with the Bureau of Laundry and Dry Cleaning and queried a random sample of about 600.

• • • •

ASKED WHY they work, a solid 88% listed a financial consideration first. The three most frequent were: to provide better living for the family; provide for the children's education; and, to get out of debt.

Even those working for financial consideratoon revealed a secondary interest when asked in another question "why do women like to work outside the home?" Replies were heavily weighted with such comments as "it keeps them better informed" or "it keeps them young."

Although 63% of the wives report they are able to get the necessary tasks done at home with a feeling of satisfaction and a minimum of fatigue, they candidly admit that they don't have enough time.

• • • •

HALF OF THOSE SURVEYED think "schools should place more emphasis on the dual role of a working wife or mother," and they readily say why: "Schools are unrealistic in educating girls — most women are trained for one role or the other, but never for both." Almost unanimously, they think girls should be taught to budget time as part of their education.

Lacking the extra hours, how do they cope? More than half report that they get help from husbands and children. In addition, they use an average of three outside services apiece. Most common are dry cleaning and laundry, home delivery of dairy products, and beauty parlors.

The majority regard the wife's salary as family income, to be applied where it is needed most.

'BIG DISH' FOR ALASKA

A multimillion-dollar contract to fabricate, erect and test a giant 84-foot-diameter radar tracking antenna, simiar to this one, has been announced by Goodyear Aerospace Corp. of Akron, Ohio.

First U.S. 'Shopping Park' Built at Grand Junction, Colo.

As a means of revitalizing its downtown area (a common community problem these days), Grand Junction, Colo., has used a scenic, but still practical, approach, according to the Chamber of Commerce of the United States.

The city happens to be a retail trade center. So with the particular nature of the community in mind, municipal and business leaders in the area decided to do something for those who sustain their economy—the retail customer. The results: the nation's first Shopping Park.

• • • •

THE SHOPPING PARK, a combination of recreation area and thoroughfare, was constructed over a four-block stretch in the heart of the shopping district. It features flower beds, transplanted trees, shaded benches, telephones and a two-lane roadway that winds serpent-like through the center of the greenery.

The curves in the automobile roadway enabled the leaders of "Operation Foresight" to establish several conveniently situated parking bays along the route.

As a result, what was once a typical, treeless street along a shopping center is now an attractive area of beauty and comfort that hopefully should make the customers want to come back to Grand Junction again and again.

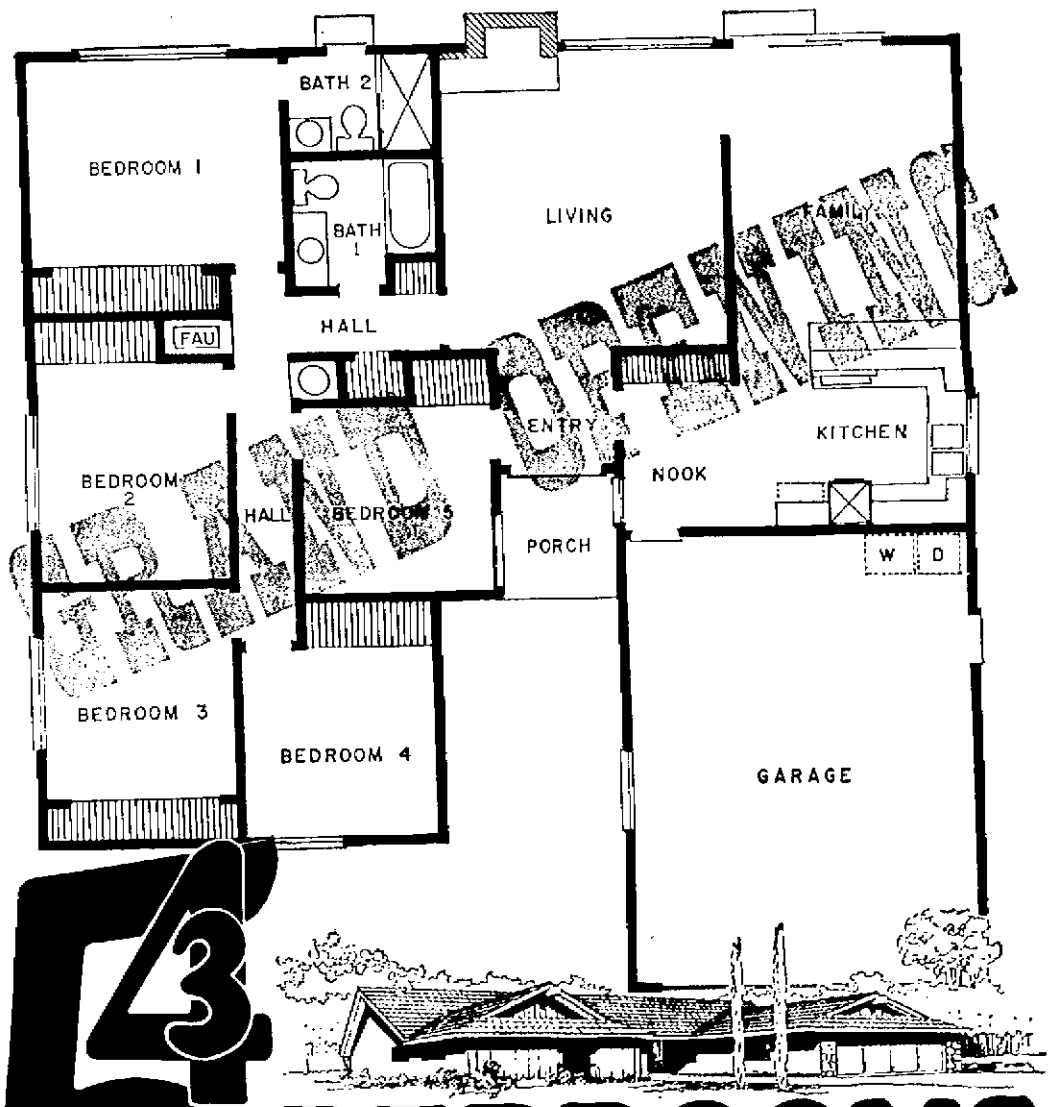

• • • •

ARCHITECTS of "Operation Foresight" contend that their practical, utilitarian plan for beautifying their downtown area can be adapted, in some way or other, by almost any community which has business and municipal leaders with imagination and initiative.

The cost? The Shopping Park was part of a $569,000 program of modernization for 24 downtown blocks in Grand Junction. It was financed by the merchants themselves, bond issues, and, to a limited extent, by the city. No federal or state funds were requested or received.

Bedroom Now Regarded As Vital Activity Center

A generation ago, the bedroom was considered a private sleeping area and its door usually was closed when visitors dropped in.

Today, however, many families have come to regard it as a place to work and relax as well as sleep, and in recent years interest in improving the decor of this room has reached a peak.

In many homes, reports the American Home Improvement Institute, national clearing house for design and building information, special areas are being set aside in bedrooms for sewing centers, study corners, hobby alcoves and even such recreational pursuits as television viewing or ping pong.

Because of this trend, many U.S. families are taking steps to update the decor of the bedroom.

* * * *

HOWEVER, unlike the decorating procedure for other rooms in the house, a focal point need never be created (as a wall of shelves or a piece of sculpture, might be the central fixture in a living room).

The bed, because of its size, is the bedroom's natural focal point, and the motif of the bedspread and headboard set the style for the entire room.

Since bedspreads are available in a wide variety of patterns, colors and materials, it's best to start planning the decor with the design of the headboard.

The "in" style today is a headboard that extends upward to the ceiling above the bed, in much the same way as canopies once were used.

* * * *

Similar decorative tie-ins can be achieved by repeating the bedspread material in draperies. Floor and walls in contrasting colors will further dramatize the bed as the room's focal point.

To clean any plumbing fixture, slice up a half bar of naphtha-based soap in quart of hot water. Add two tablespoons of paint-thinner or dry-cleaning solvent. Apply to the fixture with a stiff-bristled brush to remove most simple stains.

Growing Room Is Popular Showcase Home Feature

An expandable area, builder Bill Krueger calls "growing room," is one of the popular features of Showcase homes with visitors and buyers, according to Frank McFarland, sales agent.

Large square footage and a combination bedroom and sitting room attract buyers who are able to purchase a custom-built home for as low as $25,950 with down payments from 5%, including costs. The growing area is designed to be finished to the buyer's needs. It can be made into a large master bedroom suite, rumpus room, hobby or play room, or several bedrooms.

* * * *

THE CHOICE of interior and exterior materials, colors and textures offered at Showcase homes, in Westminster, makes them truly custom homes with no two alike in a Showcase community. The homes are arranged and located on the building sites offering a variety of set-backs and facings to keep from the "row-housing" look.

There are seven basic floor plans offering from three to six bedrooms and up to three bathrooms. All utilities have been placed underground at Showcase.

A variety of custom amenities, such as a swimming pool, custom landscaping or automatic garage door openers, may be installed and included in the first turst deed, according to Bill Krueger.

Model homes are open at Brookhurst and Hazard in Westminster.

CAISSON FOR OFFSHORE OIL DRILLING TOWER
Sixty-ton steel caisson, 45 feet long, is first of 10 similar 18-foot diameter sections of legs for an offshore drilling tower being fabricated at U. S. Steel's American Bridge Division plant, Los Angeles, for Standard Oil Co. of California, Western Operations, Inc., and Richfield Oil Co. Pipes inside leg section are pile sleeves through which pipe pilings will be driven and grouted when the platform is installed on location. When completed, the twin-derrick platform will have a deck measuring about 120 feet square and a total height of nearly 190 feet with 61 feet above the waterline. The big drilling unit, named "Hope," will be located three miles off the California coast near Summerland and is scheduled for assembly at Los Angeles Harbor this summer.

Buffums' to Build in Newport Center

Buffums' seventh Southern California store will be established in Newport Center a vast $20 million regional shopping complex planned for the Irvine Ranch in Orange County.

Construction will begin this summer on the new $1.3 million department store with completion scheduled for the fall of next year. The 54,000 sq. ft. store will feature quality fashions for the entire family and a restaurant for 100 patrons.

STORE NO. 7 FOR BUFFUMS' . . . $1.3 Million Unit in Newport Center

"Buffums' traditions of high quality and fashionable merchandise in a store designed to delight the shopper will be continued in our Newport Center store," Vaile G. Young, president of the pioneer Southern California merchandising firm, stated.

* * * *

"THE UNPRECEDENTED growth of Orange County and the coastal communities established our confidence in the continued economic progress of the Orange Coast area."

As planned, designed and engineered by Welton Becket and Associates, master planners for the entire Newport shopping center, the split level store on the south end of the mall will employ a dark customized split block on the lower level which will contrast with a lighter shade on the upper floor.

Designers Say They Can Save Time and Money

NEW YORK (UPI) — Every now and then in the life of the homeowner comes the big question. Should a professional designer be called in to deal with the decorating?

Naturally, professional designers thing the answer is yes. And they have a number of reasons to buttress their position.

"The truth is, the facts speak for themselves," says La Verne Neil, an interiors expert for the S. M. Hexter Co., of Cleveland. "A designer's assistance will save money and time and insure that your personality is expressed in the best of taste."

* * * *

TIME IS saved, she says, because a professional can go to the heart of the problem. He knows where to find that elusive gilded bird cage or just the right silk for draperies. He knows the field and doesn't waste hours searching for furniture or materials.

"Experience has taught the designer tricks of the trade which the average person is unaware of," says Miss Neil. "He knows, for example, where the best resources are and what fabrics and furniture function best for each particular instance."

A professional also has a knack with saving money. For one thing, says Miss Neil, he is not apt to fall prey to bargains that in the end, are nothing more than a mistake.

WHY DO THEY DO IT?

Job-Holding Wives and Mothers Seek Best for Families and Selves

The working wife and mother, like her pioneer forebearers, is seeking the best the world has to offer for her family and herself. It may not be the easiest way to live, but it has distinct advantages, according to a current report.

Findings include that she says she works for the money mostly, but also for stimulation and her main problem is finding time enough for everything that must be done. Shes' among 16,000,000 working women, according to the current issue of Changing Times magazine.

To survey working wives and mothers in 35 states the monthly publication joined with the Bureau of Laundry and Dry Cleaning and queried a random sample of about 600.

* * * *

ASKED WHY they work, a solid 88% listed a financial consideration first. The three most frequent were: to provide better living for the family; provide for the children's education; and, to get out of debt.

Even those working for financial consideration revealed a secondary interest when asked in another question "why do women like to work outside the home?" Replies were heavily weighted with such comments as "it keeps them better informed" or "it keeps them young."

Although 63% of the wives report they are able to get the necessary tasks done at home with a feeling of satisfaction and a minimum of fatigue, they candidly admit that they don't have enough time.

* * * *

HALF OF THOSE SURVEYED think "schools should place more emphasis on the dual role of a working wife or mother," and they readily say why: "Schools are unrealistic in educating girls — most women are trained for one role or the other, but never for both." Almost unanimously, they think girls should be taught to budget time as part of their education.

Lacking the extra hours, how do they cope? More than half report that they get help from husbands and children. In addition, they use an average of three outside services apiece. Most common are dry cleaning and laundry, home delivery of dairy products, and beauty parlors.

The majority regard the wife's salary as family income, to be applied where it is needed most.

'BIG DISH' FOR ALASKA
A multimillion-dollar contract to fabricate, erect and test a giant 84-foot-diameter radar tracking antenna, simiar to this one, has been announced by Goodyear Aerospace Corp. of Akron, Ohio.

First U.S. 'Shopping Park' Built at Grand Junction, Colo.

As a means of revitalizing its downtown area (a common community problem these days), Grand Junction, Colo., has used a scenic, but still practical, approach, according to the Chamber of Commerce of the United States.

The city happens to be a retail trade center. So with the particular nature of the community in mind, municipal and business leaders in the area decided to do something for those who sustain their economy—the retail customer. The results: the nation's first Shopping Park.

* * * *

THE SHOPPING PARK, a combination of recreation area and thoroughfare, was constructed over a four-block stretch in the heart of the shopping district. It features flower beds, transplanted trees, shaded benches, telephones and a two-lane roadway that winds serpent-like through the center of the greenery.

The curves in the automobile roadway enabled the leaders of "Operation Foresight" to establish several conveniently situated parking bays along the route.

As a result, what was once a typical, treeless street along a shopping center is now an attractive area of beauty and comfort that hopefully should make the customers want to come back to Grand Junction again and again.

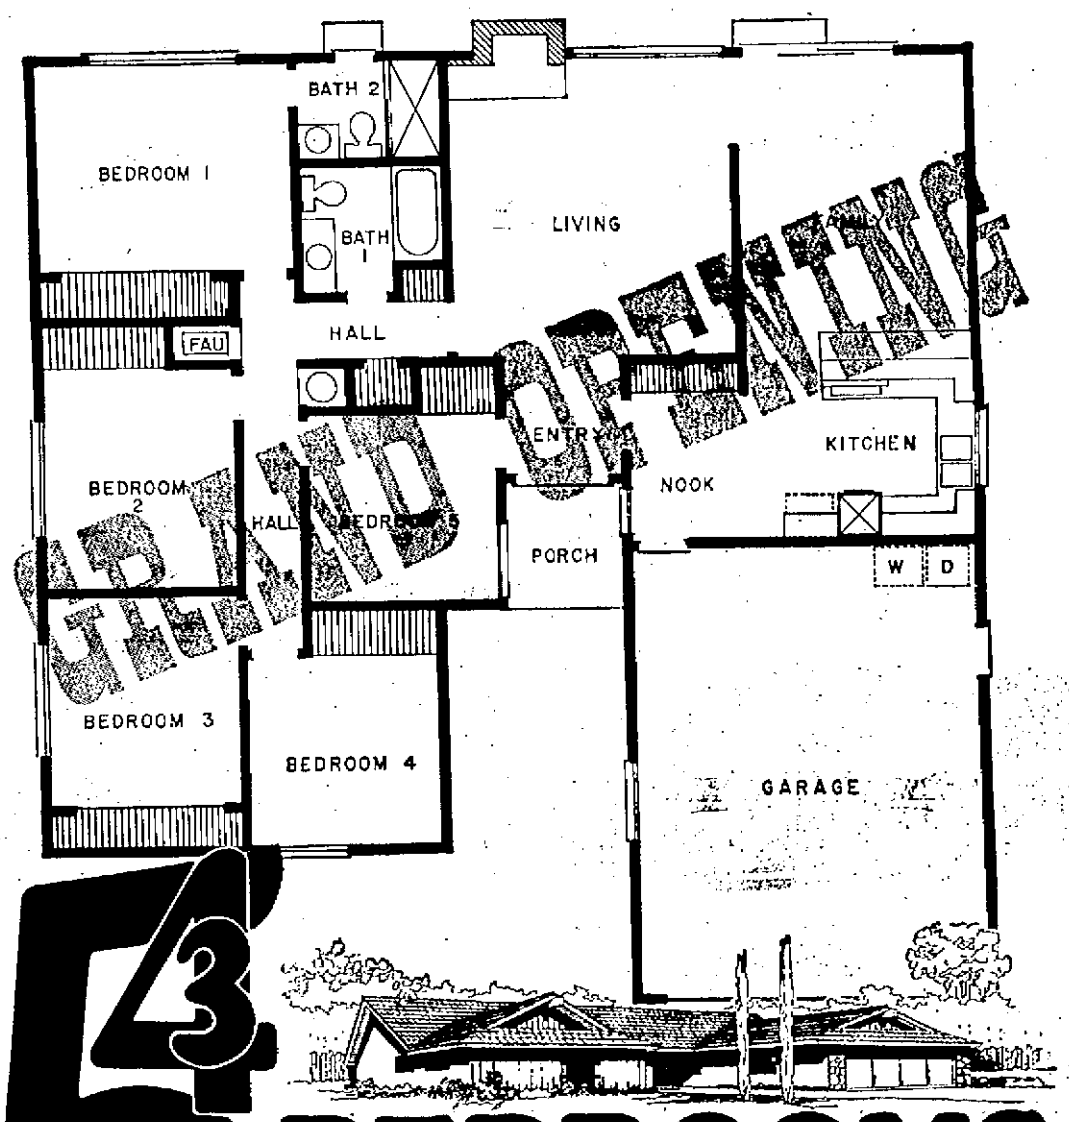

* * * *

ARCHITECTS of "Operation Foresight" contend that their practical, utilitarian plan for beautifying their downtown area can be adapted, in some way or other, by almost any community which has business and municipal leaders with imagination and initiative.

The cost? The Shopping Park was part of a $569,000 program of modernization for 24 downtown blocks in Grand Junction. It was financed by the merchants themselves, bond issues, and, to a limited extent, by the city. No federal or state funds were requested or received.

Neptune Estates will hold their third week of the grand opening this weekend with a wide variety of plans and exteriors available at the near the beach location.

Opening week proved popular especially with the women for the kitchen and other features of the homes have been designed with women in mind, the developers, Lagerlof Construction Co. pointed out.

Priced from $27,600 to $32,500 the buyers have a selection of both one and two-story homes with two, three, four and five-bedroom plans. Featured are spacious family rooms, nyloon wall-to-wall carpet, front landscaping, decorator fireplaces, and deluxe cooking equipment.

Buyers may occupy the homes for as little as $795 down. The walled development is about four miles from Huntington Beach State Beach.

To reach the site from the Long Beach or Santa Monica areas, take the San Diego Freeway to the Hwy. 39 (Beach Blvd.) off ramp. Then take 39 south to Warner Avenue. Go left to Brookhurst and then south again to Garfield and the homes.

OCEAN CLOSE BY . . . To Newport West Home

For Ocean Enthusiasts

"One of the most popular features at Newport West," says sales manager John Stewart, "is the garage boat door, which allows easy access to back-yard storage for small boats."

Newport West is located within walking distance to the ocean and many buyers are boating and beach enthusiasts. The homes are just off Pacific Coast Hwy. and Brookhurst Avenue in Huntington Beach. The residential community of one, two-story and split-level homes, however, is just across the city line from Newport Beach. Residents of the development enjoy all of the shopping centers and restaurants of the resort town.

PRICES BEGIN at $24,950 with no-down VA, low-down FHA terms or conventional financing. Three and four-bedroom models are offered with up to three baths. Each of the master bedrooms has its own spacious bath and dressing room.

Kitchens come complete with electric ovens and counter-top ranges, range hood with fan and light, dishwasher, disposal, built-in snack bars.

Premium Fun Area in Premier Homes

BUILT-IN VANITY . . . A Premier Bedroom

By offering a premium fun area—a fully-finished play room—in some of its models, Premier Homes in Huntington Beach have been able to respond to current buyer preference for a flexible area in the home, says Frank McFarland, sales agent.

The realtor pointed out that every family has different needs according to the age of children and their varying interests and hobbies. Instead of arbitrarily dividing up interior space, Premier designers offered a 17 x 22-ft. room, with a tiled floor and fully-finished walls, which the homebuyer may use in any way that suits his needs.

* * * *

PREMIER OFFERS immediate move-in on four-bedrooms, two-bath homes, with family room and fun area for $26,500. The homes feature a "total convenience" Medallion kitchen.

Prices include fenced rear yard and front landscaping. A one-year home warranty is given.

Visitors may take San Diego Freeway to Hwy. 39, and drive south to Terry St., then left to the model homes.

Title Officer of Miami Company Is G.G. Speaker

Ray E. Peterson, chief title officer for American Title Insurance Company of Miami, will speak to members of the Garden Grove Board of Realtors at their Tuesday breakfast meeting at Cape Cod House.

Peterson was associated with Commonwealth Land Title Company in Los Angeles before that company was merged with American Title Insurance.

His topic will be "Footnotes To Land Title Laws," according to program chairman Bob Flanagan.

Spacious Step-Down Rumpus Room Is Orangewood Feature

Of the several exclusive features offered by the new homes in Orangewood, the room is by far the most popular, according to Don Wilson, president of Don Wilson Builders.

In this new development, Wilson has offered many features for the first time in the Cypress area. Split and tri-level models are exclusively found in the Orangewood development in this area, and the underground utilities are also an Orangewood first. But, says Wilson, of all these exclusive features, the step down rumpus room is the outstanding one, popular with families for its convenience.

* * * *

THE tri-level model, with its five bedrooms and two custom designed baths proved an instant success with large families. Designed for the most efficient use of living space, all the rooms are large, yet the tri-level planning is compact enough to save the housewife many steps. An entry hall and separate living room combine to assure the particular homemaker of an area that's always ready for company. With years of successful home building to his credit, Mr. Wilson has constructed in each Orangewood kitchen the answer to all the modern demands of efficient meal preparation—yet retained the old fashioned look of inviting warmth and charm.

Cheerful family snack bars, and generously proportioned dining areas offer the final touch of spaciousness, ideal for relaxing mealtimes.

Furnished models are now open, showing three, four and five bedrooms in one and two-story homes, priced from $24,950 and only $995 down. Drive on the Garden Grove Freeway to Knott Avenue, then north to Orangewood.

Priced from $23,850, models are available with VA no-down and FHA financing. Glen Cove Homes are located on Ellis between Beach Boulevard and Brookhurst Avenue just north of Huntington Beach in Fountain Valley. Cedarglen is adjacent to the new South Coast Shopping Plaza on Newport Boulevard in Costa Mesa.

Rossmoor Townhouses Still Offer Big Range of Models

With approximately 170 homes already sold at Rossmoor Townhouses, Jaymarc Corp., developers report that home buyers still have a final choice from a complete selection of floor plans and exterior elevations. The $4 million community is located adjacent to the Rossmoor Shopping and Business Center on Los Alamitos Boulevard.

Priced from $22,950 to $23,950, these three and four-bedroom homes feature wall-to-wall nylon carpeting carports; private patios; breakfast bars; built-in vanities. Special luxury is found in the all-electric kitchens.

* * * *

RECREATIONAL facilities provide residents with swimming, putting greens, shuffleboard courts, barbecue pits and a private, modern clubhouse. Homeowners enjoy Southern California leisure living with accessibility to almost every recreational facility, either on the grounds or within short driving distance. All exterior maintenance is taken care of by a professional staff.

Rossmoor Townhouses may be reached from Long Beach via the San Diego Freeway or Seventh Street to the Los Alamitos-Bay Blvds. exit, then right (north) two blocks on Los Alamitos Boulevard.

Only $95 Down for Big Rainbow Homes

Elegant one and two-story Rainbow Homes, in West Anaheim, can be purchased for only $95 down plus costs, a spokesman for the four-bedroom, two and two-and-a-half-bath homes reports. Priced from $26,900 and $27,500, the dwellings offer an abundance of features in functional floor plans that include family rooms.

Architecturally varied and available in many styles, Rainbow Homes have exteriors with masonry, used brick planters, shake shingle roofs, special bandsaw detail and spacious two-car garages large enough for hobby or work rooms.

WALL-TO-WALL carpeting of 100% continuous filament nylon, redwood fencing that completely encloses rear and side yards and includes a gate; all-electric kitchens all represent important savings for new homeowners. There are easy-to-maintain counter tops and an abundance of kitchen cabinets, separate service and utility rooms, ash paneling in living rooms, ash mantels over massive fireplaces, and baths are equipped with ceramic tiled showers, pullmans and mirrors with medicine cabinets.

There are 40-gallon water heaters, 70,000 BTU forced-air furnaces, weatherstripped doors, used brick planters, sliding glass doors, folding wardrobe doors and television outlets.

Models are open on Ball Road at Hwy. 39, reached from Long Beach by way of Seventh St. (Garden Grove Blvd.) or Katella to Hwy. 39, north to Ball Road, then left to the homes.

DWAYNE L. OLSON

To Hunsaker Sales Post

Dwayne L. Olson has been named general sales manager of the residential division of S. V. Hunsaker & Sons Inc.

Olson's new duties include the recruiting and training of sales personnel, and heading up the escrow department.

Under Olson's guidance are some 40 salesmen at 10 developments in Azusa, Covina, Duarte, El Toro, Fountain Valley, La Puente, Newhall, Stanton, Ventura and West Covina.

Board to See Film

The Title Insurance and Trust Company's new motion picture, "Heritage," will be shown to members of the Compton-Lynwood Board of Realtors at 8 a.m. Monday, Feb. 28, during their sales clinic session.

The meeting is to be held at the Board Annex, 401 N. Bullis Road.

College Park's Preview Today

College Park Homes, in Seal Beach, offers the public a first showing of its model homes today, according to Mark Bader, project sales manager for S & S Construction Co., builders-developers of the community.

Construction on the models was completed last week and, though not yet furnished, they are being opened for preview inspection in response to the great interest shown by the public. This interest is reflected in nearly $2 million in sales recorded during the past month—from plat plans, blueprints and renderings.

* * * *

THE THREE, FOUR and five-bedroom homes, priced from $26,250, are in one-story, two-story and tri-level models. One plan has a three-car garage—and all have either two or three baths.

Carpeting throughout of 100% continuous filament nylon is included in the purchase price, as are all built-ins, including dishwasher, in the all-electric kitchens.

Quality construction is used throughout, Bader reported. Walls and ceilings are of lath and plaster, roofs are insulated, driveways are of concrete and all utility wires are underground.

Qualified veterans may purchase with no money down and others are offered FHA and conventional terms.

To visit the models, take San Diego Freeway to Valley View turnoff. Go north and watch for entrance signs one block before Lampson.

Moderate Prices on Large Homes

Contending they are providing a good four-bedroom home at a three-bedroom price, Hartford Square Homes are finding sales climbing at the La Palma development, the developer reports.

Just a few minutes east of Lakewood, Hartford Square offers one model which contains 2,320 square feet plus a completely finished garage for $28,650. Both VA and FHA terms are offered. Fencing, lawns and sprinklers are included.

MESA REALTY, sales director, stresses many features are attracting the buyers. Walls and ceilings are fully insulated, oak flooring is provided in all rooms and on the stairs with parquet in the family room. Spacious garden kitchens are a big attraction with Westinghouse built ins.

The homes are priced from $26,325 to $30,850 and they range from three to five bedrooms with two or three baths.

Long Beach has a heart!

Women and TRAVEL
LONG BEACH 12, CALIF., SUNDAY, FEB. 20, 1966, SECTION W

Heart fund's their beat

By JOYCE CHRISTENSEN

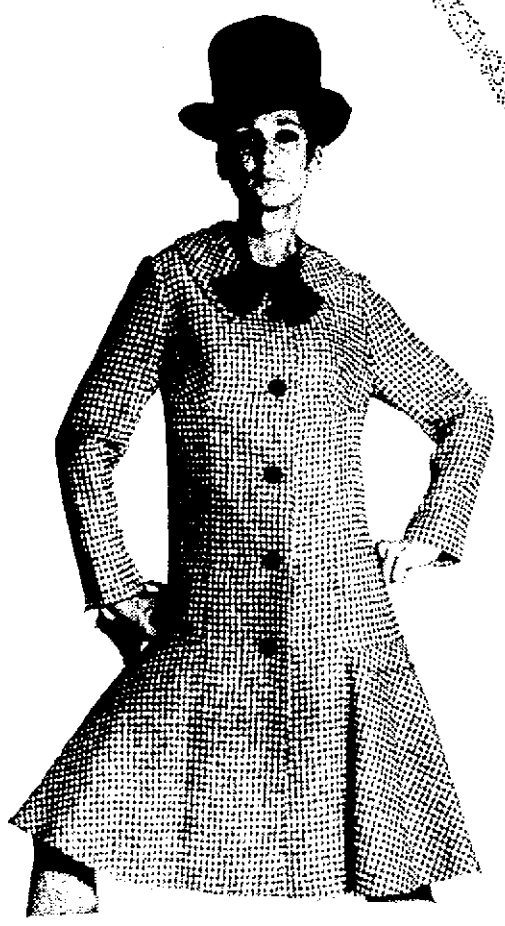

"Give from the heart to save a heart" is the plea being voiced as 2,000 volunteers prepare to knock on every door in Long Beach, Lakewood and Signal Hill on Heart Sunday, Feb. 27.

Results of their efforts will be used to aid research into the nation's No. 1 killer, heart and blood vessel diseases, according to this year's Heart Sunday chairman, Mrs. James Gray.

Prelude to the door-to-door campaign (also a fund-raiser) will be annual Heart Tea from 2 to 5 p.m. Wednesday in the home of Mr. and Mrs. Roger Dunn, 4247 Country Club Drive.

More than 400 invited guests will walk through a nine-foot heart to the party scene, where they will be greeted by Mrs. Earl Lundhigh, tea chairman, and members of Women's Heart League. Assisting will be Mmes. Glen Lucas, J. Roscoe Howell, Gus Lucking, Harry Newton, William Todd, Gus Walker, Harvey Hartzel and Miss Beatrice Hughes.

Of the $85,000 raised last year for Long Beach Heart Association, more than $50,000 is being spent on research both locally and nationally, including a student research grant at Long Beach State College. Remaining funds go to public and professional education, community services and administration.

CHIC CHECKS . . . a Travilla pacesetter, checking in for Children's Memorial Hospital Auxiliary fashion benefit to be staged Saturday. It's one of an exciting array of creations to be shown from the noted designer's spring collection.

"They serve God well,
Who serve his creatures."
—From "The Lady of La Garaye" by Norton

Day in, day out—12 months of every year—women volunteers of Children's Memorial Hospital Auxiliary go quietly about their work. They do a monumental job in raising funds to aid needy children requiring hospitalization.

They give the hospital a MINIMUM of $2,000 per month. Rarely does one read of the good, in terms of life-giving, this money does. But this year one dramatic, heart-warming example was followed closely by the press.

It was the story of little Butt Siu Wah, 8-year-old Chinese girl from Hong Kong who was brought here for exceedingly delicate heart surgery last month. The auxiliary paid all her hospital bills.

Sue, as she was promptly labeled, will be special guest of honor at the auxiliary's annual haute couture fashion show next Saturday at International Ballroom, Lafayette Hotel. Winsome, almond-eyed and now skipping along the road to recovery, Sue will share honors with famed, handsome Travilla, West Coast couturier.

Travilla will again bring one of the most exciting fashion events of the season to Long Beach. Owner of his own firm, he not only designs for top socialites of the country, but for top stars of Hollywood. Among the best-dressed actresses who have worn his creations are Lauren Bacall, Debbie Reynolds, Greer Garson and Joanne Woodward.

His couturier collection of resort and spring fashions will be shown Saturday under sponsorship of Schick's of Long Beach.

Tickets are available at the auxiliary's gift shop at the hospital or from any member. Mrs. Hubert S. Matthews is chairman. Assisting her are Mmes. John Kelly, Joseph K. Kellogg, Leland Drollinger, Neville R. McCoy, John E. Roggeveen, Clarence W. Poole, Leo McCreary (the latter two in charge of tickets and reservations), Charles Dickie, Bert Bond, Lloyd Greeno, Carl R. Bishop and Gerald De-Freece.

Any woman whose heartbeat quickens with the thrill of high fashion and the snappy-paced precision of a top-notch, professionally produced fashion extravaganza, will enjoy Saturday's show.

Best of all, attendance will insure help for many children in time of direct need.

FIRST THOUGHTS are of steps, then of insteps when a door-to-door drive is in offing. So it's off to the shoe salon for Mrs. James Gray (left), chairman of Heart Sunday Feb. 27, and one of her co-walkers, Mrs. Scott Jones. Salesman Ben La Scala sets their feet at ease.

Little Chinese Sue 'Good' After Heart Surgery

Little Sue Is Thinking Well of Us in Chinese

By BEN ZINSER

Butt Siu Wah, 8-year-old Chinese girl of Hong Kong, knows what it is to have a heart.

Californians, she has learned, are all heart.

Her own heart, unfortunately, will never be normal.

"Sue," as she is affectionately known here, lies in Memorial Hospital of Long Beach, unaware of what lies in store for her.

But she is well aware that Long Beach doctors, the Children's Memorial Hospital Auxiliary and SUE WAS a blue-baby at birth, victim of a heart defect. The extent of the defect had not been fully known in Hong Kong. Doctors at Queen Mary Hospital there recommended that Sue be brought to the United States for further studies.

THE NORMAL heart pumps blood into two major vessels—the aorta, the body's great artery, and the pulmonary artery, that which conveys blood from the heart to the lungs to pick up oxygen.

This maneuver shunts blood back into the lungs to increase the blood's oxygen supply.

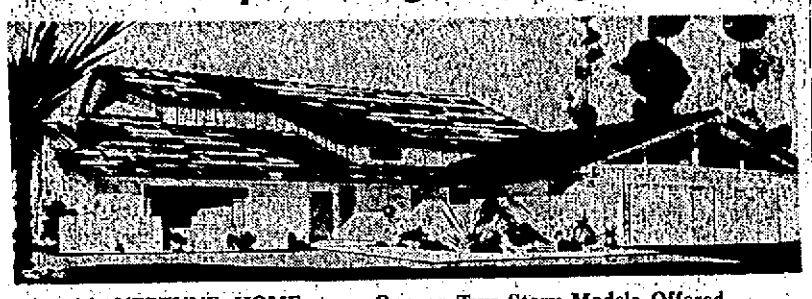

The subclavian artery ordinarily carries blood to the arm and shoulder. Diversion of this vessel will create no problem since auxiliary circulation to the arm is adequate.

Doctors call Sue's operation "palliative."

WILD WAVES SAY

February dull month? Just try to prove it!

By Iola Masterson
I, P-T Society Editor

AS A RULE, February seems like a dull month. But this has turned into a kind of sing-along with Mitch swinger.

We've had thunder, lightning, rain, hail, parties of all shapes and sizes—from truly high falutin' to downright zany—and people traveling off in all directions.

Take the case of Bette and Bill Kedinger's a-go-go party. Guests were asked to wear the most informal and/or farthest out outfits in their wardrobes. Boots, slacks, hiphuggers or capris were a must for the women. ANOTHER PARTY that went whimsical was Bill and Nada Davis' old-time box dinner social at their home, 1050 El Mirador, for Belmont Shore Optimists and their wives. Old-fashioned signs designated different rooms of the house as Pool Hall, Saloon, Dance Hall and Gambling Room.

All the women brought box lunches which were bought by the men with profits going to the auxiliary's good projects. The saloon proceeds also went into the fund and, needless to say, it was a profitable night.

One smarty, Lillian (Mrs. Jess) Mackey came early and smuggled in a card table, bud vase, two fresh roses, linen table cloth and napkins, candleholder and candle. Ed Hoener happened to be the lucky gent who bought her box lunch for $5 and thus was privileged to share midnight dinner with her. In addition to food, she brought wine and crystal glasses to serve it in. While the rest of the 80 sat around on the floor, here and there, Lillian and Ed dined in comparative splendor.

MOST SOPHISTICATED setting and party of the year was the preview cocktail and dinner party for opening of International Towers. It was not only high hat, it was way up—on the 31st floor of our newest, most magnificent skyline building.

Hosts were owner Henry Sassoon and his wife, Ines, who greeted throngs of dignitaries, socialites and community leaders.

Receiving with the Sassoons were Carl Troedsson, the building's architect, Jack Pekar, construction engineer, and Madeline and Phiroze Nazir (she is director of public relations for this tallest residential structure west of the Mississippi).

The view from every apartment visited that night was magnificent. A few in the crowd of local and from-elsewhere notables were Mr. and Mrs. Friedrich Waller, consul general from Austria; Mr. and Mrs. Bengt Hofvander, Swedish trade delegate; Oswald Pearson, representing Gov. Pat Brown from Sacramento; Rear Adm. Carlton and Mrs. Jones and guests Mr. and Mrs. Martin Chesebro, and Mme. Simone Bouvet.

NOW FOR people who are going every which way. What's bound to be an exciting trip—one that could be literally a monumental journey—began this past week for "Bix" and Betty Bixby and Margaret and Jack Graye.

They flew away Thursday on the LA County Museum sponsored South American tour. First they'll do the west coast — Ecuador, Peru and Chile, then across the Chilean lake country into Argentina. To follow will be Brazil, Uruguay and, finally, Guatamala in Central America before month-long travels end.

Their trail will cut through jungles hot, mountains cold (to 14,000 foot altitudes), so packing was a real challenge. Guarding what they didn't take, maybe even now wish they had, are members of their respective families.

Prior to departure, Bixbys hoisted the cocktail flag and hosted a happy hour party for sailing friends from all around the area. Busy people—that's not all they've been up to in one week. Read on.

FORMAL GOWNS and tuxedos have been worn by many at least once this week, by several almost nightly. What's more, so many of the same names keep popping up you wonder how they've managed the party pace.

Attending a swank dinner at Los Angeles Music Center Wednesday in honor of Lord Simon, chairman of the Port of London, England, of the International Association of Ports and Harbors were such influential LB citizens as (here we go again!) the Bixbys, the Reids (Bob and Mollie), Jim and Pat Craig, Bill and Helen Harrington, Bud and Donna Ridings and, of course, Mayor Edwin Wade and Mary.

APPROPOS of nothing previously discussed here today (honest!) is the story Curtyne Driscoll told me during a yarn-swapping, gossip-exchanging visit. She was recalling a convention she and husband, Gene, had attended one time.

Anyhow, during a cocktail party for the whole group on first night of conclave one of the wives had many, many too many martinis. It was subject of much conversation next day and conjecture on whether or not she'd have nerve enough to show up at the next cocktail gathering. She did.

With magnificent timing, she swept into the room late and announced with a flourish: "I've just discovered my problem. I'm allergic to Fostoria!"

BIG TURN-OUT of well-hatted (and many smartly non-hatted) women for Downtown Kiwanis Club's ladies day luncheon. Main attraction, besides having date with husbands, was guest the speaker-actress Rosemary DeCamp. She told of her experiences in Pakistan where she went with her husband, Superior Court Judge John A. Shidler, where he was sent in 1964 to serve in an advisory capacity for the U.S. government.

Rosemary said, "Americans have a passion for self-criticism," and went on to tell those assembled that we should not have, as far as she is concerned. "I came home with a raging case of patriotism," she continued. "We are the most honest, cleanest, certainly have the best sense of humor, of anybody in the world."

Don't know about that sense of humor part - - but certainly speaker Rosemary has one. Her talk, although serious, was vented with breezy and hilarious descriptions of experiences.

Cute-as-a-button Phyllis (Mrs. Harlan) Miller was chairwoman of day. Of note was fact that Dr. Dwight and Irene Sigworth were there noting their 46th wedding anniversary. During 42 years of marriage, they have been members of the Kiwanis family.

BEST NEWS of the week department: "Doing beautifully" is the report on Harry Buffum, who underwent surgery at Memorial Hospital Monday. No visitors except family for the time being, according to wife, Frances. At the rate he's improving, that's apt to be quite a temporary ruling by his medics. In other words, inquire first before you appear. However, anyone recuping loves to hear from friends, so drop him a card.

Popular Harry has so many friends that last suggestion of mine may put the post office practically back on pre-Christmas rush schedule.

Long Beach has a heart!

LONG BEACH 12, CALIF. SUNDAY, FEB. 20, 1966, SECTION W

Heart fund's their beat

By JOYCE CHRISTENSEN

"Give from the heart to save a heart" is the plea being voiced as 2,000 volunteers prepare to knock on every door in Long Beach, Lakewood and Signal Hill on Heart Sunday, Feb. 27.

Results of their efforts will be used to aid research into the nation's No. 1 killer, heart and blood vessel diseases, according to this year's Heart Sunday chairman, Mrs. James Gray.

Prelude to the door-to-door campaign (also a fund-raiser) will be annual Heart Tea from 2 to 5 p.m. Wednesday in the home of Mr. and Mrs. Roger Dunn, 4247 Country Club Drive.

More than 400 invited guests will walk through a nine-foot heart to the party scene, where they will be greeted by Mrs. Earl Lundhigh, tea chairman, and members of Women's Heart League. Assisting will be Mmes. Glen Lucas, J. Roscoe Howell, Gus Lueking, Harry Newton, William Todd, Gus Walker, Harvey Hartzel and Miss Beatrice Hughes.

Of the $85,000 raised last year for Long Beach Heart Association, more than $50,000 is being spent on research both locally and nationally, including a student research grant at Long Beach State College. Remaining funds go to public and professional education, community services and administration.

"They serve God well,
Who serve his creatures."
—From "The Lady of La Garaye" by Norton

Day in, day out—12 months of every year—women volunteers of Children's Memorial Hospital Auxiliary go quietly about their work. They do a monumental job in raising funds to aid needy children requiring hospitalization.

They give the hospital a MINIMUM of $2,000 per month. Rarely does one read of the good, in terms of life-giving, this money does. But this year one dramatic, heart-warming example was followed closely by the press.

It was the story of little Butt Siu Wah, 8-year-old Chinese girl from Hong Kong who was brought here for exceedingly delicate heart surgery last month. The auxiliary paid all her hospital bills.

Sue, as she was promptly labeled, will be special guest of honor at the auxiliary's annual haute couture fashion show next Saturday at International Ballroom, Lafayette Hotel. Winsome, almond-eyed and now skipping along the road to recovery, Sue will share honors with famed, handsome Travilla, West Coast couturier.

Travilla will again bring one of the most exciting fashion events of the season to Long Beach. Owner of his own firm, he not only designs for top socialites of the country, but for top stars of Hollywood. Among the best-dressed actresses who have worn his creations are Lauren Bacall, Debbie Reynolds, Greer Garson and Joanne Woodward.

His couturier collection of resort and spring fashions will be shown Saturday under sponsorship of Schick's of Long Beach.

Tickets are available at the auxiliary's gift shop at the hospital or from any member. Mrs. Hubert S. Matthews is chairman. Assisting her are Mmes. John Kelly, Joseph K. Kellogg, Leland Drollinger, Neville R. McCoy, John E. Roggeveen, Clarence W. Poole, Leo McCreary (the latter two in charge of tickets and reservations), Charles Dickie, Bert Bond, Lloyd Greeno, Carl R. Bishop and Gerald DeFreece.

Any woman whose heartbeat quickens with the thrill of high fashion and the snappy-paced precision of a top-notch, professionally produced fashion extravaganza, will enjoy Saturday's show.

Best of all, attendance will insure help for many children in time of direct need.

FIRST THOUGHTS are of steps, then of insteps when a door-to-door drive is in offing. So it's off to the shoe salon for Mrs. James Gray (left), chairman of Heart Sunday Feb. 27, and one of her co-walkers, Mrs. Scott Jones. Salesman Ben La Scala sets their feet at ease.

WILD WAVES SAY

February dull month? Just try to prove it!

By Iola Masterson
I, P-T Society Editor

AS A RULE, February seems like a dull month. But this has turned into a kind of sing-along with Mitch swinger.

We've had thunder, lightning, rain, hail, parties of all shapes and sizes—from truly high falutin' to downright zany—and people traveling off in all directions.

Take the case of Bette and Bill Kedinger's a-go-go party. Guests were asked to wear the most informal and/or farthest out outfits in their wardrobes. Boots, slacks, hiphuggers or capris were a must for the women. Inspiration for the shindig came from son Steven, 14, and his rock n' roll combo buddies, Rich Shultz, 14, Steve Paul, 15, and Pat Iliff, 13. In addition to such oldies as frug and watusi, they danced the sloop, the pony (like jumping rope), even the Batman—brand new on the scene.

Batman is pretty strictly interpretive with a lot of foot shuffling going on while the hands go through the motions of actions in the scenes on the TV hit.

Among merrymakers at the dance, cocktails and midnight breakfast affair were Noel and Alanna Calderia, Joe and Mary Lee Perkins, Lloyd and Ann Greeno, Ernie and Bev Lockwood, Bill and Kay Nichols, Ed and Florence Iliff, Ted and Ora Mae Webb.

BEST NEWS of the week department: "Doing beautifully" is the report on Harry Buffum, who underwent surgery at Memorial Hospital Monday. No visitors except family for the time being, according to wife, Frances. At the rate he's improving, that's apt to be quite a temporary ruling by his medics. In other words, inquire first before you appear. However, anyone recuping loves to hear from friends, so drop him a card.

Popular Harry has so many friends that last suggestion of mine may put the post office practically back on pre-Christmas rush schedule.

No, their garb is for none of these purposes. The exotically clad subjects weren't photographed at a Siberian slope, desert outpost nor Vietnam, but on a sunny Sunday afternoon less than 80 miles from Long Beach. They were just part of the crowd of 50,000 spectators attending a stock car race at Riverside International Raceway. Imaginations run rampant over what warm weather costumes racing fans will dream up for the June 17-19 Drag Championships at the Riverside track.

DEAR ABBY

Something worth saying

DEAR ABBY: I am almost 20, and for nearly five years I have carried one of your columns in my wallet. It is so worn I can scarcely read it, but it's done me more good than any single thing I've ever read. Please reprint it, Abby, for girls who need the advice as much today as I did then. I am enclosing the column. I am the girl who wrote the letter signed 'Mother Hater.'" Sincerely yours, "WISER NOW."

ABBY

DEAR "WISER": Yes, I'll reprint the column. And here it is:

April 9, 1961

"Dear Abby:

You will probably think I am a monster, but I am a girl of 14 and I hate my parents. Especially my mother. She is so old-fashioned it's pitiful. She wants to pick out all my clothes and tell me how to wear my hair. And I am the only girl in our crowd who doesn't wear eye make-up. She won't let me go in cars with boys. All she worries about is my reputation, and I swear I haven't done anything wrong. She is killing my chances to go with the right kids and be popular.

Don't tell me to talk it over with her because she will only give me a long lecture on this bull about how it's all for my 'own good.'

I would like to be able to tell her things but, heck, I don't want to get killed. I hate to sneak behind her back, but I have no choice. I sure wish I had a different mother. Mother Hater"

"Dear Mother Hater:

Girls your age, who feel as you do, regard all adults as the enemy. Perhaps a letter from a girl your age with a different point of view on the same subject will help you more than any advice I could offer:

* * * *

DEAR ABBY: I am 14 and think more girls my age should appreciate mothers who love them enough to care about what they do. I feel sorry for young girls my age whose mothers let them go in cars with boys, wear eye make-up and hairdos that are too old for them.

I am not allowed to go on car dates until I am 16. My mother helps me select my clothes. I wear no make-up to school, and only a little on special occasions. My mother has lived a lot longer than I have, and I have learned from experience that when she forbids me to do something she always has a good reason for it. I am thankful that I have a mother who loves me enough to raise me right. FOURTEEN AND LUCKY"

POLEY McCLINTOCK, DONNA DEE ANDERSON

Waring appeal timeless

A span of almost half a century separates Poley McClintock and Donna Dee Anderson, oldest and youngest members of Fred Waring's Pennsylvanians — but they are drawn together in starring roles in "The Magic Music of Fred Waring."

The musical extravaganza will come to Long Beach Municipal Auditorium for one performance only March 10 at 8:30 p.m. Drummer-comedian McClintock is the only original member—other than Waring—of the four-man combo which began almost 25 years ago in Tyrone, Pa. In that group, which was named "Banjazzatra," Waring's brother Tom was pianist and Waring and Fred Buck played banjos. The four sang every song in unison because "somebody had to carry the melody." McClintock had a fine tenor voice, but switched to a croak as part of his comedy performance.

* * * *

A NATIVE of Kansas City, Mo., Donna Dee, 18, has been playing the accordion since she was 6 years old. She played the clarinet and oboe in the high school band and while studying at the Conservatory of Music of the University of Missouri was concertmistress of the conservatory orchestra of 55 accordions.

Waring's Long Beach program will include popular classics, ballads, chorals, jazz, folk songs and new novelty tunes. The company of nearly 50 in the concert orchestra and choral group will be seen in solos, vignettes and production numbers.

Life in the old museum

By ELISE EMERY
Arts Page Editor

When Los Angeles County Museum of Art moved from its former quarters at 900 Exposition Blvd., to its impressive new buildings at 5905 Wilshire Blvd., the Exposition Park facility was renamed Los Angeles County Museum of Natural History.

Admission free and open daily except Mondays from 10 a.m. to 5 p.m., it has permanent and changing exhibits and a lively program of film, lecture and musical programs.

On March 30 the long-awaited Hall of South Pacific Ethnology will open with more than 400 rare, colorful objects from Melanesia, Polynesia, Indonesia and Micronesia.

The vigorous days of early California are recreated in five paintings by James Walker who visited Tejon Ranch and also painted at Santa Margarita Ranch near Oceanside in 1876-77. Born in England in 1819, he came to California in the early 1870s after living in Mexico City, New York, Washington, D.C., and South America.

* * * *

PAINTED during the time when the great cattle ranchos existed, Walker's pictures are noted for their authenticity. At the entrance to the California Hall of the museum are two canvases in a series depicting a cattle drive. Other paintings on loan from the California Historical Society are two portraits, "El Vaquero" (The Cowboy) and "El Patron" (The Master), and a striking portrayal of an old sport, "Roping the Bear."

Continuing exhibits are "The World and Its People," 300 photographs chosen from 150,000 entries in the Kodak International Salon, closing May 7; "Maps of the Americas: 1492-1822," closing March 27; "Ecce Homo," ruby carving of the head of Christ, closing March 6; "Pipes From Many Lands;" and "World of Jade."

* * * *

MEMBERS of Long Beach Art Association who have work in the current membership exhibition of Laguna Beach Art Association are Marie Bucher, Annabelle Clifton, Aline Thistlethwaite and Ralph Tarzian. The show hangs in the main and Moulton Galleries of Laguna Beach Art Gallery.

* * * *

TAKING NOTE of the fact that March is Children's Art Month, Bullock's Lakewood will show work by students at Madison Elementary School for the next four weeks.

Paintings by the uninhibited young artists are on view on the fourth floor children's level.

* * * *

TWO ARTISTS share the spotlight at Downey Museum of Art through March 25. They are the contemporary Spanish painter, Joan Joseph Tharrats and Hein Heckroth, Academy Award scenery and costume designer.

The museum is open Tuesdays through Saturdays from 1 to 5 p.m., Sundays from 2 to 5 p.m., and is closed Mondays.

BEATRICE SONNENBERG will speak to fellow members of Lakewood Artists Guild Thursday at 8 p.m. in Mayfair Park Clubhouse.

Abbado to direct L.A. Philharmonic

CLAUDIO ABBADO

ELMER BERNSTEIN

Claudio Abbado will conduct Los Angeles Philharmonic Orchestra in a Prokofieff, Stravinsky, Mendelssohn program next Sunday at 8 p.m. in the Concert Hall.

Members and guests of the Long Beach Auxiliary to Southern California Symphony Association will hear Elmer Bernstein discuss the program Thursday at a dinner salon in Petroleum Club, 3636 Linden Ave. The social hour will begin at 6:30 p.m.; dinner will be served at 7:30 o'clock.

* * * *

BERNSTEIN, conductor, concert piano virtuoso, lecturer and recording artist, has composed music for more than 60 major films ranging from heavy drama and Western epics to sophisticated comedy. He is first vice president of the Academy of Motion Picture Arts and Sciences and currently is scoring an hour documentary, "The Smithsonian Institution."

At the salon he will analyze Prokofieff's "Chout Ballet Suite," Stravinsky's "Firebird Suite," and Mendelssohn's "Symphony No. 4."

* * * *

THE CONCERT conductor, Abbado, made his debut with the Los Angeles Philharmonic in February, 1964. He began his musical studies at the Guiseppe Verdi Conservatory in Milan, later trained in Salsburg and Vienna and at Tanglewood won the Koussevitzky prize for conductors.

He has conducted major orchestras in Europe and Canada and, having won the Dimitri Mitropoulos Competition last April, was appointed assistant conductor of the New York Philharmonic.

Drawings are 'Best of Argentina'

By VIRGINIA LADDEY

The Simon Patrich Galleries at 853 N. La Cienega, Los Angeles, are an important addition to "gallery row." The policy of its proprietor is to bring to Los Angeles the paintings, sculptures, ceramics, drawings, and engravings of important Latin American artists.

The opening show, "Artforms — the Best of Argentina," includes 130 oils, 105 drawings, 7 sculptures and 20 ceramic pieces which continue in the large galleries through March 15. Featured are the artists of the Spartacus Movement: Sanchez, Diz, Mollari, and Sessano.

Sanchez dominates the group by the depth in which he is represented, the power of his paintings, and the influence of his style on the other artists. However, while cubistic paintings of massive, mute Indians may be something new in Argentina, to Southern Californians, familiar with the great Mexican muralists, these statements seem pretty dated.

SANCHEZ is freshest in his landscapes which are almost abstract designs. His technique of color pulled over color and his harmonious combination of them is exemplified in "Bamboo Field" with the shimmer of lavender gray, warm brown, and olive with black.

* * * *

THE MOST excellent and sensitive works are the drawings. One must look hard for them because the oils are so flamboyant. Martinez Howard has qualities like those of Cuevas and Dubuffet, simple economy of wash and line. Logarzo has the same intimacy of vision.

Fourteen artists are represented in all. The ceramics are most conventional as are the sculptures. The contrast between the callow, pretentious oils and the subtle sensitivity of the drawings and watercolors is puzzling.

This is an interesting show, both for itself, and for the similarities to and contrasts with the more familiar work of California, the United States, and Western Europe. Viewing hours are 10 a.m. to 6 p.m. daily except Monday when the galleries are open from 6 until 10 p.m.

Copland to arrive today

Aaron Copland will arrive at International Airport at 1:10 p.m. today and will come directly to Long Beach to conduct rehearsal for a concert of his compositions to be performed Tuesday night in Millikan High School.

Tickets are still available for the 8 p.m. program which will be played by the symphony orchestra, band, a cappella choir and opera workshop of Long Beach State College. Proceeds will benefit the college music scholarship fund.

* * * *

TICKETS may be ordered in advance from the LBSC music department and will be on sale at the Millikan box office before the performance. General admission is $2. A contribution of $10 will admit two to the sponsors' circle and to a champagne reception to honor Copland after the concert.

Monday, Copland will lecture from noon to 1 p.m. in the LBSC Little Theater and at 1 p.m. will conduct an open band rehearsal in the patio of the music building. He will meet informally with music majors from 2 to 3 p.m.

Young pianist on program

Cheryl Boyd, 13, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Robert C. Boyd, 2850 Heather Road, is one of four young artists to be featured on the "Piano and the Orchestra" program of Concerts for Youth to be played by the California Chamber Symphony Saturday at 2 p.m. in Royce Hall, UCLA. She will join Hilda Branka, 9, Jeffrey Burns and Mark Richman, both 16, in playing Bach's "Concerto for Four Pianos and Orchestra."

The program will be repeated at 2 p.m. March 12 in Mira Costa High School, Manhattan Beach.

Organist to entertain

Marian Speaker will play popular organ music in a public concert Wednesday at 7:30 p.m. at the Musi-Cal, 334 Pine Ave.

Serving now as a touring organist for the Wurlitzer Company, Mrs. Speaker has a background as organ and piano teacher, radio and television entertainer, and editor and arranger of classical, liturgical, standard and popular numbers.

Her program will consist of standards, classics, ballads, swing tunes, sacred music, new numbers and requests from the audience.

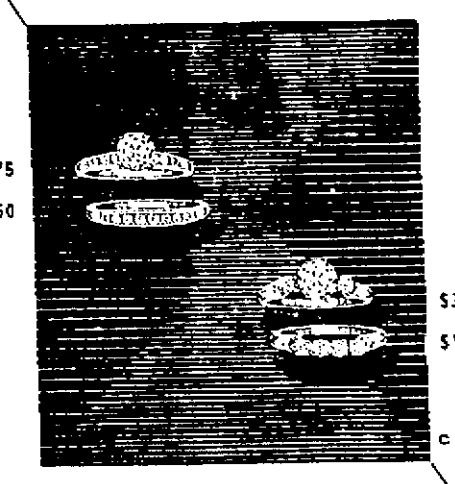

Tucker returns

Tenor Richard Tucker will make his first concert appearance in Los Angeles in more than a decade Saturday at 8:15 p.m. in Scottish Rite Masonic Auditorium, 4357 Wilshire Blvd. His program will include bal canto, arias, Israeli and Yiddish folk songs, Neapolitan songs and cantorial recitatives.

'Irma La Duce'

Lithe and luscious Juliet Prowse will sing and dance her way through "Irma La Douce" in a two-week run beginning Tuesday at Carousel Theater, West Covina.

DEAR ABBY

Something worth saying

ABBY

DEAR ABBY: I am almost 20, and for nearly five years I have carried one of your columns in my wallet. It is so worn I can scarcely read it, but it's done me more good than any single thing I've ever read. Please reprint it, Abby, for girls who need the advice as much today as I did then. I am enclosing the column. I am the girl who wrote the letter signed 'Mother Hater." Sincerely yours, "WISER NOW."

DEAR "WISER": Yes, I'll reprint the column. And here it is:

April 9, 1961

* * * *

"Dear Abby:

You will probably think I am a monster, but I am a girl of 14 and I hate my parents. Especially my mother. She is so old-fashioned it's pitiful. She wants to pick out all my clothes and tell me how to wear my hair. And I am the only girl in our crowd who doesn't wear eye make-up. She won't let me go in cars with boys. All she worries about is my reputation, and I swear I haven't done anything wrong. She is killing my chances to go with the right kids and be popular.

Don't tell me to talk it over with her because she will only give me a long lecture on this bull about how it's all for my 'own good.'

I would like to be able to tell her things but, heck, I don't want to get killed. I hate to sneak behind her back, but I have no choice. I sure wish I had a different mother. Mother Hater"

"Dear Mother Hater:

Girls your age, who feel as you do, regard all adults as the enemy. Perhaps a letter from a girl your age with a different point of view on the same subject will help you more than any advice I could offer:

* * * *

DEAR ABBY: I am 14 and think more girls my age should appreciate mothers who love them enough to care about what they do. I feel sorry for young girls my age whose mothers let them go in cars with boys, wear eye make-up and hair-dos that are too old for them.

I am not allowed to go on car dates until I am 16. My mother helps me select my clothes. I wear no make-up to school, and only a little on special occasions. My mother has lived a lot longer than I have, and I have learned from experience that when she forbids me to do something she always has a good reason for it. I am thankful that I have a mother who loves me enough to raise me right. FOURTEEN AND LUCKY"

Would-be medics preview careers at State

DR. F. M. KEATING, DENNIS COURTMARCHE, EILEEN NOTERMANN, JUDY MAYNARD . . . Their job—ready exhibits for Health Careers' Day Tuesday at Long Beach State College—open to junior, senior high students.

All little boys when they are six or seven have one ambition in life—they want to be policemen or firemen or astronauts. All little girls at the same age have a consuming desire to grow up and keep house.

When these future astronauts and would-be housewives reach 14, however, they begin to think in terms of other careers.

TO HELP all interested junior and senior high school students who think they might like to follow any form of medical career, Long Beach State College will conduct its third annual Health Careers Day Tuesday on campus.

Sponsored by Unit II of the California League for Nursing, the Los Angeles County Medical Association Auxiliary and the LBSC Nursing Department, the all-day program will include panel discussions, films and educational exhibits.

Registration, to begin at 9 a.m. in the campus theater, will be followed by a welcoming address by Dr. George Demos, dean of students. From 10 a.m. to noon students will attend two panel discussions of their choice.

A box lunch may be purchased on campus. In the afternoon until 3:30 p.m., films and educational exhibits will be offered.

THE PROFESSIONS or occupations represented in the program are nursing, (including military and vocational nursing), medicine, optometry, podiatry, veterinary medicine, health education, speech therapy, medical social work. Also, therapy (physical, inhalation and recreational), hospital administration, pharmacology, clinical psychology, medical librarianship, cardio pulmonary laboratory, x-ray technology and dietetics.

Panel discussions will concern educational preparation, salary, job opportunities in the various professions. Students will have an opportunity to join in a question - and - answer session.

Six films on nursing, medicine, therapy, hospitals, podiatry and health will be shown.

Chairman of the day is Miss Wanda L. Pentecost, LBSC Nursing Department. Other committee members are Marilyn Wullschleger, Hortense Darling, Annabelle Wyatt and Irene Carlson.

For additional information contact the LBSC Nursing Department.

A TRIBUTE IN LONG BEACH

Symphony benefactors will be honored at tea

At a tea next Sunday from 2 to 5 p.m. in the home of Dr. and Mrs. Alexander Kadvany, 3334 E. Fourth St., Long Beach Symphony Association and its guests will pay tribute to three persons who have advanced the cause of Long Beach Symphony Orchestra.

Two members of the Los Angeles County Music Commission, Howard Conrad and Mrs. Howard Coy, and Mrs. Herman H. Ridder, founder and now honorary chairman of the summer concerts committee, will be honored.

Kenneth F. Delene, chairman of the symphony contributions committee, is in charge of the tea. He is being assisted by Mrs. Earl J. Marks Jr., president of Symphony Association, and Mmes Ron Hughes, Burton Benwell, John H. Dale, Leroy Hyde, Miller Crane and Malcolm Todd.

MUSICIANS who will perform during the afternoon are Paula Goodman and Christine Compton, violinists; Eric Watilo and Judy Arndt, cellist; Pamela Murie, Jaclyn Marquart and Sylvia Emery, pianists; Mrs. Junko Bingo, soprano; and Lorin Emery, tenor.

The music commission is a 15-member body which accepts and reviews applications for county financial support, then makes recommendations to the Board of Supervisors. Commission members also attend concerts and musical productions in their supervisorial districts and report to the commission on community support through attendance and contributions. These reports influence budget recommendations.

Sue McDonald, for nine years manager of Long Beach Symphony Orchestra and now consultant on arts councils with the California Arts Commission, said:

* * * *

"ALL THREE persons to be honored next Sunday have given long service to the symphony. Mrs. Coy was one of the founders of the Long Beach Philharmonic Association from which the Long Beach Symphony developed. She was particularly active in development of the program of auditions for young musicians.

"Mr. Conrad for many years was the most successful member of the contributions committee and, as a member of the board of directors, interested many business firms and individuals in supporting the symphony. Both he and Mrs. Coy have dedicated their services to the orchestra through the County Music Commission.

* * * *

"TEN YEARS ago Mrs. Ridder served on the committee that brought Lauris Jones to Long Beach as permanent conductor of the orchestra and sparked development of the Long Beach Symphony from the Philharmonic Association.

"She is, of course, widely known as founder and first chairman of the Starlight Serenades. These concerts, which began in July, 1962 are among the most popular events of the Long Beach summer season.

"Mrs. Ridder has been one of the most successful of all fund-raisers for the symphony and has been personally responsible for much of the orchestra's growth in scope and prestige during recent years."

The bride wore an empire-styled gown of organza over peau de soie designed with a lace and bead-trimmed front panel. The lace-bordered train fell from the shoulders and a full veil was held by a flower petal headpiece.

* * * *

POLEY McCLINTOCK, DONNA DEE ANDERSON

Waring appeal timeless

A span of almost half a century separates Poley McClintock and Donna Dee Anderson, oldest and youngest members of Fred Waring's Pennsylvanians — but they are drawn together in starring roles in "The Magic Music of Fred Waring."

The musical extravaganza will come to Long Beach Municipal Auditorium for one performance only March 10 at 8:30 p.m. Drummer-comedian McClintock is the only original member—other than Waring—of the four-man combo which began almost 25 years ago in Tyrone, Pa. In that group, which was named "Banjazzatra," Waring's brother Tom was pianist and Waring and Fred Buck played banjos. The four sang every song in unison because "somebody had to carry the melody." McClintock had a fine tenor voice, but switched to a croak as part of his comedy performance.

* * * *

A NATIVE of Kansas City, Mo., Donna Dee, 18, has been playing the accordion since she was 6 years old. She played the clarinet and oboe in the high school band and while studying at the Conservatory of Music of the University of Missouri was concertmistress of the conservatory orchestra of 55 accordions.

Waring's Long Beach program will include popular classics, ballads, chorals, jazz, folk songs and new novelty tunes. The company of nearly 50 in the concert orchestra and choral group will be seen in solos, vignettes and production numbers.

Life in the old museum

By ELISE EMERY
Arts Page Editor

When Los Angeles County Museum of Art moved from its former quarters at 900 Exposition Blvd., to its impressive new buildings at 5905 Wilshire Blvd., the Exposition Park facility was renamed Los Angeles County Museum of Natural History.

Admission free and open daily except Mondays from 10 a.m. to 5 p.m., it has permanent and changing exhibits and a lively program of film, lecture and musical programs.

On March 30 the long-awaited Hall of South Pacific Ethnology will open with more than 400 rare, colorful objects from Melanesia, Polynesia, Indonesia and Micronesia.

The vigorous days of early California are recreated in five paintings by James Walker who visited Tejon Ranch and also painted at Santa Margarita Ranch near Oceanside in 1876-77. Born in England in 1819, he came to California in the early 1870s after living in Mexico City, New York, Washington, D.C., and South America.

* * * *

PAINTED during the time when the great cattle ranchos existed, Walker's pictures are noted for their authenticity. At the entrance to the California Hall of the museum are two canvases in a series depicting a cattle drive. Other paintings on loan from the California Historical Society are two portraits, "El Vaquero" (The Cowboy) and "El Patron" (The Master), and a striking portrayal of an old sport, "Roping the Bear."

Continuing exhibits are "The World and Its People," 300 photographs chosen from 150,000 entries in the Kodak International Salon, closing May 7; "Maps of the Americas: 1492-1822," closing March 27; "Ecce Homo," ruby carving of the head of Christ, closing March 6; "Pipes From Many Lands;" and "World of Jade."

* * * *

MEMBERS of Long Beach Art Association who have work in the current membership exhibition of Laguna Beach Art Association are Marie Bucher, Annabelle Clifton, Aline Thistlethwaite and Ralph Tarzian. The show hangs in the main and Moulton Galleries of Laguna Beach Art Gallery.

* * * *

TAKING NOTE of the fact that March is Children's Art Month, Bullock's Lakewood will show work by students at Madison Elementary School for the next four weeks.

Paintings by the uninhibited young artists are on view on the fourth floor children's level.

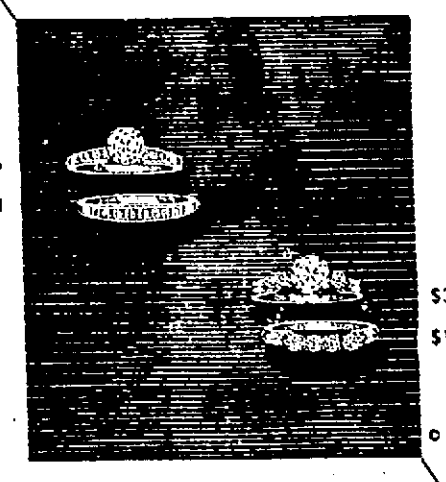

* * * *

TWO ARTISTS share the spotlight at Downey Museum of Art through March 25. They are the contemporary Spanish painter, Joan Joseph Tharrats and Hein Heckroth, Academy Award scenery and costume designer.

The museum is open Tuesdays through Saturdays from 1 to 5 p.m., Sundays from 2 to 5 p.m., and is closed Mondays.

BEATRICE SONNENBERG will speak to fellow members of Lakewood Artists Guild Thursday at 8 p.m. in Mayfair Park Clubhouse.

Abbado to direct L.A. Philharmonic

CLAUDIO ABBADO

ELMER BERNSTEIN

Claudio Abbado will conduct Los Angeles Philharmonic Orchestra in a Prokofieff, Stravinsky, Mendelssohn program next Sunday at 8 p.m. in the Concert Hall.

Members and guests of the Long Beach Auxiliary to Southern California Symphony Association will hear Elmer Bernstein discuss the program Thursday at a dinner salon in Petroleum Club, 3636 Linden Ave. The social hour will begin at 6:30 p.m.; dinner will be served at 7:30 o'clock.

* * * *

BERNSTEIN, conductor, concert piano virtuoso, lecturer and recording artist, has composed music for more than 60 major films ranging from heavy drama and Western epics to sophisticated comedy. He is first vice president of the Academy of Motion Picture Arts and Sciences and currently is scoring an hour documentary, "The Smithsonian Institution."

At the salon he will analyze Prokofieff's "Chout Ballet Suite," Stravinsky's "Firebird Suite," and Mendelssohn's "Symphony No. 4."

* * * *

THE CONCERT conductor, Abbado, made his debut with the Los Angeles Philharmonic in February, 1964. He began his musical studies at the Guiseppe Verdi Conservatory in Milan, later trained in Salsburg and Vienna and at Tanglewood won the Koussevitzky prize for conductors.

He has conducted major orchestras in Europe and Canada and, having won the Dimitri Mitropoulos Competition last April, was appointed assistant conductor of the New York Philharmonic.

Drawings are 'Best of Argentina'

By VIRGINIA LADDEY

The Simon Patrich Galleries at 853 N. La Cienega, Los Angeles, are an important addition to "gallery row." The policy of its proprietor is to bring to Los Angeles the paintings, sculptures, ceramics, drawings, and engravings of important Latin American artists.

The opening show, "Artforms — the Best of Argentina," includes 130 oils, 105 drawings, 7 sculptures and 20 ceramic pieces which continue in the large galleries through March 15. Featured are the artists of the Spartacus Movement: Sanchez, Diz, Mollari, and Sessano.

Sanchez dominates the group by the depth in which he is represented, the power of his paintings, and the influence of his style on the other artists. However, while cubistic paintings of massive, mute Indians may be something new in Argentina, to Southern Californians, familiar with the great Mexican muralists, these statements seem pretty dated.

SANCHEZ is freshest in his landscapes which are almost abstract designs. His technique of color pulled over color and his harmonious combination of them is exemplified in "Bamboo Field" with the shimmer of lavender gray, warm brown, and olive with black.

* * * *

THE MOST excellent and sensitive works are the drawings. One must look hard for them because the oils are so flamboyant. Martinez Howard has qualities like those of Cuevas and Dubuffet, simple economy of wash and line. Logarzo has the same intimacy of vision.

Fourteen artists are represented in all. The ceramics are most conventional as are the sculptures. The contrast between the callow, pretentious oils and the subtle sensitivity of the drawings and watercolors is puzzling.

This is an interesting show, both for itself, and for the similarities to and contrasts with the more familiar work of California, the United States, and Western Europe. Viewing hours are 10 a.m. to 6 p.m. daily except Monday when the galleries are open from 6 until 10 p.m.

Copland to arrive today

Aaron Copland will arrive at International Airport at 1:10 p.m. today and will come directly to Long Beach to conduct rehearsal for a concert of his compositions to be performed Tuesday night in Millikan High School.

Tickets are still available for the 8 p.m. program which will be played by the symphony orchestra, band, a cappella choir and opera workshop of Long Beach State College. Proceeds will benefit the college music scholarship fund.

* * * *

TICKETS may be ordered in advance from the LBSC music department and will be on sale at the Millikan box office before the performance. General admission is $2. A contribution of $10 will admit two to the sponsors' circle and to a champagne reception to honor Copland after the concert.

Monday, Copland will lecture from noon to 1 p.m. in the LBSC Little Theater and at 1 p.m. will conduct an open band rehearsal in the patio of the music building. He will meet informally with music majors from 2 to 3 p.m.

Young pianist on program

Cheryl Boyd, 13, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Robert C. Boyd, 2850 Heather Road, is one of four young artists to be featured on the "Piano and the Orchestra" program of Concerts for Youth to be played by the California Chamber Symphony Saturday at 2 p.m. in Royce Hall, UCLA. She will join Hilda Branka, 9, Jeffrey Burns and Mark Richman, both 16, in playing Bach's "Concerto for Four Pianos and Orchestra."

The program will be repeated at 2 p.m. March 12 in Mira Costa High School, Manhattan Beach.

'Irma La Duce'

Lithe and luscious Juliet Prowse will sing and dance her way through "Irma La Douce" in a two-week run beginning Tuesday at Carousel Theater, West Covina.

Organist to entertain

Marian Speaker will play popular organ music in a public concert Wednesday at 7:30 p.m. at the Musi-Cal, 334 Pine Ave.

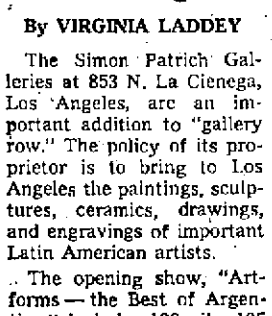

Serving now as a touring organist for the Wurlitzer Company, Mrs. Speaker has a background as organ and piano teacher, radio and television entertainer, and editor and arranger of classical, liturgical, standard and popular numbers.

Her program will consist of standards, classics, ballads, swing tunes, sacred music, new numbers and requests from the audience.

Tucker returns

Tenor Richard Tucker will make his first concert appearance in Los Angeles in more than a decade Saturday at 8:15 p.m. in Scottish Rite Masonic Auditorium, 4357 Wilshire Blvd. His program will include bal canto, arias, Israeli and Yiddish folk songs, Neapolitan songs and cantorial recitatives.

MAIS OUI, IT'S BALL TIME

Pinkie's plas to dine, dance

France—from the Eiffel tower to the Left Bank—will influence the mood of party-goers Saturday as Long Beach Community Hospital Auxiliary holds its ninth annual ball in French Room (where else?) of Lafayette Hotel.

The auxiliary's familiar mascot, Pinkie the puppet, will trade his clown cap for a beret, his pink and white costume for a paint smock, to play his role as host of Pinkie's Parisienne Ball.

NO-HOST cocktails at 6:30 p. m. will begin festivities, followed by dinner and an evening of dancing to Roger Bacon's orchestra.

The event will honor recently installed board members, led by Mrs. Hal Sleet, president, who with Mr. Sleet, Mrs. Kenneth Cummings, social chairman, and Mr. Cummings, will greet guests.

Colorful water color prints of French scenes will form program covers; gold cherubs and a profusion of flowers will enhance the room's already Paris feeling.

Walter Oliver, Community Hospital administrator, and Mrs. Oliver, along with staff physicians and their wives, board of trustees members and their wives will be among ball guests.

Miss Barden becomes bride

Four hundred guests attended nuptials Saturday in St. Anthony's Catholic Church which united Nancy Elizabeth Barden and Michael Lee Gratzke.

Parents of the couple are Mr. and Mrs. Donald V. Barden, 6231 Monita St., and Mr. and Mrs. Charles J. Gratzke, Torrance.

OTHER MEMBERS of the entourage were Marsha Jean Rosenoff, Janet Dee Robinson, Kathy Ray, Barbara Gratzke and Mrs. Michael Miller, bridesmaids; Donna Gratzke, junior bridesmaid; Ronald Axtell, David Sorenson, Al Lepper, William V. Barden, Thomas Gratzke, usher; and Jon Gratzke, ring bearer.

The newlyweds were honored at a reception in Petroleum Club before leaving for a honeymoon in San Francisco. Upon their return they will reside in Long Beach.

Both young persons attended Whittier College. She is a graduate of Wilson High School, he of North High School, Torrance. The new Mrs. Gratzke was presented at Assistance League's 1964 Debutante Ball.

Bid ended this great twosome

Here is a hand that broke up one of the great bridge teams of all time. North was the unlucky expert.

His opening no-trump was the sort of psychic b'd that is bound to make someone unhappy. This time it was his teammates.

West just happened to have a two spade overcall and no one can find any fault with South's jump to four hearts. West looked on the four heart bid as money from home which it was. He doubled and opened the king of spades.

The defense did not have any real problems because there really was no way for them to go wrong. Eventually, they collected two spades, three trumps, one diamond and three clubs for an 1,100 point penalty.

The game was total point team of four and while South was fit to be tied, North explained glibly that they would probably show a profit on the board because East and West were cold for six no-trump which would count 1,440 points.

* * * *

UNFORTUNATELY for our unlucky friend, it turned out that his East and West partners had arrived at six spades. South had opened the ace of hearts and continued the suit to give his partner a ruff.

It was even more unfortunate that the first South proceeded to criticize his partners for getting to the wrong slam. He might have been right in his criticism but this South remained mad. East and West became more and more angry and we really can't blame them.

DEAR MRS. MAYFIELD

Must learn by experience

DEAR MRS. MAYFIELD:

I'm in love with Hal but he doesn't know it. Oh, we're friends and all that but he's crazy about another girl and hasn't the slightest idea I think of him as anything but a "good buddy."

I wouldn't mind it so much except this girl who has him going is playing him for a sucker and I don't want to see Hal get hurt.

I know for a fact she wouldn't be going with him if she could get anyone else but I can't tell him that. He wouldn't believe it, anyway. He thinks she's the greatest.

Is there any way I can put him wise to this gal and make him see her for what she really is? GIG

DEAR GIG:

You might as well forget it. Hal has to take his own bumps and you can't do a thing about it. If you try to discredit his girl friend, you'll probably lose your "good buddy," so let it alone and keep on being his friend. Maybe someday he'll see what's been right in front of him all along. M.M.

* * * *

DEAR MRS. MAYFIELD:

I am 14 and I want to date. Not go steady or anything like that but go out with the gang occasionally.

All the other girls my age are dating but my parents tell me I'm too young.

Please give us your opinion. H.P.

DEAR H.P.:

Personally I can't see anything wrong with a 14-year-old going out with the gang—provided it is the kind of gang that behaves itself and enjoys such activities as bowling, school dances, going to the malt shop and such.

Double-dating would be the next step—when you're on toward 16. M.M.

* * * *

DEAR MRS. MAYFIELD:

I would like pen pals from all over the United States and foreign countries.

I am a "young" teen-ager and I like rock 'n' roll music, dancing, sports and writing letters.

Could you please put my name in your column? Lin McCamant, 1133 Race, Denver, Colo. 80206

DEAR MRS. MAYFIELD:

My brother is 92 years old and an invalid. He is in and out of the hospital constantly. Do you suppose some of your kind readers would send him some cheery cards. He is C. W. Ballard, 1910 Smyers Drive, Benton Harbor, Michigan. SISTER

Complexion Beauty

The secret of smoothing and beautifying the complexion is said to lie in the saturation of the skin with a new type of moist tropical oil. The skin takes on a radiant peaches-and-cream bloom as roughness and tiny lines are gently smoothed out. This beautifying treatment with the tropical oil of Olay is recommended by skin care consultants to give the complexion day-long beauty and the natural glow of a healthy skin, even in winter. Used daily before making up Olay promotes a pretty youthful complexion bloom.

All little boys when they are six or seven have one ambition in life—they want to be policemen or firemen or astronauts. All little girls at the same age have a consuming desire to grow up and keep house.

When these future astronauts and would-be housewives reach 14, however, they begin to think in terms of other careers.

TO HELP all interested junior and senior high school students who think they might like to follow any form of medical career, Long Beach State College will conduct its third annual Health Careers Day Tuesday on campus.

Sponsored by Unit H of the California League for Nursing, the Los Angeles County Medical Association Auxiliary and the LBSC Nursing Department, the all-day program will include panel discussions, films and educational exhibits.

Registration, to begin at 9 a.m. in the campus theater, will be followed by a welcoming address by Dr. George Demos, dean of students. From 10 a.m. to noon students will attend two panel discussions of their choice.

A box lunch may be purchased on campus. In the afternoon until 3:30 p.m., films and educational exhibits will be offered.

THE PROFESSIONS or occupations represented in the program are nursing, (including military and vocational nursing), medicine, optometry, podiatry, veterinary medicine, health education, speech therapy, medical social work. Also, therapy (physical, inhalation and recreational), hospital administration, pharmacology, clinical psychology, medical librarianship, cardio-pulmonary laboratory, x-ray technology and dietetics.

Panel discussions will concern educational preparation, salary, job opportunities in the various professions. Students will have an opportunity to join in a question - and - answer session.

Six films on nursing, medicine, therapy, hospitals, podiatry and health will be shown.

Chairman of the day is Miss Wanda L. Pentecost, LBSC Nursing Department. Other committee members are Marilyn Wullschleger, Hortense Darling, Annabelle Wyatt and Irene Carlson.

For additional information contact the LBSC Nursing Department.

A TRIBUTE IN LONG BEACH

Symphony benefactors will be honored at tea

At a tea next Sunday from 2 to 5 p.m. in the home of Dr. and Mrs. Alexander Kadvany, 3334 E. Fourth St., Long Beach Symphony Association and its guests will pay tribute to three persons who have advanced the cause of Long Beach Symphony Orchestra.

Two members of the Los Angeles County Music Commission, Howard Conrad and Mrs. Howard Coy, and Mrs. Herman H. Ridder, founder and now honorary chairman of the summer concerts committee, will be honored.

Kenneth F. Delene, chairman of the symphony contributions committee, is in charge of the tea. He is being assisted by Mrs. Earl J. Marks Jr., president of Symphony Association, and Mmes Ron Hughes, Burton Benwell, John H. Dale, Leroy Hyde, Miller Crane and Malcolm Todd.

MUSICIANS who will perform during the afternoon are Paula Goodman and Christine Compton, violinists; Eric Watilo and Judy Arndt, cellist; Pamela Murie, Jaclyn Marquart and Sylvia Emery, pianists; Mrs. Junko Bingo, soprano; and Lorin Emery, tenor.

The music commission is a 15-member body which accepts and reviews applications for county financial support, then makes recommendations to the Board of Supervisors. Commission members also attend concerts and musical productions in their supervisorial districts and report to the commission on community support through attendance and contributions. These reports influence budget recommendations.

Sue McDonald, for nine years manager of Long Beach Symphony Orchestra and now consulant on arts councils with the California Arts Commission, said:

* * * *

"ALL THREE persons to be honored next Sunday have given long service to the symphony. Mrs. Coy was one of the founders of the Long Beach Philharmonic Association from which the Long Beach Symphony developed. She was particularly active in development of the program of auditions for young musicians.

"Mr. Conrad for many years was the most successful member of the contributions committee and, as a member of the board of directors, interested many business firms and individuals in supporting the symphony. Both he and Mrs. Coy have dedicated their services to the orchestra through the County Music Commission.

* * * *

"TEN YEARS ago Mrs. Ridder served on the committee that brought Lauris Jones to Long Beach as permanent conductor of the orchestra and sparked development of the Long Beach Symphony from the Philharmonic Association.

"She is, of course, widely known as founder and first chairman of the Starlight Serenades. These concerts, which began in July, 1962 are among the most popular events of the Long Beach summer season.

"Mrs. Ridder has been one of the most successful of all fund-raisers for the symphony and has been personally responsible for much of the orchestra's growth in scope and prestige during recent years."

CHEF OF THE WEEK

His 'Daddy' would be proud

By MILDRED K. FLANARY

(In collaboration with "Chef" Judge Martin DeVries)

Like father, like son, and the name Burcham is adding still another page to Long Beach History.

Today's Chef of the Week, Rev. Hugh David Burcham, was born in 1917 of the beloved educator "Daddy" Burcham for whom "Burcham Field" is named and who made such a magnificent contribution to education. "Daddy" Burcham was principal of Long Beach High, and later Poly High School, from 1907 to 1941.

After many years absence, his son, Dave, returned to his native Long Beach to lead two congregations, First Presbyterian and Calvary Presbyterian, which recently merged into one, Covenant Presbyterian. A new church is under construction at Third Street and Atlantic Avenue.

THE REV. Dr. Burcham is a graduate of Poly High and UCLA. He changed his major in his senior year from geology to theology, as a result of his interest in student religious activities.

He continued his studies at San Francisco Theological Seminary, where he received an alumni fellowship, and at Union Theological Seminary in New York, where he earned his Master of Sacred Theology degree, cum laude. He holds a doctorate from Occidental.

The Rev. Dr. Burcham was a selected representative to the World Christian Conference in Amsterdam in 1939. Then came the war where his ministry as a chaplain in the U.S. Navy reached far. He now is a captain in the Naval Reserve.

REV. HUGH DAVID BURCHAN

His first pastorate was organization minister at La Canada Presbyterian Church. In 10 years it grew from "no members" to 1,200. In 1957 he accepted a call to First Presbyterian Church in Oakland, and for six years served as national commissioner of Ecumenical Missions and Relations for United Presbyterian Church. He came to his present ministry in 1964.

A MEMBER of Downtown Long Beach Rotary Club, he also belongs to Downtown Branch YMCA and this year is heading its membership campaign.

Before he married Esther Woodward in 1941, he told her of his love for the sea and his expert seamanship, and invited her to go sailing with him. When only a little distance from shore the boat capsized and both he and "his girl" had to swim to safety.

He and Esther have daughters Mrs. Donald Hagen, a teacher in Eagle Rock schools, and Mary, 17, a senior at Wilson High. Their sons are David, 14, a ninth grader at Rogers Junior High, and Donnie, 11, a student at Florence Nightingale School.

His prize fish story reveals that he went fishing one Sunday when he should have been in church, and the "biggest fish" of his fishing career was hauled in.

He both likes to prepare and to eat his corn fritters.

CORN FRITTERS

- 2 cups flour
- 2 tsp. baking powder
- 1 tsp. salt
- 1 cup milk
- 2 eggs, beaten
- 1 #2 can whole kernel corn, drained

Blend milk and eggs, then add sifted dry ingredients. Add corn, which has been drained, and mix lightly. Drop from tablespoon into deep, hot fat (370) and fry until golden brown (about 4 minutes). Drain on paper towel, and serve with maple syrup. Serves 6, generously.

TRAVEL and RESORTS

Traveling with Stan Delaplane

MAZATLAN — Within the last week in Mexico, the gasoline stations have put in yellow pumps marked "P-100." Better grade than the old Gasolmex. I couldn't make the car ping on any pull. So writes Dr. J. K. Perry, a friend of mine who's doing an extensive trailer trip. He found P-100 as far north as Hermosillo.

* * * *

"Would you know the place we can go in Hong Kong for a Swiss watch at the lowest price?"

I'D GO first to Lane, Crawford Ltd. on the Hong Kong side. This is a reliable, one-price department store. Watches enter Hong Kong duty-free. Usually just a little under Swiss prices or about half the retail price in the U.S.

* * * *

". . . a place to travel where prices are still reasonable and people more friendly. We found Europe very commercial. . . ."

WELL, tourist business is in the billion-dollar class. It's bound to get a commercial feeling. You might try New Zealand and Australia where they are trying to get in that commerce, but local residents haven't felt it yet.

Fare from the West Coast is roughly $1,000 round-trip. You can stop at Tahiti, Fiji, Samoa and others on the way down and back. But I'd add $250 and you can fly back through the whole Orient: Singapore, Malay peninsula, Bangkok, Hong Kong, Taiwan, Japan with all kinds of stopover time.

To get a more relaxed time in Europe, you have to get out in the country. (New York is commercial, too, as you'll find if you forget to tip a taxi driver.) I'm convinced the traveler to Europe does better now by basing in a small town. Get pensions—room with meals—and take day trips around. The crush of tourists in the capitals in summer is too much to have fun.

"What about clothing for a trip to Ireland this summer."

FIRST A RAIN coat AND a folding umbrella. It rains somewhere every day in Ireland, they say. Usually you happen to be there too.

Ireland is a tweedy sort of country, even in Dublin. Never very warm. And even in summer I've worn a sweater under the coat. Dark suit for men, a cocktail dress or two for women in Dublin evenings. If you're going to be invited to something social, then you'll need formals. For these things, the Irish dress to the nines.

* * * *

"We plan to do some driving in the American Southwest this summer vacation. Can you estimate per day costs for two?"

THE AAA says $35 a day for gas, motels, meals, entertainment. Last time I drove across country was four years ago and it cost me that much alone. Depends on how much you drive. Anywhere, it's movement that raises costs.

* * * *

"How do we get tickets to shows in London?"

THE HALL porter — (the man behind the desk with crossed keys on his uniform collar) — will do the whole thing. That's one of his jobs, and you tip him when you check out. London shows start around 6:30 to 7. So pick a restaurant, and have the hall porter book you a table for after the show, too.

* * * *

"What things should we take to Europe? I mean things hard to get?"

I DON'T know of anything in short supply anywhere now. American cigarettes are expensive — 75 cents a package in London to $1 in Athens. But most daily supplies are the same as here or even less.

* * * *

"Some people tell us to go to the restaurant in the Eiffel tower and others say it's too touristy. So what do you say?"

WHAT CAN I say? I was there one evening. It's touristy. I liked it. Never had much feeling to go back since there are other places I like better.

The restaurants of Paris are so good. I like to try some I just happen to pass. The menu is always posted outside. Take a look inside. If it looks good, take a chance. Odds are in your favor.

* * * *

"My husband refuses to go to Europe as he has been told you cannot get a good dry martini. I have offered to carry prepared mix, but. . . ."

THE AMERICAN dry martini is just like home at all big tourist hotels. But here's a list of guaranteed oases: Excelsior in Rome, Baur-au-lac in Zurich, Palace in Madrid, Ritz in Lisbon, Plaza Athenee in Paris.

Caribair opens office

Caribair, the U.S. regional airline in the Caribbean, opened a sales and contact office in Los Angeles last week. George Sahlin, vice president-marketing, said the move "opened the entire West Coast to travel to the Caribbean."

The modern Caribair office at 6290 Sunset Blvd. will act as information and reservation center for the area and for servicing an estimated 1,500 travel agents in 11 Western states.

Heading the office is Peter V. Ueberroth, of Transportation Consultants, Inc., who was responsible for setting up the operation for Caribair.

P&O-Orient Lines has been named West Coast general agents for cruises aboard the Queen of Bermuda and Ocean Monarch, according to Fred P. Drexel, passenger traffic manager of the Furness Bermuda Line.

Serving as clearing houses for bookings for the luxury liners which operate from the East Coast to Bermuda and the West Indies will be the P&O offices at 611 W. Seventh St., Los Angeles.

Furness cruises aboard the Queen of Bermuda and Ocean Monarch sail weekly from New York to Bermuda. The liners also offer a heavy schedule of Caribbean cruises every year, usually from New York and Port Everglades, Fla.

WAL's 75% fares for all

A good travel buy will soon become an even greater bargain when Western Air Lines' 75% roundtrip excursion fares for everyone become effective March 31.

WAL's excursion program makes it easier to get to fun and recreation centers from California and Arizona, to the Northwest, through the Mountain states into Canada, and east into the Midwestern plains and lake country. More than 30 cities in 12 Western States and Alberta, Can., are included.

Excursion plan restrictions are few—those traveling for 75% may do so any time except Friday noon and Saturday noon, or between Sunday noon and Monday noon. They may not return within the calendar week that they left and must return within 30 days.

MAIS OUI, IT'S BALL TIME

Pinkie's plas to dine, dance

France—from the Eiffel tower to the Left Bank—will influence the mood of party-goers Saturday as Long Beach Community Hospital Auxiliary holds its ninth annual ball in French Room (where else?) of Lafayette Hotel.

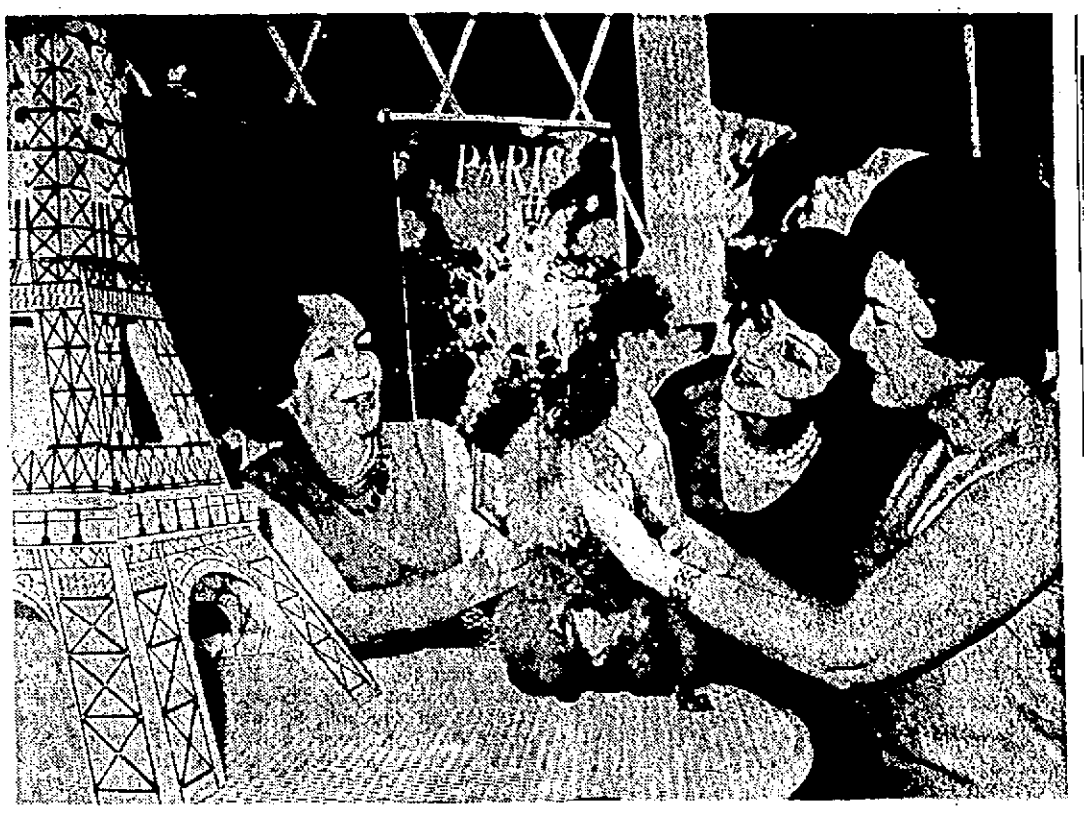

The auxiliary's familiar mascot, Pinkie the puppet, will trade his clown cap for a beret, his pink and white costume for a paint smock, to play his role as host of Pinkie's Parisienne Ball.

NO-HOST cocktails at 6:30 p. m. will begin festivities, followed by dinner and an evening of dancing to Roger Bacon's orchestra.

The event will honor recently installed board members, led by Mrs. Hal Sleet, president, who with Mr. Sleet, Mrs. Kenneth Cummings, social chairman, and Mr. Cummings, will greet guests.

Colorful water color prints of French scenes will form program covers; gold cherubs and a profusion of flowers will enhance the room's already Paris feeling.

Walter Oliver, Community Hospital administrator, and Mrs. Oliver, along with staff physicians and their wives, board of trustees members and their wives will be among ball guests.

CONFERRING WITH MARTINI, THE FRENCH POODLE, ON DECOR FOR PINKIE'S PARISIENNE BALL . . . Mmes. Bernie Heim, Kenneth Cummings and Hal Sleet, president of Community Hospital Auxiliary

Miss Barden becomes bride

Four-hundred guests attended nuptials Saturday in St. Anthony's Catholic Church which united Nancy Elizabeth Barden and Michael Lee Gratzke.

Parents of the couple are Mr. and Mrs. Donald V. Barden, 6231 Monita St., and Mr. and Mrs. Charles J. Gratzke, Torrance.

OTHER MEMBERS of the entourage were Marsha Jean Rosenoff, Janet Dee Robinson, Kathy Ray, Barbara Gratzke and Mrs. Michael Miller, bridesmaids; Donna Gratzke, junior bridesmaid; Ronald Axtell, David Sorenson, Al Lepper, William V. Barden, Thomas Gratzke, usher; and Jon Gratzke, ring bearer.

The newlyweds were honored at a reception in Petroleum Club before leaving for a honeymoon in San Francisco. Upon their return they will reside in Long Beach.

Both young persons attended Whittier College. She is a graduate of Wilson High School, he of North High School, Torrance. The new Mrs. Gratzke was presented at Assistance League's 1964 Debutante Ball.

Bid ended this great twosome

Here is a hand that broke up one of the great bridge teams of all time. North was the unlucky expert.

His opening no-trump was the sort of psychic bid that is bound to make someone unhappy. This time it was his teammates.

West just happened to have a two spade overcall and no one can find any fault with South's jump to four hearts. West looked on the four heart bid as money from home which it was. He doubled and opened the king of spades.

The defense did not have any real problems because there really was no way for them to go wrong. Eventually, they collected two spades, three trumps, one diamond and three clubs for an 1,100 point penalty.

The game was total point team of four and while South was fit to be tied, North explained glibly that they would probably show a profit on the board because East and West were cold for six no-trump which would count 1,440 points.

* * * *

UNFORTUNATELY for our unlucky friend, it turned out that his East and West partners had arrived at six spades. South had opened the ace of hearts and continued the suit to give his partner a ruff.

It was even more unfortunate that the first South proceeded to criticize his partners for getting to the wrong slam. He might have been right in his criticism but this South remained mad. East and West became more and more angry and we really can't blame them.

It is mighty tough luck to lose a slam because of a seven-zero suit break. It is particularly tough to be criticized for it. In any event, that particular team never has played together since that debacle.

DEAR MRS. MAYFIELD

Must learn by experience

DEAR MRS. MAYFIELD:

I'm in love with Hal but he doesn't know it. Oh, we're friends and all that but he's crazy about another girl and hasn't the slightest idea I think of him as anything but a "good buddy."

I wouldn't mind it so much except this girl who has him going is playing him for a sucker and I don't want to see Hal get hurt.

I know for a fact she wouldn't be going with him if she could get anyone else but I can't tell him that. He wouldn't believe it, anyway. He thinks she's the greatest.

Is there any way I can put him wise to this gal and make him see her for what she really is? GIG

DEAR GIG:

You might as well forget it. Hal has to take his own bumps and you can't do a thing about it. If you try to discredit his girl friend, you'll probably lose your "good buddy," so let it alone and keep on being his friend. Maybe someday he'll see what's been right in front of him all along. M.M.

* * * *

DEAR MRS. MAYFIELD:

I am 14 and I want to date. Not go steady or anything like that but go out with the gang occasionally.

All the other girls my age are dating but my parents tell me I'm too young.

Please give us your opinion. H.P.

DEAR H.P.:

Personally I can't see anything wrong with a 14-year-old going out with the gang—provided it is the kind of gang that behaves itself and enjoys such activities as bowling, school dances, going to the malt shop and such.

Double-dating would be the next step—when you're on toward 16. M.M.

DEAR MRS. MAYFIELD:

I would like pen pals from all over the United States and foreign countries.

I am a "young" teen-ager and I like rock 'n' roll music, dancing, sports and writing letters.

Could you please put my name in your column? Lin McCamant, 1133 Race, Denver, Colo. 80206

DEAR MRS. MAYFIELD:

My brother is 92 years old and an invalid. He is in and out of the hospital constantly. Do you suppose some of your kind readers would send him some cheery cards. He is C. W. Ballard, 1910 Smyers Drive, Benton Harbor, Michigan. SISTER

Price-Raun will marry

Mr. and Mrs. Carl S. Price of Stanton have announced betrothal of their daughter, Verna Lorraine, to Rockwell Kent Raun.

Dr. and Mrs. George M. Raun, Sherman Oaks, are parents of the prospective bridegroom. Dr. Raun formerly was minister of Belmont Heights Methodist Church.

Miss Duncan, an alumna of Millikan High School, attends Long Beach City College. Her fiance, an alumnus of Wilson High, attended LBCC and Los Angeles Valley College.

Complexion Beauty

The secret of smoothing and beautifying the complexion is said to lie in the saturation of the skin with a new type of moist tropical oil. The skin takes on a radiant peaches-and-cream bloom as roughness and tiny lines are gently smoothed out. This beautifying treatment with the tropical oil of Olay is recommended by skin care consultants to give the complexion day-long beauty and the natural glow of a healthy skin, even in winter. Used daily before making-up Olay promotes a pretty youthful complexion bloom.

Sue Williams will outline purposes of the Community Improvement League when she appears Wednesday as a guest speaker at a noon meeting of the Council of Jewish Women study group.

Speaking as a representative of the Negro community in Long Beach, Miss Williams will discuss personnel development of the league and how volunteers may assist with Projects Headstart, Self, Friend and Tutor.

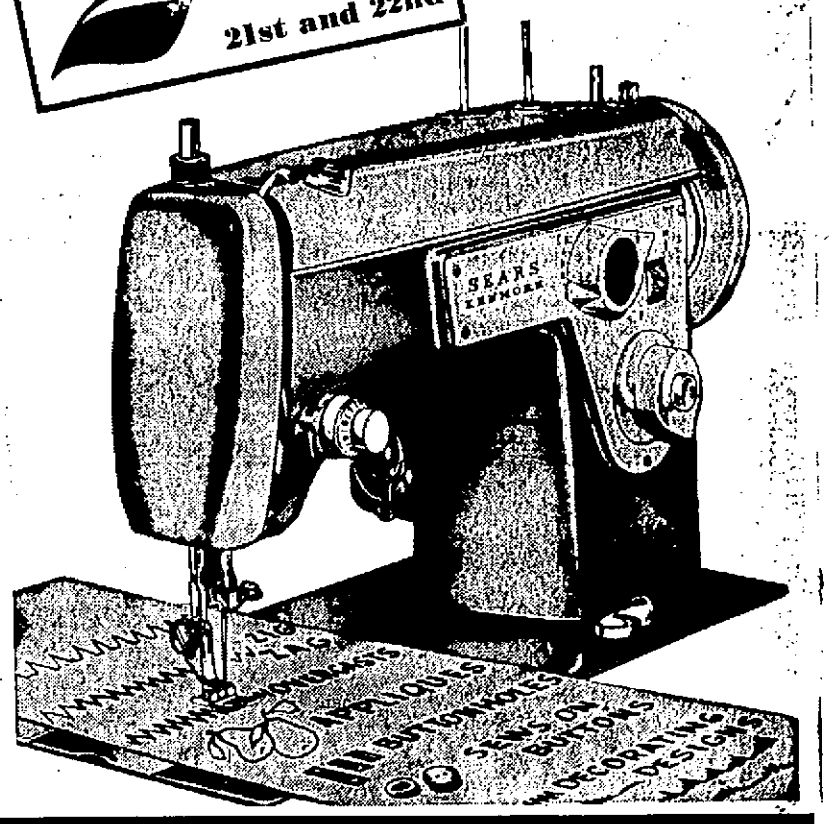

Additional information may be obtained from Mrs. Leo L. Shultz, 4305 Cerritos Ave.

END-OF-THE-WORLD FANTASYLAND

Serenity and fun in the sun? go to Mazatlan and La Paz

By Fred Taylor Kraft
Travel Editor

A leisurely drive of three or four days, or a hop of less than three hours by air, and you are in a foreign land below the Tropic of Cancer — an exotic, flower-scented fantasyland that, tourist wise, remains one of the few gems of serenity and isolation in the world.

This has to be Mazatlan, virtually surrounded by miles of stunning white beaches, which looks across the Sea of Cortez — or the Gulf of California, if you prefer.

Beyond is Baja California, a sometimes desolate, sometimes lush peninsula of unspoiled villages and vacation Shangri-Las set on the edge of some of the finest blue fishing waters anywhere.

Together they form an unbeatable vacation Mecca.

* * * *

IF YOU DRIVE, an easy way to go is via the Tijuana-Mexicali - Sonita - Santa Ana Rte. 2 to Santa Ana and then pick up Nogales-Guadalajara Hwy. 15 into Mazatlan.

Burros and carts will add to the frantic Mexican traffic once you get there but, settled in one of the several recently - built hotels, you can look forward to all kinds of pleasures in this primitive, sun - filled never - never land.

The climate, of course, is an important dividend. Mazatlan's temperature varies between 65 and 80 degrees at this season of the year. Annual rainfall averages about 80 inches, most of it falling in July, August and September. Late winter and spring months, therefore, encourage hunting, loafing around the witch's-hat huts of thatched palm that dot the beaches, sunlazing without cares, and fishing. Almost everyone who goes to Mazatlan also goes fishing.

* * * *

BUT WHILE you are there, get acquainted with the beauty of Mazatlan. A city of about 75,000 inhabitants, it extends itself along the ocean and a main, crescent - shaped boulevard with new hotels, well-stocked gift shops, and seafood restaurants that bring you back again and again. Enlivening the scene are mariachi bands at the open-air bistros, vendors hawking fresh mangos, bananas, papayas and coconuts, and horse-drawn surries in which you may take a city-wide tour for only a few pesos.

On these tours, reports the Mexican National Tourist Council, you will see pastel Spanish-Moorish casas and sleek new hilltop villas surrounded by flowers of infinite hues. And from towering lookout points hewn from the red rocks you view the glistening harbor, crashing surf, and the exuberantly green islands of the turquoise bay.

* * * *

IT IS FROM this harbor that you set sail for La Paz, either in your boat or on the new 4,200-ton, $6 million ferry La Paz, near the tip of Baja California. The cruise takes 16 hours during which you may lounge in the soft sun on deck, see a movie, and eat in a cafeteria or one of two restaurants operated by Mexican hotel and restaurant czar Cesar Balsa. A bar, comfortable lounges and a swimming pool also add to your pleasures.

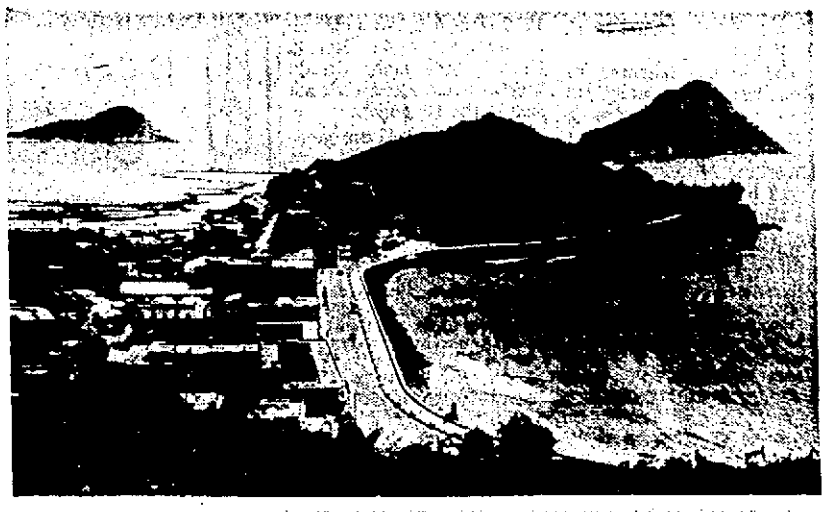

The air - conditioned La Paz sails at 5 p.m. Tuesdays and Saturdays, arrives in La Paz the following day at 9 a.m. Departures from La Paz back to Mazatlan are at 5 p.m. Sundays and Thursdays. There are accommodations for 370 passengers and 115 cars. Fares begin at $4 (U.S.) up to $28 per person for a double occupancy stateroom, one way. Charge for autos ranges from $30 to $44.

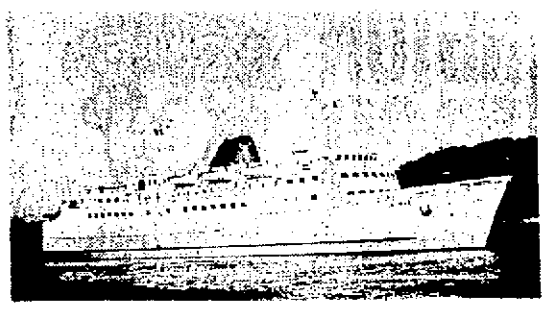

If you take your car, you will have sightseeing privileges previously inaccessible to vacationists in this end-of-the-world region. Roads lead to countless bays and coves, to ghost towns and old mines, and to such posh resorts as Las Cruces, Bahia de Palmas, Rancho Buena Vista, Las Cruces Palmilla, and Cabo San Lucas, the latter 154 miles distant at the extreme tip of the peninsula.

* * * *

LA PAZ itself is an unspoiled little town of 25,000 with excellent hotels and free port shopping. For those who like quietude, beautiful sunsets, hunting, water sports, skin diving, clam digging, shell collecting and unsurpassed fishing, La Paz has few equals on the entire Mexican coast. Charter cruises are popular. The blue waters abound with fish. Marlin season, which usually fills the resorts and hotels with anglers, extends from March to October.

Hotels vary in price and excellence. We recommend the sparkling Los Cocos ($15 U.S.) It is here that your host will be Carlos Riva Palacio, Senor Carlos is a good man to know: Also head of the Departamento de Turismo at La Paz, he is qualified to answer just about any question you may ask about the area.

Pageant held each night at Date Festival

Indio's National Date Festival, which got under way Friday, continues through next Sunday with a nightly Arabian Nights Pageant of 350 singers and dancers. The setting is complete with mosque, beggar's gate and slave mart.

Camel and ostrich races are held daily at 3 p.m.

The 10th annual Southern California Boat Show, with more than 350 boats plus boating equipment, continues through next Sunday in the Pan Pacific Auditorium, Los Angeles.

California Mid-Winter Fairs opens Friday for the 37th year in the desert town of Imperial and continues through March 6. It's essentially a farm fair, and international hostesses will be costumed for the nationalities which helped reclaim the Imperial valley desert.

* * * *

TEMPLE CITY holds its 22nd Youngsters Camellia Parade at 10 a.m. Saturday. The theme is "Memories are made of this." A royal court of first grade students will ride in the parade.

Also next Saturday, at 8:30 p.m. in the Los Angeles Shrine Auditorium, will be the 19th annual International Folk Dance Festival with 1,000 elegantly costumed dancers.

Descanso Gardens, near Glendale holds its giant Camellia Show Saturday and Sunday with thousands of trees and bushes in peak bloom.

Vegas hotel ready in July

Caesar's Palace, the $20 million luxury hotel which debuts in Las Vegas in July, will have extensive facilities for conventions and business groups. It will offer over 20 separate halls and committee rooms with a capacity to accommodate over 5,000 people.

Largest of these is the Coliseum which can house over 2,000 people, or, like Gaul, can be divided into three separate soundproof rooms.

PAVILIONS TO VIE AT EXPO 67

Between 700,000 and a million residents of Southern California and the southwest will trek to Canada for a look at the U. S. and Russian pavilions in the International Exposition now under construction at Montreal, according to an expert on world's fairs and exhibitions, who has been visiting the Southland.

John B. McAnulty, special assistant to the senior vice president of American Express Co., said that Canada's big "birthday party" — Expo 67—is scheduled to lure 8½ million Americans at which Canada and 75 foreign nations have spent or committed over half a billion dollars.

The 1,000-acre exposition, now rising on two islands and a peninsula in the St. Lawrence River at Montreal, to be held in 1967 to honor the 100th anniversary of the Federation of Canada.

The U.S. is putting up a $9 million pavilion and the Soviet Union is spending over $11 million to fight for the attention of the world audience of an estimated 30,000,000 visitors.

Chapman College to get new floating campus

ORANGE — The Holland-America Line will make available to Chapman College a new floating campus for use by the college's Seven Seas Division beginning with the fall semester of 1966. The S.S. Ryndam, presently engaged in transatlantic and around-the-world service, will become the new floating campus.

As a floating campus, the 15,015-gross-ton ship will provide students with a choice of two, three or four-berth cabins. An entire deck will provide accommodations for faculty members.

AFTER considerable refitting, the new floating campus will include a 280-seat theatre, 13 class rooms, a modern science laboratory, and a 10,000-volume library which can seat nearly 200 for individual study. Modern audio-visual equipment aboard will include a language laboratory.

Other facilities will include dining rooms, lounges, offices and central services, bookstore, hospital, and a self-service launderette with washers and dryers.

The ship is entirely air-conditioned, making it particularly suitable for voyages through tropical areas.

Costs for the semester afloat will amount to approximately $900 for tuition, orientation, and in-port field activities, and $1,590 for accommodations in four-berth cabins, which includes full board, lodging and ship transportation.

* * * *

THE FALL semester voyage will include ports in the Mediterranean, Near East, and Southeast Asia areas. The itinerary for the spring semester, 1967, voyage will be announced soon. The fall semester will sail from New York Oct. 20 and return to Los Angeles Feb. 4, 1967. The spring semester will sail from Los Angeles Feb. 7 and return to New York May 25. Both semesters are of 107 days duration.

Founded in 1861, Chapman College is a coeducational, liberal arts institution with an enrollment of some 1,800 students. Undergraduate majors are offered in 20 fields of study. Graduate study, credential, and professional programs are also available.

THE PROGRAMS offered by Chapman's Seas Division integrate regular college study and life with the experience of world travel. While the floating campus is traveling between ports, classes are held six days a week. Attendance is, of course, compulsory. The usual extra curricular activities of land-based colleges are also included, such as election of officers for student council, publications, clubs, debate, music and drama, dances, and sports.

Further information may be obtained from Chapman College, 333 N. Glassell St., Orange, Calif., or from any Holland-America Line office.

CHEF OF THE WEEK

His 'Daddy' would be proud

By MILDRED K. FLANARY

(In collaboration with "Chef" Judge Martin DeVries)

Like father, like son, and the name Burcham is adding still another page to Long Beach History.

Today's Chef of the Week, Rev. Hugh David Burcham, was born in 1917 of the beloved educator "Daddy" Burcham for whom "Burcham Field" is named and who made such a magnificent contribution to education. "Daddy" Burcham was principal of Long Beach High, and later Poly High School, from 1907 to 1941.

After many years absence, his son, Dave, returned to his native Long Beach to lead two congregations, First Presbyterian and Calvary Presbyterian, which recently merged into one, Covenant Presbyterian. A new church is under construction at Third Street and Atlantic Avenue.

THE REV. Dr. Burcham is a graduate of Poly High and UCLA. He changed his major in his senior year from geology to theology, as a result of his interest in student religious activities.

He continued his studies at San Francisco Theological Seminary, where he received an alumni fellowship, and at Union Theological Seminary in New York, where he earned his Master of Sacred Theology degree, cum laude. He holds a doctorate from Occidental.

The Rev. Dr. Burcham was a selected representative to the World Christian Conference in Amsterdam in 1939. Then came the war where his ministry as a chaplain in the U.S. Navy reached far. He now is a captain in the Naval Reserve.

REV. HUGH DAVID BURCHAN

His first pastorate was organization minister at La Canada Presbyterian Church. In 10 years it grew from "no members" to 1,200. In 1957 he accepted a call to First Presbyterian Church in Oakland, and for six years served as national commissioner of Ecumenical Missions and Relations for United Presbyterian Church. He came to his present ministry in 1964.

A MEMBER of Downtown Long Beach Rotary Club, he also belongs to Downtown Branch YMCA and this year is heading its membership campaign.

Before he married Esther Woodward in 1941, he told her of his love for the sea and his expert seamanship, and invited her to go sailing with him. When only a little distance from shore the boat capsized and both he and "his girl" had to swim to safety.

He and Esther have daughters Mrs. Donald Hagen, a teacher in Eagle Rock schools, and Mary, 17, a senior at Wilson High. Their sons are David, 14, a ninth grader at Rogers Junior High, and Donnie, 11, a student at Florence Nightingale School.

His prize fish story reveals that he went fishing one Sunday when he should have been in church, and the "biggest fish" of his fishing career was hauled in.

He both likes to prepare and to eat his corn fritters.

CORN FRITTERS

- 2 cups flour
- 2 tsp. baking powder
- 1 tsp. salt
- 1 cup milk
- 2 eggs, beaten
- 1 #2 can whole kernel corn, drained

Blend milk and eggs, then add sifted dry ingredients. Add corn, which has been drained, and mix lightly. Drop from tablespoon into deep, hot fat (370) and fry until golden brown (about 4 minutes). Drain on paper towel, and serve with maple syrup. Serves 6, generously.

TRAVEL and RESORTS

Traveling with Stan Delaplane

MAZATLAN — Within the last week in Mexico, the gasoline stations have put in yellow pumps marked "P-100." Better grade than the old Gasolmex. I couldn't make the car ping on any pull. So writes Dr. J. K. Perry, a friend of mine who's doing an extensive trailer trip. He found P-100 as far north as Hermosillo.

* * * *

"Would you know the place we can go in Hong Kong for a Swiss watch at the lowest price?"

I'D GO first to Lane, Crawford Ltd. on the Hong Kong side. This is a reliable, one-price department store. Watches enter Hong Kong duty-free. Usually just a little under Swiss prices or about half the retail price in the U.S.

* * * *

". . . a place to travel where prices are still reasonable and people more friendly. We found Europe very commercial. . . ."

WELL, tourist business is in the billion-dollar class. It's bound to get a commercial feeling. You might try New Zealand and Australia where they are trying to get in that commerce, but local residents haven't felt it yet.

Fare from the West Coast is roughly $1,000 round-trip. You can stop at Tahiti, Fiji, Samoa and others on the way down and back. But I'd add $250 and you can fly back through the whole Orient: Singapore, Malay peninsula, Bangkok, Hong Kong, Taiwan, Japan with all kinds of stopover time.

To get a more relaxed time in Europe, you have to get out in the country. (New York is commercial, too, as you'll find if you forget to tip a taxi driver.) I'm convinced the traveler to Europe does better now by basing in a small town. Get pensions—room with meals—and take day trips around. The crush of tourists in the capitals in summer is too much to have fun.

* * * *

"What about clothing for a trip to Ireland this summer."

FIRST A RAIN coat AND a folding umbrella. It rains somewhere every day in Ireland, they say. Usually you happen to be there too.

Ireland is a tweedy sort of country, even in Dublin. Never very warm. And even in summer I've worn a sweater under the coat. Dark suit for men, a cocktail dress or two for women in Dublin evenings. If you're going to be invited to something social, then you'll need formals. For these things, the Irish dress to the nines.

* * * *

"We plan to do some driving in the American Southwest this summer vacation. Can you estimate per day costs for two?"

THE AAA says $35 a day for gas, motels, meals, entertainment. Last time I drove across country was four years ago and it cost me that much alone. Depends on how much you drive. Anywhere, it's movement that raises costs.

* * * *

"How do we get tickets to shows in London?"

THE HALL porter — (the man behind the desk with crossed keys on his uniform collar) — will do the whole thing. That's one of his jobs, and you tip him when you check out. London shows start around 6:30 to 7. So pick a restaurant, and have the hall porter book you a table for after the show, too.

* * * *

"What things should we take to Europe? I mean things hard to get?"

I DON'T know of anything in short supply anywhere now. American cigarettes are expensive — 75 cents a package in London to $1 in Athens. But most daily supplies are the same as here or even less.

* * * *

"Some people tell us to go to the restaurant in the Eiffel tower and others say it's too touristy. So what do you say?"

WHAT CAN I say? I was there one evening. It's touristy. I liked it. Never had much feeling to go back since there are other places I like better.

The restaurants of Paris are so good, I like to try some I just happen to pass. The menu is always posted outside. Take a look inside. If it looks good, take a chance. Odds are in your favor.

* * * *

"My husband refuses to go to Europe as he has been told you cannot get a good dry martini. I have offered to carry prepared mix, but. . . ."

THE AMERICAN dry martini is just like home at all big tourist hotels. But here's a list of guaranteed oases: Excelsior in Rome, Baur-au-lac in Zurich, Palace in Madrid, Ritz in Lisbon, Plaza Athenee in Paris.

IN THE TRADE

Caribair opens office

Caribair, the U.S. regional airline in the Caribbean, opened a sales and contact office in Los Angeles last week. George Sahlin, vice president-marketing, said the move "opened the entire West Coast to travel to the Caribbean."

The modern Caribair office at 6290 Sunset Blvd. will act as information and reservation center for the area and for servicing an estimated 1,500 travel agents in 11 Western states.

Heading the office is Peter V. Ueberroth, of Transportation Consultants, Inc., who was responsible for setting up the operation for Caribair.

P&O-Orient Lines has been named West Coast general agents for cruises aboard the Queen of Bermuda and Ocean Monarch, according to Fred P. Drexel, passenger traffic manager of the Furness Bermuda Line.

Serving as clearing houses for bookings for the luxury liners which operate from the East Coast to Bermuda and the West Indies will be the P&O offices at 611 W. Seventh St., Los Angeles.

Furness cruises aboard the Queen of Bermuda and Ocean Monarch sail weekly from New York to Bermuda. The liners also offer a heavy schedule of Caribbean cruises every year, usually from New York and Port Everglades, Fla.

WAL's 75% fares for all

A good travel buy will soon become an even greater bargain when Western Air Lines' 75% roundtrip excursion fares for everyone become effective March 31.

WAL's excursion program makes it easier to get to fun and recreation centers from California and Arizona, to the Northwest, through the Mountain states into Canada, and east into the Midwestern plains and lake country. More than 30 cities in 12 Western States and Alberta, Can., are included.

Excursion plan restrictions are few—those traveling for 75% may do so any time except Friday noon and Saturday noon, or between Sunday noon and Monday noon. They may not return within the calendar week that they left and must return within 30 days.

Knitting buffs—here's latest yarn

CHECKERBOARD fashions well suited for knitters reach a zenith in a no-button Chanel-inspired silhouette topped with a matching kerchief. Poshly patterned costume takes shape in fast-to-knit Bernat yarns.

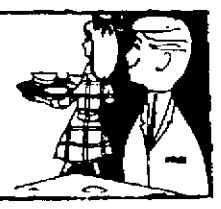

A "Passport to Fashion" collection of designs for knitters will be previewed this week at area Broadway stores by Pamela Hessler, knitting consultant and fashion authority.

Miss Hessler will present ready-to-knit costumes designed for Bernat Yarns by Mirsa of Italy Monday at Broadway Del Amo and Thursday at Broadway Los Altos. She also will be available Friday for consultation in the art needlework department of the Long Beach store.

The collection goes on a Roman holiday with its Mirsa designs which click with the new pulse of fashion in brash textures and impulsive patterns. Easy-o-follow instruction in Bernat style books provide the passport to a new world of custom-look knits.

Knit suits and coats for spring tend to show off big-as-life checkerboard patterns and follow slender, gently molded lines.

THURSDAY: Hamburger on bun, pickle slice, potato salad, sliced peaches and milk.

The above items make up the elementary children's lunch 30c. Soup and salad from the junior-senior high school a la carte menu are sold in the elementary schools, but they may be purchased by the children only after they have purchased the tray lunch.

Couples choose Las Vegas for wedding, honeymoon

Johnson-Cook

Mr. and Mrs. William B. Johnson (the former Nancy V. Cook) are now at home in Lakewood following their marriage in Las Vegas.

The bride, daughter of Mrs. Ivan M. Cook, 3461 Tulane Ave., chose a three piece white knit suit for her wedding. Mrs. Susan Brown was her matron of honor and Rodger Lord was best man for the ceremony.

The new Mrs. Johnson was graduated from Millikan High School and Long Beach City College. She was a member of Ramayana sorority. Her husband, son of Mr. and Mrs. Hal E. Johnson of La Habra, attended Fullerton Junior College, the University of Washington and Clark College.

Parents of the newlyweds honored them with a buffet dinner and champagne reception in the Hacienda Hotel following the ceremony.

Lang-Glogauer

Las Vegas was the honeymoon destination of George J. Lang and the former Camille J. Glogauer following their exchange of vows in Chapel of the Wedding Bells, Bellflower.

The bride, daughter of Mrs. Margaret Glogauer, 213 Mira Mar Ave., wore a floor-length sheath gown of white linen accented by three floating lace panels extending in back from the shoulders of the fitted bodice.

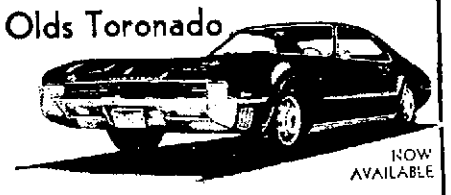

Her sole attendant was Mrs. Carol Puckett.

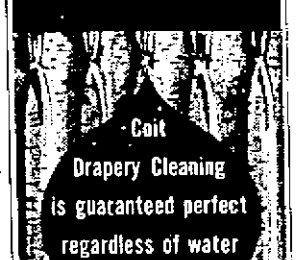

The bridegroom, son of Mr. and Mrs. Frank Witt, 1738 Ohio Ave., was attended by his brother, Ronald Newell, best man. Ronald Thielman and Richard Roach seated the 80 guests.

Both newlyweds are graduates of Wilson High School. Mrs. Witt, an alumna of Long Beach State College, has taught for the past three years in the Long Beach Unified School District.

The couple will reside in Long Beach.

END-OF-THE-WORLD FANTASYLAND

Serenity and fun in the sun? go to Mazatlan and La Paz

By Fred Taylor Kraft
Travel Editor

A leisurely drive of three or four days, or a hop of less than three hours by air, and you are in a foreign land below the Tropic of Cancer — an exotic, flower-scented fantasyland that, tourist wise, remains one of the few gems of serenity and isolation in the world.

This has to be Mazatlan, virtually surrounded by miles of stunning white beaches, which looks across the Sea of Cortez — or the Gulf of California, if you prefer.

Beyond is Baja California, a sometimes desolate, sometimes lush peninsula of unspoiled villages and vacation Shangri-Las set on the edge of some of the finest blue fishing waters anywhere.

Together they form an unbeatable vacation Mecca.

* * * *

IF YOU DRIVE, an easy way to go is via the Tijuana-Mexicali - Sonita - Santa Ana Rte. 2 to Santa Ana and then pick up Nogales-Guadalajara Hwy. 15 into Mazatlan.

Burros and carts will add to the frantic Mexican traffic once you get there but, settled in one of the several recently - built hotels, you can look forward to all kinds of pleasures in this primitive, sun - filled never - never land.

The climate, of course, is an important dividend. Mazatlan's temperature varies between 65 and 80 degrees at this season of the year. Annual rainfall averages about 80 inches, most of it falling in July, August and September. Late winter and spring months, therefore, encourage hunting, loafing around the witch's-hat huts of thatched palm that dot the beaches, sunlazing without cares, and fishing. Almost everyone who goes to Mazatlan also goes fishing.

* * * *

BUT WHILE you are there, get acquainted with the beauty of Mazatlan. A city of about 75,000 inhabitants, it extends itself along the ocean and a main, crescent - shaped boulevard with new hotels, well-stocked gift shops, and seafood restaurants that bring you back again and again. Enlivening the scene are mariachi bands at the open-air bistros, vendors hawking fresh mangos, bananas, papayas and coconuts, and horse-drawn surries in which you may take a city-wide tour for only a few pesos.

On these tours, reports the Mexican National Tourist Council, you will see pastel Spanish-Moorish casas and sleek new hilltop villas surrounded by flowers of infinite hues. And from towering lookout points hewn from the red rocks you view the glistening harbor, crashing surf, and the exuberantly green islands of the turquoise bay.

* * * *

IT IS FROM this harbor that you set sail for La Paz, either in your boat or on the new 4,200-ton, $6 million ferry La Paz, near the tip of Baja California. The cruise takes 16 hours during which you may lounge in the soft sun on deck, see a movie, and eat in a cafeteria or one of two restaurants operated by Mexican hotel and restaurant czar Cesar Balsa. A bar, comfortable lounges and a swimming pool also add to your pleasures.

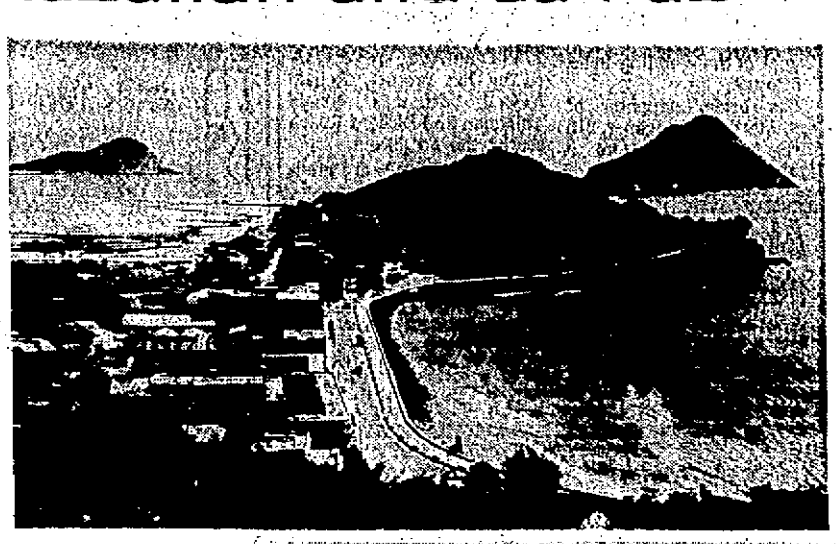

The air - conditioned La Paz sails at 5 p.m. Tuesdays and Saturdays, arrives in La Paz the following day at 9 a.m. Departures from La Paz back to Mazatlan are at 5 p.m. Sundays and Thursdays. There are accommodations for 370 passengers and 115 cars. Fares begin at $4 (U.S.) up to $28 per person for a double occupancy stateroom, one way. Charge for autos ranges from $30 to $44.

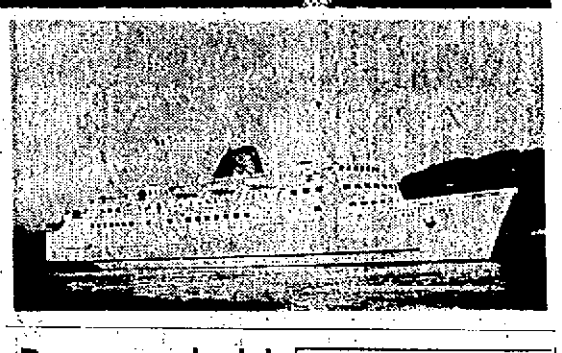

If you take your car, you will have sightseeing privileges previously inaccessible to vacationists in this end-of-the-world region. Roads lead to countless bays and coves, to ghost towns and old mines, and to such posh resorts as Las Cruces, Bahia de Palmas, Rancho Buena Vista, Las Cruces Palmilla, and Caho San Lucas, the latter 154 miles distant at the extreme tip of the peninsula.

LA PAZ itself is an unspoiled little town of 25,000 with excellent hotels and free port shopping. For those who like quietude, beautiful sunsets, hunting, water sports, skin diving, clam digging, shell collecting and unsurpassed fishing, La Paz has few equals on the entire Mexican coast. Charter cruises are popular. The blue waters abound with fish. Marlin season, which usually fills the resorts and hotels with anglers, extends from March to October.

Hotels vary in price and excellence. We recommend the sparkling Los Cocos ($15 U.S.) It is here that your host will be Carlos Riva Palacio. Senor Carlos is a good man to know: Also head of the Departamento de Turismo at La Paz, he is qualified to answer just about any question you may ask about the area.

Pageant held each night at Date Festival

Indio's National Date Festival, which got under way Friday, continues through next Sunday with a nightly Arabian Nights Pageant of 350 singers and dancers. The setting is complete with mosque, beggar's gate and slave mart.

Camel and ostrich races are held daily at 3 p.m.

The 10th annual Southern California Boat Show, with more than 350 boats plus boating equipment, continues through next Sunday in the Pan Pacific Auditorium, Los Angeles.

California Mid-Winter Fairs opens Friday for the 37th year in the desert town of Imperial and continues through March/6. It's essentially a farm fair, and international hostesses will be costumed for the nationalities which helped reclaim the Imperial valley desert.

TEMPLE CITY holds its 22nd Youngsters Camellia Parade at 10 a.m. Saturday. The theme is "Memories are made of this." A royal court of first grade students will ride in the parade.

Also next Saturday, at 8:30 p.m. in the Los Angeles Shrine Auditorium, will be the 19th annual International Folk Dance Festival with 1,000 elegantly costumed dancers.

Descanso Gardens, near Glendale holds its giant Camellia Show Saturday and Sunday with thousands of trees and bushes in peak bloom.

Vegas hotel ready in July

Caesar's Palace, the $20 million luxury hotel which debuts in Las Vegas in July, will have extensive facilities for conventions and business groups. It will offer over 20 separate halls and committee rooms with a capacity to accommodate over 5,000 people.

Largest of these is the Coliseum which can house over 2,000 people, or, like Gaul, can be divided into three separate soundproof rooms.

PAVILIONS TO VIE AT EXPO 67

Between 700,000 and a million residents of Southern California and the southwest will trek to Canada for a look at the U. S. and Russian pavilions in the International Exposition now under construction at Montreal, according to an expert on world's fairs and exhibitions, who has been visiting the Southland.

John B. McAnulty, special assistant to the senior vice president of American Express Co., said that Canada's big "birthday party" — Expo 67—is scheduled to lure 8½ million Americans at which Canada and 75 foreign nations have spent or committed over half a billion dollars.

The 1,000-acre exposition, now rising on two islands and a peninsula in the St. Lawrence River at Montreal, to be held in 1967 to honor the 100th anniversary of the Federation of Canada.

The U.S. is putting up a $9 million pavilion and the Soviet Union is spending over $11 million to fight for the attention of the world audience of an estimated 30,000,000 visitors.

Chapman College to get new floating campus

ORANGE — The Holland-America Line will make available to Chapman College a new floating campus for use by the college's Seven Seas Division beginning with the fall semester of 1966. The S.S. Ryndam, presently engaged in transatlantic and around-the-world service, will become the new floating campus.

As a floating campus, the 15,015-gross-ton ship will provide students with a choice of two, three or four-berth cabins. An entire deck will provide accommodations for faculty members.

AFTER considerable refitting, the new floating campus will include a 280-seat theatre, 13 class rooms, a modern science laboratory, and a 10,000-volume library which can seat nearly 200 for individual study. Modern audio-visual equipment aboard will include a language laboratory.

Other facilities will include dining rooms, lounges, offices and central services, bookstore, hospital, and a self-service launderette with washers and dryers.

The ship is entirely air-conditioned, making it particularly suitable for voyages through tropical areas.

Costs for the semester afloat will amount to approximately $900 for tuition, orientation, and in-port field activities, and $1,590 for accommodations in four-berth cabins, which includes full board, lodging and ship transportation.

* * * *

THE FALL semester voyage will include ports in the Mediterranean, Near East, and Southeast Asia areas. The itinerary for the spring semester, 1967, voyage will be announced soon. The fall semester will sail from New York Oct. 20 and return to Los Angeles Feb. 4, 1967. The spring semester will sail from Los Angeles Feb. 7 and return to New York May 25. Both semesters are of 107 days duration.

Founded in 1861, Chapman College is a coeducational, liberal arts institution with an enrollment of some 1,800 students. Undergraduate majors are offered in 20 fields of study. Graduate study, credential, and professional programs are also available.

THE PROGRAMS offered by Chapman's Seas Division integrate regular college study and life with the experience of world travel. While the floating campus is traveling between ports, classes are held six days a week. Attendance is, of course, compulsory. The usual extra curricular activities of land-based colleges are also included, such as election of officers for student council, publications, clubs, debate, music and drama, dances, and sports.

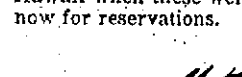

Further information may be obtained from Chapman College, 333 N. Glassell St., Orange, Calif., or from any Holland-America Line office.

TELEVISION LOG OF THE EVENING NEWS AND THE INDEPENDENT-PRESS-TELEGRAM

Bert's Eye View

By BERT RESNIK
TV and Radio Editor

THE TELEPHONES in the 20th Century-Fox publicity office jingled like AT&T had declared a fee-free holiday.

A lawyer in Anaheim wanted to know how he could start a fan club.

A Hollywood beauty-shop operator thought they might be interested in knowing that all the women were talking about it instead of the usual gossip.

The executive of an ABC-TV affiliate in Pittsburgh wanted to know how it could meet the tremendous demand for shirts and bumper strips.

A skateboard manufacturer and a man with a new idea for a soft drink sought permission to use the name.

There was no doubt about it. Across the country, from East Coast to West Coast, the new TV phenomenon had swept the nation with a broom of fanfare.

The "Batman" was here.

★ ★ ★ ★

AS THE "BATMAN," actor Adam West almost didn't make it—by his own choice.

"An actor's ego gets in the way," he said.

"I was paralyzed in fear of being immersed in the Batman costume."

If West terms it "ego," others could call it common sense. For another actor, George Reeves, had become immersed in a costume.

And when Reeves' costume series, "Superman," ended, so did the actor's career. No one wanted to hire a former Superman. He had been typed. He committed suicide.

In finally making the decision to become "Batman," it would be more apt to say that Adam's lack of ego was an important factor.

His show-business biography makes note of the fact that he has guested in 15 television series and had a featured role, Sgt. Steve Nelson, in "The Detectives" with Robert Taylor.

The biography makes mention of four Hollywood motion pictures and he recently completed filming a western in Spain, "a sort of 'Ben Hur of the Old West.' "

It's an impressive biography but Adam is not impressed.

★ ★ ★ ★

"I FEEL about myself that I'm a relative unknown," he said. "Certainly, I'm not a star.

"Stars come in all luminosities. My star appeared to be a long way off and not very bright."

Another favorable deciding factor was executive producer Bill Dozier "who had the guts to take a chance on me."

Then Adam read the opening Batman scripts by Lorenzo Semple and he realized that here was something unique and intriguing.

That's when he finally made up his mind that when "Batman" was here, so would be Adam West.

"It's timely," he said. "The audience was sick of the neo-realism, the sordidness that came out of Europe a few years ago.

"I knew we would appeal to people on many levels."

He was not surprised that the "Batman" dominated the ratings. He was not surprised that the critics' reviews were mixed.

"Controversy pleases me," he said. "We've got a healthy animal here."

★ ★ ★ ★

ADAM'S PRINCIPAL off-screen concern with the effects of the "healthy animal" was what they might do to his relationship with his two children, Jonelle, 7, and Hunter, 6.

He discussed this with them in advance. He anticipated he might become an "instant hero" to millions of children, but he still wanted to be the same old father to his own two.

It's no longer a concern. The advance preparation paid off.

"They're taking it in a realistic way," said Adam. "They're proud of their Daddy and we're just having fun with it."

To Adam, himself, it's more than fun.

"The dual character of Batman and Bruce Wayne and the bizarre and stylistic framework in which this mystery-comedy is presented gives me all the challenge I might hope for and welcome at this moment."

And when "this moment" is over and

Couples choose Las Vegas for wedding, honeymoon

Johnson-Cook

Mr. and Mrs. William B. Johnson (the former Nancy V. Cook) are now at home in Lakewood following their marriage in Las Vegas.

The bride, daughter of Mrs. Ivan M. Cook, 3461 Tulane Ave., chose a three piece white knit suit for her wedding. Mrs. Susan Brown was her matron of honor and Rodger Lord was best man for the ceremony.

The new Mrs. Johnson was graduated from Millikan High School and Long Beach City College. She was a member of Ramayana sorority. Her husband, son of Mr. and Mrs. Hal E. Johnson of La Habra, attended Fullerton Junior College, the University of Washington and Clark College.

Parents of the newlyweds honored them with a buffet dinner and champagne reception in the Hacienda Hotel following the ceremony.

Lang-Glogauer

Las Vegas was the honeymoon destination of George J. Lang and the former Camille J. Glogauer following their exchange of vows in Chapel of the Wedding Bells, Bellflower.

The bride, daughter of Mrs. Margaret Glogauer, 213 Mira Mar Ave., wore a floor-length sheath gown of white linen accented by three floating lace panels extending in back from the shoulders of the fitted bodice.

Her sole attendant was Mrs. Carol Puckett.

The bridegroom, son of Mr. and Mrs. Frank Witt, 1738 Ohio Ave., was attended by his brother, Ronald Newell, best man. Ronald Thielman and Richard Roach seated the 80 guests.

Both newlyweds are graduates of Wilson High School. Mrs. Witt, an alumna of Long Beach State College, has taught for the past three years in the Long Beach Unified School District.

The couple will reside in Long Beach.

CHECKERBOARD fashions well suited for knitters reach a zenith in a no-button Chanel-inspired silhouette topped with a matching kerchief. Poshly patterned costume takes shape in fast-to-knit Bernat yarns.

Knitting buffs—here's latest yarn

A "Passport to Fashion" collection of designs for knitters will be previewed this week at area Broadway stores by Pamela Hessler, knitting consultant and fashion authority.

Miss Hessler will present ready-to-knit costumes designed for Bernat Yarns by Mirsa of Italy Monday at Broadway Del Amo and Thursday at Broadway Los Altos. She also will be available Friday for consultation in the art needlework department of the Long Beach store.

The collection goes on a Roman holiday with its Mirsa designs which click with the new pulse of fashion in brash textures and impulsive patterns. Easy-o-follow instruction in Bernat style books provide the passport to a new world of custom-look knits.

Knit suits and coats for spring tend to show off big-as-life checkerboard patterns and follow slender, gently molded lines.

SPECIAL

STROLLIN' 20s—The fabulous Harlem of its heyday is re-created in an hour-long musical variety hour at 10 p.m., in color, ch. 2, with Harry Belafonte doubling as host and executive producer, while Oscar-winner Sidney Poitier stars as the Stroller, a philosophical narrator taking viewers on a tour of the center of Negro culture as songs and dances evoke the tempo and mood of the area's "Black Renaissance." Helping recreate some of the luster and excitement of the bygone years are Sammy Davis Jr., Diahann Carroll, Nipsey Russell, George Kirby, Joe Williams, Gloria Lynne, Brownie McGhee and — from the famed Cotton Club and Savoy Ballroom of that era—Duke Ellington.

CATMAN—Premiere. The old camp-grounds are getting crowded, and any similarity to any other serial is entirely intentional, as Our hero and his ward Reuben, the Wonderful Boy, launch a weekly crusade against the forces of evil. Tony Reese and Pepper Davis star at 10 p.m., ch. 9, as the Masked Duo strike out against the evil smuggler Dr. No-Good. (Note that station has revamped its entire schedule from 3:30 to 11 p.m. each weekday.)

TV Creates Honest Sportscasters

NEA—Television has made honest men of sportscasters, Chris Schenkel believes.

Chris says the fact that an announcer can no longer get away with overly colorful descriptions of sporting events (including plays that never occurred—something that used to happen in radio days), has caused several sports broadcasters to fall by the wayside.

A native of Bippus, Ind., 41-year-old Chris is versatile enough to handle everything from the radio description of the Clay-Patterson fight for ABC Radio to bowling, golf, football, racing and what-haveyou (that's a new sport) for ABC Television, which has him under exclusive contract.

The idea of working for one boss is delightful to Chris, who had 38 sources of income the year before he signed with ABC.

"Now," he says, "if I don't have anything to do for a few days, I can stay home with no qualms and enjoy being with my family. It's worked out well for me.

SPECIAL

STROLLIN' 20s—The fabulous Harlem of its heyday is re-created in an hour-long musical variety hour at 10 p.m., in color, ch. 2, with Harry Belafonte doubling as host and executive producer, while Oscar-winner Sidney Poitier stars as the Stroller, a philosophical narrator taking viewers on a tour of the center of Negro culture as songs and dances evoke the tempo and mood of the area's "Black Renaissance." Helping recreate some of the luster and excitement of the bygone years are Sammy Davis Jr., Diahann Carroll, Nipsey Russell, George Kirby, Joe Williams, Gloria Lynne, Brownie McGhee and — from the famed Cotton Club and Savoy Ballroom of that era—Duke Ellington.

CATMAN—Premiere. The old camp-grounds are getting crowded, and any similarity to any other serial is entirely intentional, as Our hero and his ward Reuben, the Wonderful Boy, launch a weekly crusade against the forces of evil. Tony Reese and Pepper Davis star at 10 p.m., ch. 9, as the Masked Duo strike out against the evil smuggler Dr. No-Good. (Note that station has revamped its entire schedule from 3:30 to 11 p.m. each weekday.)

Program: "The Divorce Dilemma," aired last Tuesday night on channel 2.

With 900,000 Americans divorced every year, with one in four marriages in this country winding up in divorce, "CBS Reports" took a calm if necessarily hasty look at a very large and complicated subject.

The program — "The Divorce Dilemma" — was particularly timely since New York state with its 1787 law that permits divorce on the single ground of adultery, is currently contemplating a controversial broadening of its base.

As narrator Walter Cronkite said, the subject is confused, each state has its own laws, the rich find it easier to "buy out" of an unsatisfactory marriage than the poor, and children are often the ones who suffer most.

The program was full of meaningful commentary from all sorts of good sources, reflecting the enormous range of opinion on the subject.

Cronkite, in summing up, suggested that in the divorce dilemma "we seem to be going downhill in life's most important venture, marriage."

Program: "Gene Kelly in New York, NY," aired last Monday on channel 2.

The personal charm, exuberance and gentle manliness of Gene Kelly often have made his films seem better than they were, and this was what CBS-TV counted on in his musical tribute to New York.

As sidekicks for the eternally youthful dancer, the network provided Gower Champion, now aristocratically bearded, and Tommy Steele, the young British star of the Broadway musical "Half A Sixpence"—and a more ingratiating, athletic and graceful trio of hoofers it would be difficult to find.

I frankly find it hard to be objective about any Kelly endeavor because, as with Fred Astaire, I feel myself in his debt for all the pleasure he has given me over the years—and so perhaps I enjoyed the Monday night outing more than I should have.

I say that with a sneaking feeling of guilt because I also had the suspicion that with Kelly—and his guests Champion and Steele—I should have been enjoying myself even more, and the producer and director did not approach the maximum level of excellence that was available for all to see.

Perhaps a good deal of the problem was in the overuse of Woody Allen, the comedian, whose material was below par, and who was also co-author of the script. Allen appeared to be straining, and at times his humor was unfortunately tasteless. One of the problems of being "hot," as Allen is these days, is that you are constantly in demand, and it is simply impossible to be funny all the time.

Critic Rick Du Brow of UPI

The imaginative kaledioscoping of New York City's scenic spots combined with the creative dancing of Gene Kelly made the big town almost seem like a good place to live.

In fact, if it weren't for the knowledge that Kelly himself lives in Southern California, my bags would be packed for the trip back East.

Anyway, it's a nice place to visit as long as you don't have to go there.

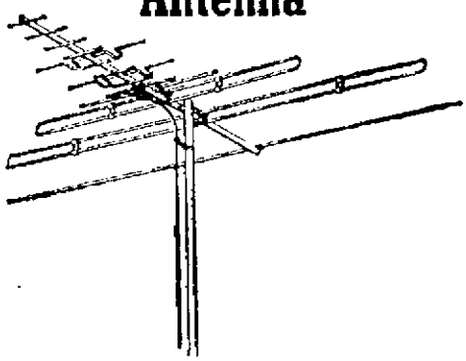

Television, in this instance, is the only way to fly.

Critic Bert Resnik of "TeleVues"

Fastest whirl of ol' New York town since a guy flew over it on a magic carpet. This was the Gene Kelly Special on CBS-TV and should rate high with the occasionals. No travelog covered more mileage—and so refreshingly.

TV Creates Honest Sportscasters

NEA—Television has made honest men of sportscasters, Chris Schenkel believes.

Chris says the fact that an announcer can no longer get away with overly colorful descriptions of sporting events (including plays that never occurred—something that used to happen in radio days), has caused several sports broadcasters to fall by the wayside.

A native of Bippus, Ind., 41-year-old Chris is versatile enough to handle everything from the radio description of the Clay-Patterson fight for ABC Radio to bowling, golf, football, racing and whathaveyou (that's a new sport) for ABC Television, which has him under exclusive contract.

The idea of working for one boss is delightful to Chris, who had 38 sources of income the year before he signed with ABC.

"Now," he says, "if I don't have anything to do for a few days, I can stay home with no qualms and enjoy being with my family. It's worked out well for me.

SPECIAL

N.Y. PHILHARMONIC — Leonard Bernstein's award-winning "Young People's Concerts" wind up their season at 7:30 p.m., ch. 2, with the 7th annual concert featuring promising young performers especially auditioned by Bernstein for the program. With the hour made up entirely of selections from Moussorgsky's "Pictures at an Exhibition," Bernstein will share his baton with three young assistant conductors, and introduce four gifted pianists —Paul Schoenfield, 19; Stephanie Sebastian, 19; David Oei, 15; and Horacio Gutierrez, 17. (Series has been renewed for another four hours during the 1966-67 season.)

FLIGHT DECK —The rigorous, and often hazardous, life of the flight deck crews are seen through color films made during two weeks aboard the carrier U.S.S. Franklin D. Roosevelt. The repeat hour is seen at 9 p.m., in color, ch. 13.

OAKLAND: Another Watts? — Explosive conditions in the Bay area city—Negro unemployment, slum housing and hostility toward law enforcement officials—are examined by Paul Udell in a KNXT news special at 10 p.m., ch. 2. Oakland civic and law enforcement officials, Negro leaders and civil rights workers are interviewed to find out what is being done to curb a potentially dangerous situation.

BEST OF SANDBERG—Eric Sevareid hosts a tribute at 10:30 p.m., ch. 2, including films of previous interviews with the poet by Edward R. Murrow and Howard K. Smith.

PETE & JOHNNY — The terror of juvenile gangs and their leaders is probed during a "Living Camera" hour at 10 p.m., ch. 9, filmed without script or rehearsal. A reformed Harlem hoodlum tries to work with the leader of a real-life gang of toughs

SPECIAL

N.Y. PHILHARMONIC — Leonard Bernstein's award-winning "Young People's Concerts" wind up their season at 7:30 p.m., ch. 2, with the 7th annual concert featuring promising young performers especially auditioned by Bernstein for the program. With the hour made up entirely of selections from Moussorgsky's "Pictures at an Exhibition," Bernstein will share his baton with three young assistant conductors, and introduce four gifted pianists —Paul Schoenfield, 19; Stephanie Sebastian, 19; David Oei, 15; and Horacio Gutierrez, 17. (Series has been renewed for another four hours during the 1966-67 season.)

FLIGHT DECK—The rigorous, and often hazardous, life of the flight deck crews are seen through color films made during two weeks aboard the carrier U.S.S. Franklin D. Roosevelt. The repeat hour is seen at 9 p.m., in color, ch. 13.

OAKLAND: Another Watts? — Explosive conditions in the Bay area city—Negro unemployment, slum housing and hostility toward law enforcement officials—are examined by Paul Udell in a KNXT news special at 10 p.m., ch. 2. Oakland civic and law enforcement officials, Negro leaders and civil rights workers are interviewed to find out what is being done to curb a potentially dangerous situation.

BEST OF SANDBERG—Eric Sevareid hosts a tribute to the 88-year-old humanist at 10:30 p.m., ch. 2, including films of previous interviews with the poet by Edward R. Murrow and Howard K. Smith.

PETE & JOHNNY — The terror of juvenile gangs and their leaders is probed during a "Living Camera" hour at 10 p.m., ch. 9, filmed without script or rehearsal. A reformed Harlem hoodlum tries to work with the leader of a real-life gang of toughs

SPECIAL

CINDERELLA—The only musical ever written for television by Richard Rodgers and the late Oscar Hammerstein II, first aired in 1957 and restaged last spring with young Lesley Ann Warren in a permanent taped version, is reprised at 7:30 p.m., in color, ch. 2, an hour more convenient for children than the previous airing. Co-starred in the beloved fairy tale is Stuart Damon, with Ginger Rogers, Walter Pidgeon, Celeste Holm, Jo Van Fleet, Pat Carroll and Barbara Ruick. And 19-year-old Miss Warren, since the original telecast, has a Cinderella tale of her own—featured in an upcoming Kildare 4-parter, and now readying for her role with Fred MacMurray in Walt Disney's "The Happiest Millionaire."

TRAVELING STARS—Lloyd Nolan, Fabian, Ruta Lee and other stars appear in person to narrate films they've taken in their travels around the world, on both business and pleasure, during a full-hour color special hosted by Bill Burrud at 8:30 p.m., ch. 13.

MICHELANGELO: The Last Giant—A Lou Hazam-produced hour last December traced the life of the artist through the painting of the Sistine Chapel. Tonight at 9, ch. 4, a second color hour picks up at that point and carries through the last half-century of his life, when he soared to his most creative heights, and ends with his death a few days short of his 89th birthday. Peter Ustinov is the voice of Michelangelo, with Jose Ferrer narrating, and the story traced through Michelangelo's sculpture, paintings, writings, architecture and letters.

Pan and Fan

We like Andy Williams but cannot listen to him on account of "A Man Called Shenandoah."

Why don't the program folks get together and not put the fine stories and stars on at the same hour and days?

Mrs. Lena A. Blair, Long Beach

Competition is American tradition.

* * * *

You won't believe this, but there are a few good laughs in some of the new color TV commercials.

Probably tops is Granny Goose, unusually good, interesting, provocative. He even uses a Litter Box for torn paper bags.

Another is the elderly lady, who is always trying to get a motor vehicle in your garage, as she goes into orbit in a bright red truck yelling, "It's King of the Road, Honey!"

The Little Old Winemaker is more entertaining in color with good settings, but the little fellow still needs a new pair of pants.

Cute little blonde, who so enthusiastically leads the Dodge rebellion, always is an attention-getter.

J. Paul Gleason, Long Beach

I do believe, I do. Commercials are funnier than ever. Sadly, the same is not true of the newer situation comedies.

* * * *

Would you please tell me whether the Andy Williams Show is done in Hollywood or New York?

Donna Steelsmith, Long Beach

Burbank.

* * * *

Would you please settle an argument between my husband and me concerning the "Old Dutch Masters" cigar commercial?

I believe second from the right, with the mustache, is Tennessee Ernie Ford. My husband says he isn't.

Mrs. W. R. Van Laningham, Fountain Valley

He isn't. He's the clean-shaven one at the end smoking a pipe.

Incidentally, the concept for the cigar commercial reportedly was created by the late Ernie Kovacs.

Camp Runamuck, McKeever and the Colonel, and Mr. Ed are three delightful, full-of-fun programs.

You know why?

"No shooting."

By the way, where has the Mr. Ed program gone?

R. Race, Long Beach

Mr. Ed has gone with the ratings' wind and not to greener pastures. By the way, where have McKeever and the Colonel gone?

* * * *

Would you tell me if "Divorce Court" is an actual life presentation as advertised?

I always feel the reunion between children (kept in judge's chambers) and a parent seem so contrived and "put-on." Also, how old are the cases presented?

Regardless, it is a very informative program.

C. Hughes, Lakewood

They are reenactments of actual cases dating back a number of years. In other words, considerable dramatic license is taken in putting together the television version. Actors, not really the divorce principals, are used.

SPECIAL

CINDERELLA—The only musical ever written for television by Richard Rodgers and the late Oscar Hammerstein II, first aired in 1957 and restaged last spring with young Lesley Ann Warren in a permanent taped version, is reprised at 7:30 p.m., in color, ch. 2, an hour more convenient for children than the previous airing. Co-starred in the beloved fairy tale is Stuart Damon, with Ginger Rogers, Walter Pidgeon, Celeste Holm, Jo Van Fleet, Pat Carroll and Barbara Ruick. And 19-year-old Miss Warren, since the original telecast, has a Cinderella tale of her own—featured in an upcoming Kildare 4-parter, and now readying for her role with Fred MacMurray in Walt Disney's "The Happiest Millionaire."

TRAVELING STARS—Lloyd Nolan, Fabian, Ruta Lee and other stars appear in person to narrate films they've taken in their travels around the world, on both business and pleasure, during a full-hour color special hosted by Bill Burrud at 8:30 p.m., ch. 13.

MICHELANGELO: The Last Giant—A Lou Hazam-produced hour last December traced the life of the artist through the painting of the Sistine Chapel. Tonight at 9, ch. 4, a second color hour picks up at that point and carries through the last half-century of his life, when he soared to his most creative heights, and ends with his death a few days short of his 89th birthday. Peter Ustinov is the voice of Michelangelo, with Jose Ferrer narrating, and the story traced through Michelangelo's sculpture, paintings, [illegible] architecture, and writings.

SPECIAL

LAREDO — Shelley Morrison, making her third guest-starring appearance as Linda Little Trees, took one look at the wedding costume she was to wear and quipped, "With an outfit like this I could maybe make the cover of Popular Mechanics." Originally signed for one small role, Miss Morrison was an immediate hit with viewers, and at 8:30 p.m., ch. 4, in color, returns with a new scheme to woo Ranger Joe Riley (William Smith) into marriage. Both Reese Bennett and Capt. Parmalee have plans to use Riley as bait to capture the persistent squaw and her gang of renegades.

POPE AND VATICAN — In the first of ten NBC color specials purchased by KCOP for a re-airing, Irving R. Levine narrates a living portrait of Pope Paul VI, produced by George Vicas on location in Rome, and repeated at 8:30 p.m., ch. 13, in color. In addition to probing the increasing role in world affairs being played by the Roman Catholic Church, hour discusses world problems, birth control, the Ecumenical Council, the Pope's personal appeal to world leaders, and everyday life at the Vatican.

Pan and Fan

We like Andy Williams but cannot listen to him on account of "A Man Called Shenandoah."

Why don't the program folks get together and not put the fine stories and stars on at the same hour and days?

Mrs. Lena A. Blair, Long Beach

Competition is American tradition.

* * * *

You won't believe this, but there are a few good laughs in some of the new color TV commercials.

Probably tops is Granny Goose, unusually good, interesting, provocative. He even uses a Litter Box for torn paper bags.

Another is the elderly lady, who is always trying to get a motor vehicle in your garage, as she goes into orbit in a bright red truck yelling, "It's King of the Road, Honey!"

The Little Old Winemaker is more entertaining in color with good settings, but the little fellow still needs a new pair of pants.

Cute little blonde, who so enthusiastically leads the Dodge rebellion, always is an attention-getter.

J. Paul Gleason, Long Beach

I do believe, I do. Commercials are funnier than ever. Sadly, the same is not true of the newer situation comedies.

* * * *

Would you please tell me whether the Andy Williams Show is done in Hollywood or New York?

Donna Steelsmith, Long Beach

Burbank.

* * * *

Would you please settle an argument between my husband and me concerning the "Old Dutch Masters" cigar commercial?

I believe second from the right, with the mustache, is Tennessee Ernie Ford. My husband says he isn't.

Mrs. W. R. Van Laningham, Fountain Valley

He isn't. He's the clean-shaven one at the end smoking a pipe.

Incidentally, the concept for the cigar commercial reportedly was created by the late Ernie Kovacs.

Camp Runamuck, McKeever and the Colonel, and Mr. Ed are three delightful, full-of-fun programs.

You know why?

"No shooting."

By the way, where has the Mr. Ed program gone?

R. Race, Long Beach

Mr. Ed has gone with the ratings' wind and not to greener pastures. By the way, where have McKeever and the Colonel gone?

* * * *

Would you tell me if "Divorce Court" is an actual life presentation as advertised?

I always feel the reunion between children (kept in judge's chambers) and a parent seem so contrived and "put-on." Also, how old are the cases presented?

Regardless, it is a very informative program.

C. Hughes, Lakewood

They are reenactments of actual cases dating back a number of years. In other words, considerable dramatic license is taken in putting together the television version. Actors, not really the divorce principals, are used.

Color Consultant Keeps Papa Cartwright Chartreuse Free

HOLLYWOOD (UPI)—Picture this if you will: Lorne (Papa Cartwright) Greene galloping into a scene dressed in electric blue denims, shocking pink neckerchief and chartreuse vest.

It's something televiewers will never see, thanks to Ed Ancona who is a member of an increasingly important segment of video technicians designated as "color consultants."

Ed, in fact, won an Emmy for his contributions to "Bonanza."

With almost five million color sets now in use, television has become acutely aware of the importance of a well-balanced color scheme. It's the color consultant's job to please the eye.

Ancona, a native of New Mexico, races around from the wardrobe department to the set decorator, to cinematographer to prop department to art director, coordinating color variations and contrasts.

EMPLOYED BY NBC, Ancona logs hundreds of miles a week rushing to the various studios where the network's shows are filmed.

"Every department of a TV show is so busy it doesn't know what the others are doing," Ancona explained. "It's up to us to make certain the colors are harmonious and effective technically—and that colors will reproduce as the creative people intended they should.

"In some cases we find blues tend to be too rich or brilliant, especially in costumes. We take the blue out of dungarees and re-dye them a less saturated color. Otherwise cowboys would be running around in luminescent pants. Reds can be too bright, too.

"The most common problem is contrast. We reduce the contrasts between the lightest white and the darkest black. That's why we don't allow pure white shirts on men.

"We get them a tattle-tale gray, but they look clean on-screen."

THE STROLLING 20's'

Belafonte Presents Harlem of Yesteryear

By JACK GAVER

NEW YORK (UPI)—Singer Harry Belafonte took time out from rehearsals at the CBS broadcast center to observe that a special television show he was preparing could best be described as a socio-musical, with strong entertainment value."

"I think," he added, "that it is exciting television."

Belafonte was referring to "The Strolling 20's," a one-hour musical variety special that is his own brainchild and in which he is doubling as host and executive producer. The CBS network will air it at 10 p.m. on Monday (channel 2 in COLOR).

It was while reading "Black Renaissance," a section of Langston Hughes' autobiographical "The Big Sea," that the singer-actor was seized with the idea of creating a video show featuring the Harlem of yesteryear.

"HARLEM IN THE 1920'S was the cultural center of Negro America," Belafonte explained. "It did not matter whether a Negro lived outside of New York—in Kansas, San Francisco, St. Louis, Chicago—Harlem was his spiritual home where, sooner or later, he hoped he would get his chance to succeed in music, literature, dance or theater."

Belafonte planned a program that would be basically entertainment, as opposed to outright documentary, evoking the tempo, nostalgia and music of New York's Harlem of 40 years ago.

Hughes, the poet-playwright, agreed to write the script, and the next step was casting.

"I spoke to Sammy Davis, Sidney Poitier, Diahann Carroll, Duke Ellington and Nipsey Russell," Belafonte said. "They agreed to come in on the project—not just for the money but because it was something they really wanted to do. Poitier, for example, had done little on television since the late 1950's, but he didn't hesitate to do this show."

POITIER IS TO APPEAR as "The Stroller," a philosophical narrator who introduces the scenes and numbers. The show is on a lavish scale with a cast of some 40 performers. Among the featured members are George Kirby, Gloria Lynne, Brownie McGhee and Joe Williams.

Scenic designer Tom John has fashioned settings with as much authenticity as possible. The climax comes in a reproduction of the interior of the famous old Savoy Ballroom, where Ellington and his band will be seen performing.

"Ellington is the only one in our show who actually worked in Harlem in the 1920s," Belafonte said. "We are not calling upon any of our players to try to impersonate the great Negro stars of the past. The show is concerned with an exciting decade in Harlem's history, and each performer will be representing collectively the singers, comedians, musicians and dancers of the period."

FLASH GORDON—While all the film factories are climbing aboard the bat-wagon to produce new series based on old comic books, KCOP goes out and buys 53 segments of the old "Flash Gordon" and "Buck Rogers" adventures, plus 5 feature films so old they're camp. Buster Crabbe and Jean Rogers star in the 1938 opener, "Deadly Ray of Mars," screening at 8 p.m., ch. 13. Station also plans an hour's spoof of all the comic book heroes March 9, with Gary Owens hosting.

16 IN WEBSTER GROVES—Postponed Feb. 8 by a special on LBJ's return from his Honolulu meeting with military and Vietnamese leaders, this filmed probe of "typical" 16-year-olds in a wealthy St. Louis suburb airs at 10 p.m., in color, ch. 2. Charles Kuralt is reporter, exploring the teenagers' attitudes toward their parents, education, marriage and their futures. (In the town of Webster Groves on Feb. 8, a basketball game and even a wedding reception had been postponed for the originally-scheduled telecast, and color sets had been set up by the Board of Education in a special viewing room so residents could watch the November-filmed hour.)

Color Consultant Keeps Papa Cartwright Chartreuse Free

HOLLYWOOD (UPI)—Picture this if you will: Lorne (Papa Cartwright) Greene galloping into a scene dressed in electric blue denims, shocking pink neckerchief and chartreuse vest.

It's something televiewers will never see, thanks to Ed Ancona who is a member of an increasingly important segment of video technicians designated as "color consultants."

Ed, in fact, won an Emmy for his contributions to "Bonanza."

With almost five million color sets now in use, television has become acutely aware of the importance of a well-balanced color scheme. It's the color consultant's job to please the eye.

Ancona, a native of New Mexico, races around from the wardrobe department to the set decorator, to cinematographer to prop department to art director, coordinating color variations and contrasts.

EMPLOYED BY NBC, Ancona logs hundreds of miles a week rushing to the various studios where the network's shows are filmed.

"Every department of a TV show is so busy it doesn't know what the others are doing," Ancona explained. "It's up to us to make certain the colors are harmonious and effective technically—and that colors will reproduce as the creative people intended they should.

"In some cases we find blues tend to be too rich or brilliant, especially in costumes. We take the blue out of dungarees and re-dye them a less saturated color. Otherwise cowboys would be running around in luminescent pants. Reds can be too bright, too.

"The most common problem is contrast. We reduce the contrasts between the lightest white and the darkest black. That's why we don't allow pure white shirts on men.

"We get them a tattle-tale gray, but they look clean on-screen."

'THE STROLLING 20's'

Belafonte Presents Harlem of Yesteryear

By JACK GAVER

NEW YORK (UPI)—Singer Harry Belafonte took time out from rehearsals at the CBS broadcast center to observe that a special television show he was preparing "could best be described as a socio-musical, with strong entertainment value."

"I think," he added, "that it is exciting television."

Belafonte was referring to "The Strolling 20's," a one-hour musical variety special that is his own brainchild and in which he is doubling as host and executive producer. The CBS network will air it at 10 p.m. on Monday (channel 2 in COLOR).

It was while reading "Black Renaissance," a section of Langston Hughes' autobiographical "The Big Sea," that the singer-actor was seized with the idea of creating a video show featuring the Harlem of yesteryear.

"HARLEM IN THE 1920'S was the cultural center of Negro America," Belafonte explained. "It did not matter whether a Negro lived outside of New York—in Kansas, San Francisco, St. Louis, Chicago—Harlem was his spiritual home where, sooner or later, he hoped he would get his chance to succeed in music, literature, dance or theater."

Belafonte planned a program that would be basically entertainment, as opposed to outright documentary, evoking the tempo, nostalgia and music of New York's Harlem of 40 years ago.

Hughes, the poet-playwright, agreed to write the script, and the next step was casting.

"I spoke to Sammy Davis, Sidney Poitier, Diahann Carroll, Duke Ellington and Nipsey Russell," Belafonte said. "They agreed to come in on the project—not just for the money but because it was something they really wanted to do. Poitier, for example, had done little on television since the late 1950's, but he didn't hesitate to do this show."

POITIER IS TO APPEAR as "The Stroller," a philosophical narrator who introduces the scenes and numbers. The show is on a lavish scale with a cast of some 40 performers. Among the featured members are George Kirby, Gloria Lynne, Brownie McGhee and Joe Williams.

Scenic designer Tom John has fashioned settings with as much authenticity as possible. The climax comes in a reproduction of the interior of the famous old Savoy Ballroom, where Ellington and his band will be seen performing.

"Ellington is the only one in our show who actually worked in Harlem in the 1920s," Belafonte said. "We are not calling upon any of our players to try to impersonate the great Negro stars of the past. The show is concerned with an exciting decade in Harlem's history, and each performer will be representing collectively the singers, comedians, musicians and dancers of the period."

'Virginian's' Judge Reaches Decision: 'Don't Fence Me In'

JOHN DEHNER

By VERNON SCOTT

HOLLYWOOD (UPI)—Television's longest series, the 90-minute "Virginian" show, is enveloped in some behind-the-scenes shenanigans which may bring about sharp changes to the program next fall.

Lee J. Cobb, the highly-paid star who has been vaguely dissatisfied with the show throughout its four-year history, is attempting to phase himself out of the cast.

As Judge Henry Garth, the patriarch of Shiloh Ranch, he has been the father figure—without which a western is doomed.

Jim Arness of "Gunsmoke" and Lorne Greene in "Bonanza" are the very image of rock-bound paternalism. It's one of the reasons both shows are still running strong.

If Cobb is successful in his bid to bow out of "The Virginian," the producers are prepared. Character actor John Dehner already has been introduced as the new manager of the Shiloh Ranch while Judge Garth has been upped to territorial governor.

DEHNER WITH HIS BRISTLING mustache and stern visage is a perfect replacement, an authoritative figure who should have little trouble keeping the young punk cowhands from stealing wagon hub-caps.

However, both NBC and Dehner would like to see the prestigious Cobb return for a fifth season.

"I'd welcome the opportunity to work with Cobb," said Dehner. "I've watched his work since 'Golden Boy' in New York back in 1936. He's one of the finest actors I've ever seen."

Cobb is anxious to clear out: "I'm phasing myself out of the series. And I've been trying to do that for some time. I'll be appearing in fewer episodes or not at all in the future, depending on negotiations.

"The series is not my idea of heaven. I've been treated respectfully and I have a host of friends on the show, but I would like to extend myself a little more. I want to do other things."

EVEN THE NETWORK is unsure of the future. One NBC representative says "The Virginian" will return with or without Cobb. But one of the show's co-stars doubts if the series will survive even if Cobb does appear for another season.

The ratings have been down recently due to a severe case of Batmanitis.

"Batman" is opposite the first half hour of the horse opera and has mortally wounded the big series. The ratings pick up for the last hour after the caped crusader leaves the air, but the damage has been done.

Dehner isn't afraid of "Batman," and neither is the rest of the cast—with the possible exception of Cobb. Maybe he knows something.

'Virginian's' Judge Reaches Decision: 'Don't Fence Me In'

JOHN DEHNER

By VERNON SCOTT

HOLLYWOOD (UPI)—Television's longest series, the 90-minute "Virginian" show, is enveloped in some behind-the-scenes shenanigans which may bring about sharp changes to the program next fall.

Lee J. Cobb, the highly-paid star who has been vaguely dissatisfied with the show throughout its four-year history, is attempting to phase himself out of the cast.

As Judge Henry Garth, the patriarch of Shiloh Ranch, he has been the father figure—without which a western is doomed.

Jim Arness of "Gunsmoke" and Lorne Greene in "Bonanza" are the very image of rock-bound paternalism. It's one of the reasons both shows are still running strong.

If Cobb is successful in his bid to bow out of "The Virginian," the producers are prepared. Character actor John Dehner already has been introduced as the new manager of the Shiloh Ranch while Judge Garth has been upped to territorial governor.

DEHNER WITH HIS BRISTLING mustache and stern visage is a perfect replacement, an authoritative figure who should have little trouble keeping the young punk cowhands from stealing wagon hub-caps.

However, both NBC and Dehner would like to see the prestigious Cobb return for a fifth season.

"I'd welcome the opportunity to work with Cobb," said Dehner. "I've watched his work since 'Golden Boy' in New York back in 1936. He's one of the finest actors I've ever seen."

Cobb is anxious to clear out: "I'm phasing myself out of the series. And I've been trying to do that for some time. I'll be appearing in fewer episodes or not at all in the future, depending on negotiations.

"The series is not my idea of heaven. I've been treated respectfully and I have a host of friends on the show, but I would like to extend myself a little more. I want to do other things."

EVEN THE NETWORK is unsure of the future. One NBC representative says "The Virginian" will return with or without Cobb. But one of the show's co-stars doubts if the series will survive even if Cobb does appear for another season.

The ratings have been down recently due to a severe case of Batmanitis.

"Batman" is opposite the first half hour of the horse opera and has mortally wounded the big series. The ratings pick up for the last hour after the caped crusader leaves the air, but the damage has been done.

Dehner isn't afraid of "Batman," and neither is the rest of the cast—with the possible exception of Cobb. Maybe he knows something.

The Human Side of Greatness

By Maymie R. Krythe

AS WE celebrate George Washington's birthday anniversary, we recall incidents about his life, and of his accomplishments. Often historically minded persons, who enjoy research, come up with new material about the "Father of His Country." It's interesting to learn more of his true characteristics, and of the human side of his character; for early biographers put him up on a pedestal.

Americans enjoy visiting Washington's stately home at Mt. Vernon, on the Potomac, and roaming through the rooms and the charming gardens. Another place connected with him is his birthplace at Wakefield. The original house burned in 1780; but many years later was rebuilt and dedicated as the George Washington Birthplace Monument. It is located 34 miles from Fredricksburg, Va., on State Road 3, and is administered by the National Parks Service.

Some tourists, while in England, might not expect to see memorials to the man who defied the British government and led the Revolutionary Army to victory over the Mother Country. However, in a prominent place, near Trafalgar Square, the National Gallery, and the historic church, St. Martins in the Fields, there is a statue of Gen. Washington.

ALSO, OWING to the work of some untiring Americans and Britishers, today it is possible to visit a place where some of our first president's forebears slept. This home, Sulgrave Manor, north of London, in Northamptonshire, is not far from the well known town of Banbury. The house was bought, restored, and then dedicated in 1921. Each day the Union Jack and the Stars and Stripes fly together over this important mecca for American visitors.

The rooms hold unusual mementoes of the President. In the Great Hall attention is called to the Washington coat of arms in one window panel. This contains a shield with some stars and stripes. It is said that the design influenced Washington when he conceived the pattern for a national flag.

The garden has a sundial and great masses of varicolored flowers. Lavendar is grown in abundance and many packets of this fragrant plant are carried back to the United States as souvenirs.

HOWEVER, THERE is one place in London where one might not expect to find data about the colonial who rebelled against British rule. But from an English friend, I learned there was material about General Washington to be seen in one of Britain's most important depositories of historical documents—the Public Records Office—in Chancery Lane. So I spent an interesting afternoon there, viewing the famous Magna Carta, the Domesday Book, and other important material connected with English history.

George Washington's career has many interesting sidelights. This portrait of Washington is generally attributed to William Winstanley.

One wall section is devoted to the Washington memorabilia. There is a letter which was written on March 16, 1781, from New Windsor, N.Y., by Washington to Gov. Henry Clinton. In it he asked permission to ship 600 hogsheads of tobacco from Virginia and Maryland, to be sold for the benefit of war prisoners.

This letter was part of the Carleton Papers, which Colonial Williamsburg gave Queen Elizabeth when she visited at Jamestown and Williamsburg in 1957.

WASHINGTON'S remarkable versatility became evident even when he was a young man. He began his military career in 1753 at the age of 21, when Gov. Dinwoodie of Virginia made him a lieutenant colonel in the Colonial Militia. At once he was sent on a scouting mission to discover what the French were doing in building forts. Then he was to send a full report back to the governor.

Therefore, today in London, the beautifully executed map of the Ohio River Valley which the young officer made after his expedition in 1753-54 is on display. The map is about 18 by 14 inches and is artistically done. When Dinwoodie received it, he got a full report of Washington's mission, which had extended to the Canadian border.

Washington reported that the French were coming down from their forts on Lake Erie, and the creek to Venangro, to build another fort. From there they would go to the forks of the Monongahela River, then on downstream, constructing forts at the most strategic places to prevent American settlements. Washington also told the governor that the Colonials would build a fort to command the Monongahela and Ohio Rivers. Thus his map and report gave a graphic picture of conditions in the Ohio Valley.

BUT ONE of the most interesting letters in the collection was in George Washington's handwriting, dated Aug. 25, 1795, and sent from Philadelphia to his old enemy, George III, and went as follows:

"Great and Good Friend!

"To testify to Your Majesty the sincerity of the Government of the United States in the negotiations I have transmitted to William Allen Deas, Secretary of the Legation to whom the affairs of the United States are committed during the absence from London of Thomas Pinckney, their Minister Plenipotentiary, the Ratification of the Treaty of Amity, Commerce, and Navigation, concluded and signed on the 19th day of Noveber, 1795, by the Plenipotentiaries of Your Majesty and of the United States; and the said William Allen Deas is instructed to take the necessary measures for the exchange of the Ratifications.

"I beseech Your Majesty to give full credence to whatever he shall say to you on the part of the United States, concerning the said Ratifications in the name of, and on the part of the United States of America when it shall be tendered by him."

(Then President George Washington ended his letter to the monarch with a wish and a prayer, which sounds quite charitable in view of King George III's belligerent attitude toward the American Revolutionists.)

"I pray God to have Your Majesty in His holy keeping."

MISS RULE: Please inform us on MAHANY and MAHONY.—R. M., Lakewood; E. M., Long Beach.

MAHANY and MAHONY are modern forms of the famous Irish clan name O'Mathghamna which translates from Gaelic as "sons of the Bear." The clan founder, a chieftain called Mathghamain, died in battle in A.D. 1014. This family were lords of a large sector of Cork in medieval Erin. Their resplendent armorial shield is in four sections, two being gold, decorated with a blue rampant lion. One of the remaining sections has a red and silver lion on a silver and red backing, while the other is silver, crossed by a red chevron between three snakes. The clan motto "Sic nos sic sacra tuemur" is the Latin form of "Thus we keep Holy things."

MISS RULE: Please explain FANTA.—E. F., J. W., Long Beach.

FANTA had its source in Bohemia, now Czechoslovakia. This Slavic name is from the ancient Slavic religious term "Fant," and means "son of the prophet or mystic."

MISS RULE: Am interested in REICHT of Germany, now changed to Wright.—J. W., Long Beach.

REICHT had several early German sources. The chief one was the 13th century word "Reidt" or "Reit" a description of the ancestor as being "curly haired." A secondary source "Reichardt, shortened to Reicht, meant "powerful ruler." The Reidt and Reit armorial shield from Cologne is silver, decorated with a green tree on a small silver shield in the center, overlying a large black "T"-cross.

MISS RULE: Please inform us on RAFFAELE.—M. S., Los Angeles; E. G., Long Beach.

RAFFAELE of Italy commemorates a forefather baptized with this name in honor of the Archangel Raphael, whose name meant "health by God." The armorial shield for this family is gold, decorated with a large blue "X"-shaped cross lying between four red flowers. On the cross are engraved five silver crescents. The most noted person with this name was the celebrated Italian painter

GEORGE WASHINGTON

The Human Side of Greatness

By Maymie R. Krythe

AS WE celebrate George Washington's birthday anniversary, we recall incidents about his life, and of his accomplishments. Often historically minded persons, who enjoy research, come up with new material about the "Father of His Country." It's interesting to learn more of his true characteristics, and of the human side of his character; for early biographers put him up on a pedestal.

Americans enjoy visiting Washington's stately home at Mt. Vernon, on the Potomac, and roaming through the rooms and the charming gardens. Another place connected with him is his birthplace at Wakefield. The original house burned in 1780; but many years later was rebuilt and dedicated as the George Washington Birthplace Monument. It is located 34 miles from Fredricksburg, Va., on State Road 3, and is administered by the National Parks Service.

Some tourists, while in England, might not expect to see memorials to the man who defied the British government and led the Revolutionary Army to victory over the Mother Country. However, in a prominent place, near Trafalgar Square, the National Gallery, and the historic church, St. Martins in the Fields, there is a statue of Gen. Washington.

ALSO, OWING to the work of some untiring Americans and Britishers, today it is possible to visit a place where some of our first president's forebears slept. This home, Sulgrave Manor, north of London, in Northamptonshire, is not far from the well known town of Banbury. The house was bought, restored, and then dedicated in 1921. Each day the Union Jack and the Stars and Stripes fly together over this important mecca for American visitors.

The rooms hold unusual mementoes of the President. In the Great Hall attention is called to the Washington coat of arms in one window panel. This contains a shield with some stars and stripes. It is said that the design influenced Washington when he conceived the pattern for a national flag.

The garden has a sundial and great masses of varicolored flowers. Lavendar is grown in abundance and many packets of this fragrant plant are carried back to the United States as souvenirs.

HOWEVER, THERE is one place in London where one might not expect to find data about the colonial who rebelled against British rule. But from an English friend, I learned there was material about General Washington to be seen in one of Britain's most important depositories of historical documents—the Public Records Office — in Chancery Lane. So I spent an interesting afternoon there, viewing the famous Magna Carta, the Domesday Book, and other important material connected with English history.

George Washington's career has many interesting sidelights. This portrait of Washington is generally attributed to William Winstanley.

One wall section is devoted to the Washington memorabilia. There is a letter which was written on March 16, 1781, from New Windsor, N.Y., by Washington to Gov. Henry Clinton. In it he asked permission to ship 600 hogsheads of tobacco from Virginia and Maryland, to be sold for the benefit of war prisoners.

This letter was part of the Carleton Papers, which Colonial Williamsburg gave Queen Elizabeth when she visited at Jamestown and Williamsburg in 1957.

WASHINGTON'S remarkable versatility became evident even when he was a young man. He began his military career in 1753 at the age of 21, when Gov. Dinwoodie of Virginia made him a lieutenant colonel in the Colonial Militia. At once he was sent on a scouting mission to discover what the French were doing in building forts. Then he was to send a full report back to the governor.

Therefore, today in London, the beautifully executed map of the Ohio River Valley which the young officer made after his expedition in 1753-54 is on display. The map is about 18 by 14 inches and is artistically done. When Dinwoodie received it, he got a full report of Washington's mission, which had extended to the Canadian border.

Washington reported that the French were coming down from their forts on Lake Erie, and the creek to Venangro, to build another fort. From there they would go to the forks of the Monongahela River, then on downstream, constructing forts at the most strategic places to prevent American settlements. Washington also told the governor that the Colonials would build a fort to command the Monongahela and Ohio Rivers. Thus his map and report gave a graphic picture of conditions in the Ohio Valley.

BUT ONE of the most interesting letters in the collection was in George Washington's handwriting, dated Aug. 25, 1795, and sent from Philadelphia to his old enemy, George III, and went as follows:

"Great and Good Friend!

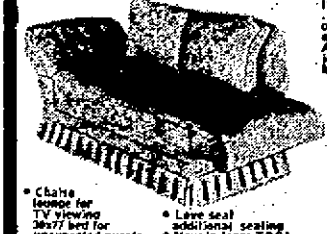

"To testify to Your Majesty the sincerity of the Government of the United States in the negotiations I have transmitted to William Allen Deas, Secretary of the Legation to whom the affairs of the United States are committed during the absence from London of Thomas Pinckney, their Minister Plenipotentiary, the Ratification of the Treaty of Amity, Commerce, and Navigation, concluded and signed on the 19th day of Noveber, 1795, by the Plenipotentiaries of Your Majesty and of the United States; and the said William Allen Deas is instructed to take the necessary measures for the exchange of the Ratifications.

"I beseech Your Majesty to give full credence to whatever he shall say to you on the part of the United States, concerning the said Ratifications in the name of, and on the part of the United States of America when it shall be tendered by him."

(Then President George Washington ended his letter to the monarch with a wish and a prayer, which sounds quite charitable in view of King George III's belligerent attitude toward the American Revolutionists.)

"I pray God to have Your Majesty in His holy keeping."

IT TOOK SOME DOING!

'Wackiest School in Navy'

By EV HOSKING

Men and women representing both the Air Force and the Navy gather informally in class in public relations in Naval Reserve Officers School at California State College at Long Beach. Above, control systems are demonstrated to students of NROS 11-4 by Cmdr. C. Thomas Dean, school commander. Left, inspections keep students alert. School has record of high marks in these annual inspections.

"THE WACKIEST School in the Navy" isn't the name of a TV show.

It's the title—very, very unofficially—of Naval Reserve Officers School 11-4 at California State College, Long Beach.

A designation like that isn't easily achieved—it takes some doing.

Claim to fame for NROS 11-4 comes from the fact that it is probably the only service school in the country that all branches of the military service could agree on at the same time, at the same place and without a dissenting vote.

Agreement came on the fact that NROS 11-4 is the best school of its type in the nation.

THE NAVY said so officially last year when the school, then under command of Capt. H. B. Frishman, received 3.98 points out of a possbile 4.0 in their annual inspection.

This year, under the command of Cmdr. C. Thomas Dean, the unit seems destined to equal or break last year's record rating.

The other branches of the service, the Air Force, the Army, the Marine Corps and the Coast Guard testify to the top ranking of the school with their attendance.

So do the women—with the WAFS, WAVES and WACS represented.

Some of the wags point out that if the other branches of the service continue descending on the school as they have in the past, pretty soon it is going to be pretty hard to find a seat for a naval officer in the naval school.

TYPICAL OF THE students in the school is an attractive Long Beach housewife—pert Barbara London, who, on Thursday nights when she attends NROS 11-4, tacks Major in front of her name.

This has its disadvantages, too. Because on Thursday night she is outranked by her husband, Col. Jack London, a former Air Force pilot who also attends the school.

Barbara has had her share of adventure during her military career. As a member of the WASPS during World War II she was a member of the women's service pilots group which ferried everything from fighters to bombers for the old Army Air Forces.

She is the only woman in the history of the armed forces to be awarded the Air Medal for her service to the nation.

Barbara for a time during World War II also served as an acrobatic instructor and, today, when she isn't too busy with her family, finds time to do a little flight instructing at Long Beach Airport.

SO WHAT DOES the famous woman pilot study at NROS 11-4? Just a mighty difficult course entitled "Counterinsurgency Warfare."

Cmdr. O. H. Cowles, U. S. Coast Guard, is another who has spent a good part of his life flying planes and helicopters all over the globe on rescue missions for the Coast Guard. These days he is employed by the Douglas Aircraft Co., and keeps his Reserve status in good standing by attending the Navy School.

The ex-Coast Guard pilot spends his time studying public relations.

There's a reason for the wide variance between the actual military jobs of the students and the type of courses they take, according to Cmdr. Dean.

Most of them, he says, are fully qualified in their military specialties and are seeking a broader background in subjects unrelated to their past experience—all of which helps a lot toward promotion.

"WE DON'T SEE anything peculiar at all," he says, "about having a Marine infantryman studying one of the Navy's specialties like anti-submarine warfare. It will make him a better all-around officer."

NROS 11-4 actually has a population of about 380 students—a good percentage of them from other branches of the service.

Cmdr. Dean and NROS 11-4 maintain the main branch of the school at Long Beach State, but they also have two other "campuses"—one at the Marine Corps Air Facility in Santa Ana and the other at the U. S. Naval Training Center on Terminal Island.

A GREAT deal of the Navy Officers School to other branches of the service is the variety of courses offered. They range from Nuclear Power to Industrial Relations and Oceanography to the Economics of National Security.

The career Reservist is interested in this because it makes him a better officer.

Being a better officer, from the selfish point of view, enhances chances for promotion.

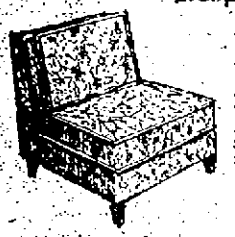

From the patriotic point of view, being a better officer will allow him, or her, to serve the United States better in time of emergency.

"And, as Cmdr. Dean says, "corny as it may sound to some—there is only one reason for being an officer in the Reserve forces of the United States. That is to serve in time of need."

Along With Things We Must Do, Why Not Try the Unnecessary, Too?

By Enola Chamberlin

WE HEAR so much about the necessary things in life. The things we should do or must do. Makes us want to take a walk in space or come down without lowering our landing gear. Makes us consider doing the unnecessary for a change. Well, why shouldn't we?

It isn't necessary to write to Dr. Warden, a long ago friend, when we see by the papers that he's just performed a heart operation and saved a life. He's a big shot now. Wasn't so much when we knew him. He won't be expecting a note of congratulation from us. Probably won't care a bang. Maybe won't even remember us.

But, it isn't necessary, so we were going to do it, weren't we? So we do.

AND WHAT do you suppose? We get an answer back from Dr. Warden. He remembered us. And how pleased he was to hear from us. Brought a bit more sunshine into his day, made the work he was doing more pleasant, more regarding.

And us? We never got so much pleasure for doing a necessary thing. Never were so rewarded. Might try it again sometime.

That sometime came. We were writing a letter to a friend who loves cats. Can't see a cat or a picture of a cat without thinking of her. And there was that article about cats with those pictures in that magazine in that stack of old papers on the porch.

We know she'd enjoy both the pictures and the article. But surely it's unnecessary to dig up the magazine, cut out the material and send it all to her. Surely writing her a letter is enough.

BUT WAIT UP. We were going to do the unnecessary. We hunt out the magazine, clip pictures and article, put them in a large envelope with pasteboard to protect them, and get them into the mail.

Back comes a letter at once, and by air mail in the bargain. She generally waits weeks to answer.

How overjoyed she was. She'd read the article over and over. And those heavenly pictures. She'd frame them so she could keep them. How wonderful of us to think of her and to go to all that trouble of sending the things.

Her pleasure spilled over to us, making our spirits soar. Necessary things? Why, the doing of them can't hold a laser beam to the doing of the unnecessary ones.

But what's this? Bill, good old Bill, is going through bankruptcy! It isn't necessary to see him. Might be impertinent. Surely he wouldn't want us to any more than we want to. So, we don't go

BUT SOMETHING keeps pricking at us. It isn't necessary to go see Bill. So, holding to our contract with ourselves, about doing the unnecessary things we can't be content. We go.

Good old Bill might have been embarrassed. But if he was it was washed away by his delight in seeing us. He needed his friends more than he'd ever needed them in his life. He couldn't approach them. They might think he was expecting them to help him.

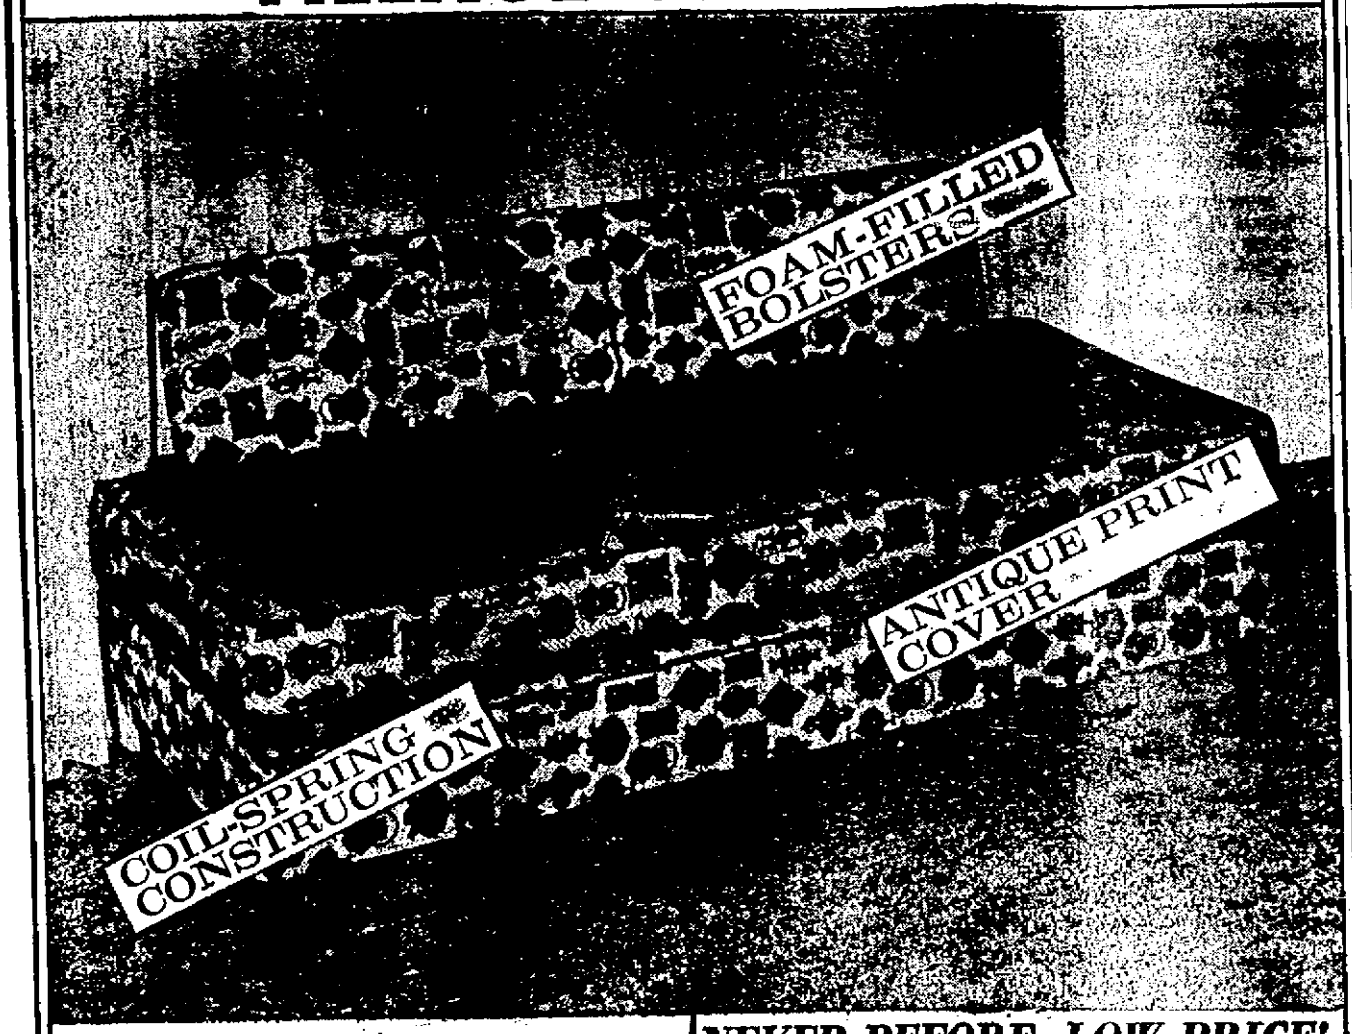

But how wonderful, how tear-starting wonderful for them to come to him. How morale-building for them to let him know they were still his friends. Make it so much easier for him to face what he had to face.

What a thankful sigh we heaved that we had come. We were paid one hundred times over for doing the unnecessary. And surely that was enough to make us want to do it again and again whenever the opportunity presented itself.

'Wackiest School in Navy'

By EV HOSKING

Men and women representing both the Air Force and the Navy gather informally in class in public relations in Naval Reserve Officers School at California State College at Long Beach. Above, control systems are demonstrated to students of NROS 11-4 by Cmdr. C. Thomas Dean, school commander. Left, inspections keep students alert. School has record of high marks in these annual inspections.

"THE WACKIEST School in the Navy" isn't the name of a TV show.

It's the title—very, very unofficially—of Naval Reserve Officers School 11-4 at California State College, Long Beach.

A designation like that isn't easily achieved—it takes some doing.

Claim to fame for NROS 11-4 comes from the fact that it is probably the only service school in the country that all branches of the military service could agree on at the same time, at the same place and without a dissenting vote.

Agreement came on the fact that NROS 11-4 is the best school of its type in the nation.

THE NAVY said so officially last year when the school, then under command of Capt. H. B. Frishman, received 3.98 points out of a possbile 4.0 in their annual Inspection.

This year, under the command of Cmdr. C. Thomas Dean, the unit seems destined to equal or break last year's record rating.

The other branches of the service, the Air Force, the Army, the Marine Corps and the Coast Guard testify to the top ranking of the school with their attendance.

So do the women—with the WAFS, WAVES and WACS represented.

Some of the wags point out that if the other branches of the service continue descending on the school as they have in the past, pretty soon it is going to be pretty hard to find a seat for a naval officer in the naval school.

TYPICAL OF THE students in the school is an attractive Long Beach housewife—pert Barbara London, who, on Thursday nights when she attends NROS 11-4, tacks Major in front of her name.

This has its disadvantages, too. Because on Thursday night she is outranked by her husband, Col. Jack London, a former Air Force pilot who also attends the school.

Barbara has had her share of adventure during her military career. As a member of the WASPS during World War II she was a member of the women's service pilots group which ferried everything from fighters to bombers for the old Army Air Forces.

She is the only woman in the history of the armed forces to be awarded the Air Medal for her service to the nation.

Barbara for a time during World War II also served as an acrobatic instructor and, today, when she isn't too busy with her family, finds time to do a little flight instructing at Long Beach Airport.

SO WHAT DOES the famous woman pilot study at NROS 11-4? Just a mighty difficult course entitled "Counterinsurgency Warfare."

Cmdr. O. H. Cowles, U. S. Coast Guard, is another who has spent a good part of his life flying planes and helicopters all over the globe on rescue missions for the Coast Guard. These days he is employed by the Douglas Aircraft Co., and keeps his Reserve status in good standing by attending the Navy School.

The ex-Coast Guard pilot spends his time studying public relations.

There's a reason for the wide variance between the actual military jobs of the students and the type of courses they take, according to Cmdr. Dean.

Most of them, he says, are fully qualified in their military specialties and are seeking a broader background in subjects unrelated to their past experience—all of which helps a lot toward promotion.

"WE DON'T SEE anything peculiar at all," he says, "about having a Marine infantryman studying one of the Navy's specialties like anti-submarine warfare. It will make him a better all-around officer."

NROS 11-4 actually has a population of about 380 students—a good percentage of them from other branches of the service.

Cmdr. Dean and NROS 11-4 maintain the main branch of the school at Long Beach State, but they also have two other "campuses"—one at the Marine Corps Air Facility in Santa Ana and the other at the U. S. Naval Training Center on Terminal Island.

A GREAT deal of the Navy Officers School to other branches of the service is the variety of courses offered. They range from Nuclear Power to Industrial Relations and Oceanography to the Economics of National Security.

The career Reservist is interested in this because it makes him a better officer.

Being a better officer, from the selfish point of view, enhances chances for promotion.

From the patriotic point of view, being a better officer will allow him, or her, to serve the United States better in time of emergency.

"And, as Cmdr. Dean says, "corny as it may sound to some—there is only one reason for being an officer in the Reserve forces of the United States. That is to serve in time of need."

BEWARE!

of That Gun in Your Home

Story and Photos
By BILL HAZLETT

GUNS ARE NOT dangerous — but the people who handle them often are.

Firearms are a symbol of masculinity, and many a virile Southlander prides himself on his ability with rifle or pistol. Men like guns, and millions own them. Every teen-ager boy wants a gun of his own, and thousands of "plinking" rifles are passed out every year as Christmas and birthday presents.

A gun in the house provides a man with a feeling of security. Surely, with his trusty pistol, the average guy feels he would be able to overpower and capture any prowler who might invade his domain.

Sometimes this is true. Yet, for every burglar captured by a gun-toting homeowner, there are a score of tragic, and sometimes fatal, gun accidents in Long Beach homes.

DURING 1965 there were at least 23 cases which the police recorded as "accidental shooting." This toll does not include the dozens of others reported in Signal Hill, Seal Beach, Compton and other neighboring cities and communities.

If you don't think guns are dangerous, ask almost any milkman, or newspaper carrier. Scores have been threatened, or shot at, by some foggy-eyed citizen who awoke and saw a form "sneaking" into his yard.

Or, ask a policeman. Veteran officers will tell you that most accidental shooting victims are wounded with an unfamiliar gun some homeowner bought to protect his property.

Take, for example, a recent case in the Midwest. A homeowner was suddenly awakened when he heard his car being backed from the driveway. A peek out the window confirmed his hearing. Sure enough, some thief was taking his new car.

QUICKLY HE reached under his pillow and grabbed the gun he always kept there. The range was about 150 feet, and all he could see was a dark form behind the steering wheel, but his aim was true.

The car stalled against the far curb. The homeowner ran out and found the driver slumped over the steering wheel, a bullet through his brain.

That was when the homeowner suddenly realized his own car was still in the driveway.

Less than an hour later he was sobbing hysterically as he related the incident to police. He had shot and killed a doctor making an emergency house call. The doctor had merely pulled into the driveway to turn around.

An isolated case? Perhaps, but gun accidents — always tragic — happen all the time.

A SIGNAL HILL police officer, home for a brief nap after a long tour of duty, lay down on a living room couch near where his young son was playing in a playpen.

While his policeman father was asleep, the inquisitive youngster climbed out of his playpen and toddled over to the couch. There, he managed to unholster his father's pistol, and while examining it, accidentally shot himself. The wound, which shattered his tiny arm, required much surgery and many months to heal.

A few months ago two teen-age Belmont Shore brothers were examining guns while their mother was away. The inspection turned to horseplay, and one of the boys was fatally wounded. The shock and horror of that accident will mar forever the life of the surviving brother.

Of course, not all gun accidents are fatal. Many a would-be gunslinger wounds himself in the leg or hip practicing the fast-draw techniques of the old west.

Careless cleaning leads to dozens of accidental wounds. A gun owner, unfamiliar with his weapon, and untrained in its use, often shoots himself, or some other member of his family, while attempting to clean the weapon.

EVEN POLICE officers and deputy sheriffs—men who live constantly with guns—are constantly reminded of safety requirements.

In a recent training bulletin for Long Beach police officers, Lt. Don Tubbs warned: "An officer, whose gun becomes a part of his clothing after a few years, often has a natural, but dangerous, tendency to become less cautious while handling firearms.

"Perhaps the saying—'familiarity breeds contempt'—is true in the sense that most officers eventually take their guns for granted. Even expert shooters and firearms instructors have caused gun accidents, not because they did not know the principles of gun safety, but because, through familiartiy, they lost some of the necessary re-

Innocent enough as an inanimate object in a home desk drawer but pure deadliness in the hands of a toddler or an inquisitive teen-ager who might pick it up, that's a revolver left unguarded, easily accessible—and loaded! Proper training in handling firearms can be a major deterrent to gun accidents, as exemplified by Sgt. Bob Shaw, Long Beach Police Pistol Rangemaster; Dr. Donald Crawford and his son James, on the range firing line. Far left, loaded rifle left behind a door is invitation to tragedy.

Along With Things We Must Do, Why Not Try the Unnecessary, Too?

By Enola Chamberlin

WE HEAR so much about the necessary things in life. The things we should do or must do. Makes us want to take a walk in space or come down without lowering our landing gear. Makes us consider doing the unnecessary for a change. Well, why shouldn't we?

It isn't necessary to write to Dr. Warden, a long ago friend, when we see by the papers that he's just performed a heart operation and saved a life. He's a big shot now. Wasn't so much when we knew him. He won't be expecting a note of congratulation from us. Probably won't care a bang. Maybe won't even remember us.

But, it isn't necessary, so we were going to do it, weren't we? So we do.

AND WHAT do you suppose? We get an answer back from Dr. Warden. He remembered us. And how pleased he was to hear from us. Brought a bit more sunshine into his day, made the work he was doing more pleasant, more regarding.

And us? We never got so much pleasure for doing a necessary thing. Never were so rewarded. Might try it again sometime.

That sometime came. We were writing a letter to a friend who loves cats. Can't see a cat or a picture of a cat without thinking of her. And there was that article about cats with those pictures in that magazine in that stack of old papers on the porch.

We know she'd enjoy both the pictures and the article. But surely it's unnecessary to dig up the magazine, cut out the material and send it all to her. Surely writing her a letter is enough.

BUT WAIT UP. We were going to do the unnecessary. We hunt out the magazine, clip pictures and article, put them in a large envelope with pasteboard to protect them, and get them into the mail.

Back comes a letter at once, and by air mail in the bargain. She generally waits weeks to answer.

How overjoyed she was. She'd read the article over and over. And those heavenly pictures. She'd frame them so she could keep them. How wonderful of us to think of her and to go to all that trouble of sending the things.

Her pleasure spilled over to us, making our spirits soar. Necessary things? Why, the doing of them can't hold a laser beam to the doing of the unnecessary ones.

But what's this? Bill, good old Bill, is going through bankruptcy! It isn't necessary to see him. Might be impertinent. Surely he wouldn't want us to any more than we want to. So, we don't go

BUT SOMETHING keeps pricking at us. It isn't necessary to go see Bill. So, holding to our contract with ourselves, about doing the unnecessary things, we can't be content. We go.

Good old Bill might have been embarrassed. But if he was it was washed away by his delight in seeing us. He needed his friends more than he'd ever needed them in his life. He couldn't approach them. They might think he was expecting them to help him.

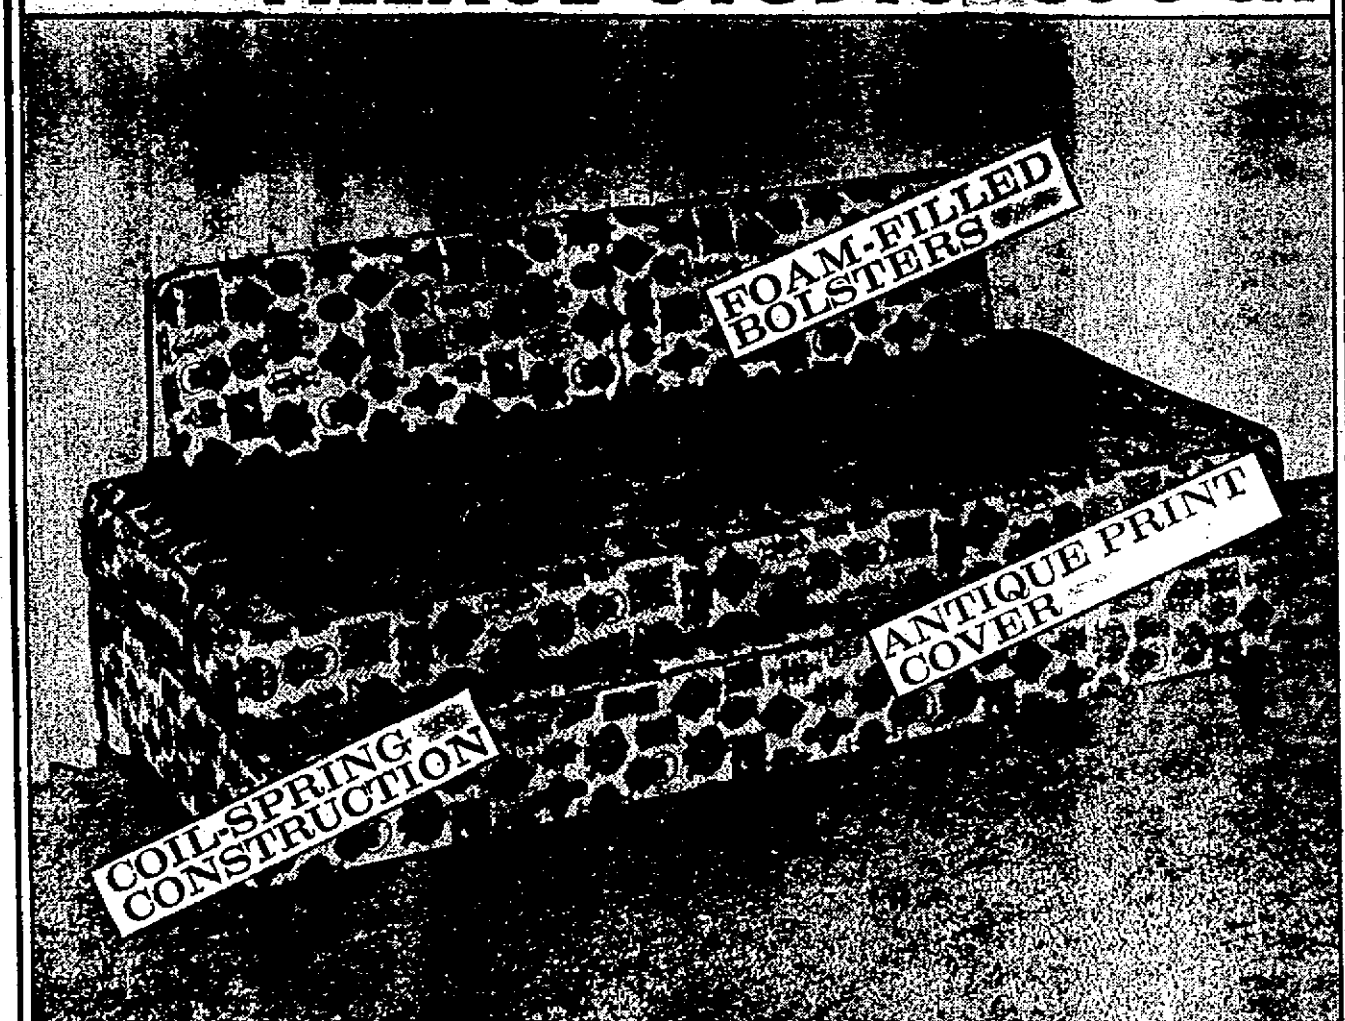

But how wonderful, how tear-starting wonderful for them to come to him. How morale-building for them to let him know they were still his friends. Make it so much easier for him to face what he had to face.

What a thankful sigh we heaved that we had come. We were paid one hundred times over for doing the unnecessary. And surely that was enough to make us want to do it again and again whenever the opportunity presented itself.

Death at Cerro Gordo

HIGH in the California Sierra, 20 miles east of Lone Pine, fireworks erupted once again. And a few old-timers hotly debated how many men were going to die.

"Cerro Gordo," they said, "is at it again."

Cerro Gordo, meaning Fat Hill, once the second richest silver mine in the nation, was formerly the scene of almost continuous bloodshed, with shootings and blastings rocking the High Sierra.

The fireworks this time, however, were created by motion picture technicians for Paramount Pictures' outdoor adventure drama "Nevada Smith," starring Steve McQueen in the title role of the character created by Harold Robbins in his best-selling novel, "The Carpetbaggers."

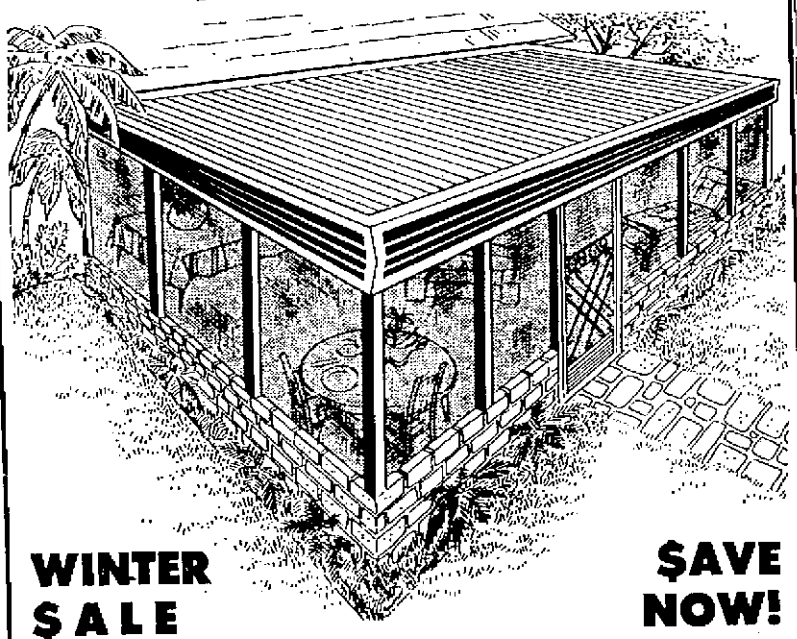

PRODUCER-director Henry Hathaway selected the almost conical mountain to film the violent opening of "Nevada Smith," showing McQueen arriving at the mining shack to discover the mutilated bodies of his parents, killed by three gunslingers. The gunmen, Karl Malden, Arthur Kennedy and Martin Landau — in keeping with Cerro Gordo's bloody history — have tortured and killed the parents, searching for the precious metal.

The 1890s period of the film coincides with Cerro Gordo's flaming past. The original "strike," in which the mountain was entered from the top, had proved so rich that interlopers began tunneling into the base from all sides. One such illegal shaft, running more than a mile into the mountain, was used for scenes in "Nevada Smith."

The original owners promptly tried to stop these claim jumpers, stationing armed guards at high strategic points. The death toll, on both sides, mounted daily.

HATHAWAY selected this site, well aware of the mine's history. Students of motion pictures will recall that it was in this Lone Pine area, 30 years ago, that the producer-director, then a young unknown, filmed "Lives of a Bengal Lancer." Since then, Hathaway has returned time and again to the High Sierra, selecting almost inaccessible filming sites.

Ghost Town Silver

Randsburg Stirs to Life

By Warren & Barbara Transue

SLEEPY LITTLE Randsburg, a Rip Van Winkle in the heart of California's Mojave Desert, is rubbing its eyes and showing signs of awakening from its ghost town slumbers.

Recent reopening of some of the long-neglected mines in the area is partially responsible for the sandman's departure. Another reason for Randsburg's revival is the discovery by a lot of folks that the little desert hideaway is the perfect retreat from the big city's bustle and confusion. And pensioners have found that the low cost of retirement in Randsburg is the closest anyone can get these days to pre-inflation living.

Randsburg is the home of the fabled Yellow Aster Mine, born in 1895 when F. M. Mooers, John Singleton and C. A. Burcham, homeward bound from a gold dry-washing expedition in the Rand Mountain District, noticed gold particles on a ledge above them gleaming in the sunlight. They broke down some of the rock and exposed an incredible gold vein which, by the time the mine was closed years later by labor troubles, produced a whopping $22 million in gold.

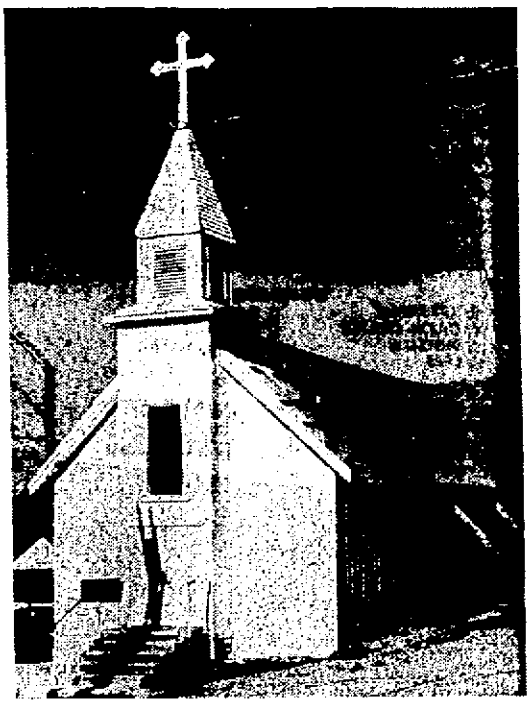

THE LOW price of gold ($35 an ounce) and the high cost of mining make most gold mining operations today highly impractical, so except for the activities of a handful of prospectors who work the tailings there occasionally, the Yellow Aster—named not for the desert flower but for a book by Iota—enjoys perpetual siesta in the warm desert sun. At last August's Old-Timers' Mining Celebration groups of visitors had the opportunity of touring the famous Yellow Aster, with its 750-foot open pit and ghostly stamp mill remains.

Although the Yellow Aster is no longer in operation, a flurry of new activity revolves around the Kelly Mine in nearby Red Mountain. The Kelly Mine's production record in the boom years closely approximated that of its famous companion, and its recent reactivation, this time for silver, has brought a population swell to the little community. Once again the agreeable noise of happy youngsters is heard on the hillside as miners move in with their families. Tiny Randsburg no longer has schools of its own, but the grade school children travel by bus to Johannesburg, several miles distant, and the high schoolers commute to Ridgecrest, near the China Lake Naval Testing Station.

RETIREES LOOKING for an inexpensive place to locate are delighted to find that Randsburg property is still "dirt cheap," that rentals are fantastically low, and that taxes are just "peanuts." And better still, they discover that the clear desert air of the Mojave often works wonders for people who have for years battled sinus, bronchial, or pulmonary problems. For the same reasons, a number of families still years away from retirement have purchased Randsburg cottages for weekend and vacation use. Such families, working together in their spare time, have Heirloom knickknacks provide homey touches throughout the house. Oak is used throughout the home.

...Something New

By Stella George

MR. AND MRS. Joseph Pinola feel that their home, located at 3435 Val Verde Ave. (El Dorado Park Estates), represents the highest degree of preplanning which can be incorporated in a new home. The initial evidence is found in the exterior landscaping, presenting a unique design of shrubbery and trees which have already reached full maturity. A large black pine tree, house-top high, extends gracefully over the driveway. A well-manicured pepper tree on the opposite side accentuates the balanced approach. Year-around green is emphasized.

The impression of total home utilization is given immediately upon entering the spacious entry hall. The entrance leads directly to the step-down living room where a mixture of various periods of furniture presents a scene of complete comfort. The variety is evidenced in the contemporary sofa, the teakwood Swedish piano and the solid oak table which was once the dining table in the home of relatives three generations past.

ALL THE ROOMS, including the bathrooms, are carpeted in beige and off-white. In the living room, walls are sand gray with shutters painted the same shade. Draperies are beige and white open weave. Furnishings and accessories include an old teak piano chair, an oak rocking chair done

Ghost Town Silver

Randsburg Stirs to Life

By Warren & Barbara Transue

SLEEPY LITTLE Randsburg, a Rip Van Winkle in the heart of California's Mojave Desert, is rubbing its eyes and showing signs of awakening from its ghost town slumbers.

Recent reopening of some of the long-neglected mines in the area is partially responsible for the sandman's departure. Another reason for Randsburg's revival is the discovery by a lot of folks that the little desert hideaway is the perfect retreat from the big city's bustle and confusion. And pensioners have found that the low cost of retirement in Randsburg is the closest anyone can get these days to pre-inflation living.

Randsburg is the home of the fabled Yellow Aster Mine, born in 1895 when F. M. Mooers, John Singleton and C. A. Burcham, homeward bound from a gold dry-washing expedition in the Rand Mountain District, noticed gold particles on a ledge above them gleaming in the sunlight. They broke down some of the rock and exposed an incredible gold vein which, by the time the mine was closed years later by labor troubles, produced a whopping $22 million in gold.

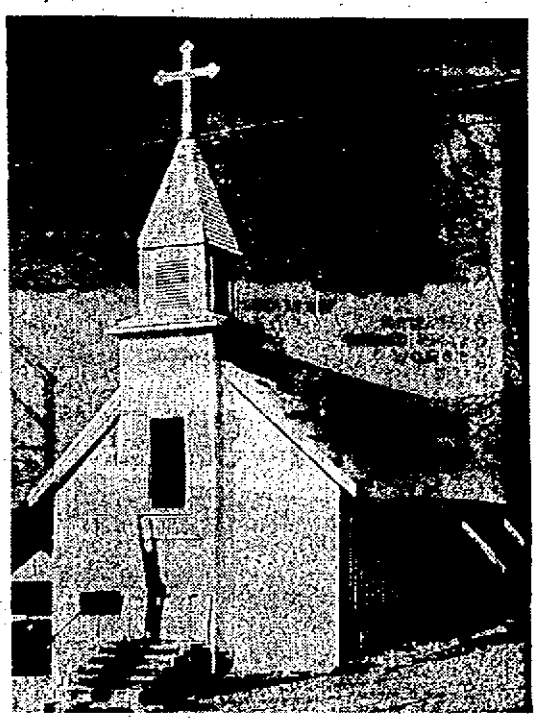

THE LOW price of gold ($35 an ounce) and the high cost of mining make most gold mining operations today highly impractical, so except for the activities of a handful of prospectors who work the tailings there occasionally, the Yellow Aster—named not for the desert flower but for a book by Iota—enjoys perpetual siesta in the warm desert sun. At last August's Old-Timers' Mining Celebration groups of visitors had the opportunity of touring the famous Yellow Aster, with its 750-foot open pit and ghostly stamp mill remains.

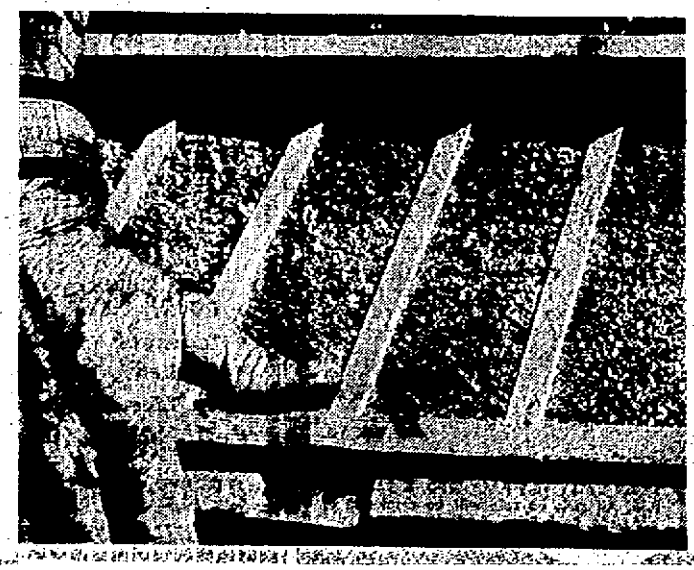

Although the Yellow Aster is no longer in operation, a flurry of new activity revolves around the Kelly Mine in nearby Red Mountain. The Kelly Mine's production record in the boom years closely approximated that of its famous companion, and its recent reactivation, this time for silver, has brought a population swell to the little community. Once again the agreeable noise of happy youngsters is heard on the hillside as miners move in with their families. Tiny Randsburg no longer has schools of its own, but the grade school children travel by bus to Johannesburg, several miles distant, and the high schoolers commute to Ridgecrest, near the China Lake Naval Testing Station.

RETIREES LOOKING for an inexpensive place to locate are delighted to find that Randsburg property is still "dirt cheap," that rentals are fantastically low, and that taxes are just "peanuts." And better still, they discover that the clear desert air of the Mojave often works wonders for people who have for years battled sinus, bronchial, or pulmonary problems. For the same reasons, a number of families still years away from retirement have purchased Randsburg cottages for weekend and vacation use. Such families, working together in their spare time, have

Gold was its founding cause but silver is bringing Randsburg back to activity from ghost town existence. Top left, bottle with 12 ounces of gold—collected at an hourly wage of only about $2! Top right, Randsburg's Main Street. Center left, group tours open pit of Yellow Aster Mine and, right, one of two Randsburg churches. in antique gold velvet, a vast collection of candleholders, a chair with a caned seat and back, an oak hearth clock patented in 1882, an old coal pail from Pennsylvania, and a grandmother's basket to hold magazines. Gay pillows pick up the colors in original oils and water colors over the sofa. An old piano bench has been converted into a unique television stand so that the television can be moved from room to room as desired.

Another view of the living room. Converted end table and rocker are heirloom pieces.

THE KITCHEN is in white tile, with brushed chrome appliances and walnut-stained ash cabinets. An oak drop-leaf table serves the breakfast area. A collection of baskets decorates the wall above the table. Homey touches include such items as an heirloom coffee grinder and salt container.

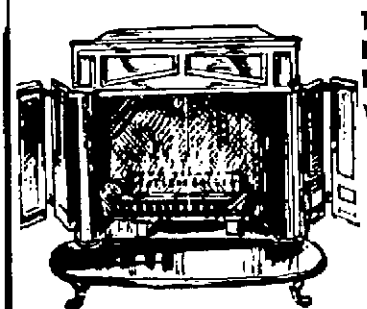

Walnut-stained ash cabinets line a wall of the study. A large walnut desk has a glass top which weighs 135 pounds. The comfortable swivel chair is black leather. Unusual items such as old flat irons, a postal scale, and a barometer are used as book ends.

Daughter Mary's bedroom was furnished at little expense but with great imagination. The brass bed has a beige spread with gold scatter pillows. The desk is honey oak with a teak chair. A basket light serves the bed and end table. An oak ice cream chair is sprayed off-white. A bulletin board with a frame painted to match the wall holds treasures and mementoes.

Son Jim gladly shares his room with Teddy the dog. Their bed has a gold corduroy, fitted cover. Furnishings and accessories are complete: a handy and attractive old oak bookkeeping table with a black linoleum top, adjustable shelves for books, awards and pictures; a bulletin board, a TV, chest of drawers, swivel chair, and a lamp made from an old whisky jug.

TWIN BEDS in the master bedroom have beige spreads. An old-fashioned oak rocker is upholstered in antique gold velvet. A family art gallery decorates one wall. A large window overlooks the full greenery of the fine landscaping.

Seven trees grow in the rear yard. Redwood benches are set at both extremes of the circular path to provide adequate room for guests. The longer bench is built to circle a low brick fire ring which provides both warmth and atmosphere.

Biscuits Spark a Meal

Hot biscuits can perk up even dull meals, and when served for breakfast or dinner or with fruit for luncheon, they really come into their own.

By Mildred K. Flanary
Southland Magazine Home Economics Editor.

HOT BISCUITS, an old-fashioned favorite in all parts of the country, transform any meal into a special occasion.

Served at breakfast with bacon and eggs, biscuits start everyone off for the day with a smile. With cheese and fresh fruit, they make a light and tempting lunch. Buttered hot biscuits are good enough to eat alone, but the crispness of apples and the sharpness of aged cheese enhance their moist, flaky texture. For dinner, with fish, chicken or beef, homemade biscuits are the crowning touch.

Now available in your area is biscuit mix, ready-measured in a convenient new package, containing one-cup packets.

Here is the recipe for biscuits made the good and easy way with ready-measured biscuit mix, plus five variations for delicious homemade biscuits every time:

Biscuits

Heat oven to 450° (hot). Add ⅔ cup milk all at once to 2 packets* of Bisquick. Stir with fork into a soft dough. Beat 20 strokes. It will be stiff, but sticky. Roll dough around on cloth-covered board lightly dusted with Bisquick to prevent sticking. Knead gently 8 to 10 times to smooth up dough. Roll ½" thick. Biscuits double in size in baking. Dip cutter in flour. Cut close together to save re-rolling. Bake on ungreased baking sheet 10 to 15 min.; close together for soft sides, 1" apart for crusty sides. Makes twelve 2" biscuits.

*Each packet contains 1 cup of Bisquick.

Variations

BUTTERMILK BISCUITS: Follow recipe for Biscuits (above)—except use ⅔ cup buttermilk in place of milk. Roll or pat into square ½" thick. Cut with knife in 9 or 12 square pieces. Serve warm with any meal.

CELERY SEED BISCUITS: Follow recipe for Biscuits (above) — except mix in 1 tsp. celery seed. After rolling out, cut with small round cutter. Serve warm with fruit salads.

CHEESE BISCUITS: Follow recipe for Biscuits (above)—except mix in ½ cup grated sharp American cheese. Do not roll out dough. Drop by spoonfuls on greased baking sheet. Serve warm with pan-fried fish.

CURRY BISCUITS: Follow recipe for Biscuits (above)—except mix in ¼ tsp. curry powder. Do not roll out dough. Pat with floured fingers into an oblong, 10x8", on greased baking sheet. Spread top with 1 tbsp. soft butter. Bake 10 min. Serve warm broken in pieces or cut in squares—with fried chicken.

CHIVE BISCUITS: Follow recipe for Biscuits (above)—except mix in ¼ cup finely chopped chives. After rolling out, cut with 2½" round cutter. Serve with beef pot roast.

Recipe of the Week

THIS WEEK'S $5 prize winning recipe, submitted by Mrs. J. R. Pope, 532 Pali Dr., Long Beach 90805, is developed from a basic food—rice. The recipe:

Rice With Green Chiles

1 cup rice
1 cup sour cream
Salt and pepper
1 can green chiles, chopped fine
Monterey Jack cheese
Paprika

Cook and drain the rice and mix with the carton of sour cream, salt and pepper. Add the can of chopped green chiles (stems and seeds removed). Blend well, then put half of rice mixture into buttered casserole then a layer of jack cheese, and then cover with the remaining rice and another layer of cheese. Sprinkle with paprika and bake at 350 degrees for 30 minutes.

Serene and spacious in appearance, this room artfully combines moss green and soft blue shades, at the same time artfully concealing virtues of durability and easy care. Mohawk's new Theme carpet with its sculptured "lazy river" design has comfort, practicality; styled for gracious living.

Color in Your Home

"COLOR CONVEYS an immediate impression of general mood and atmosphere," says Marvin Culbreth, AID, noted interior designer. "With today's great variety of color in all of home fashions, there's no excuse for anyone living in a drab and dreary home." However, he does warn that color should be used with thought and discretion, since no one could live in a room with over-abundance of vivid tones. The occupants and their way of life are of basic importance in working out a suitable decorating plan. He adds that decorating for a bachelor or a career gal is a world apart from doing a room for a family with childen. And, with manufacturers of home furnishings producing style merchandise in all price categories, it's not so much a matter of budget as of knowing what you really want.

Queried about the most interesting decorating assignment that he has done recently, Culbreth talked about the living room and foyer belonging to a young couple with four lively children. The room was a problem both architecturally and in color. It was poorly proportioned . . . much too long for its narrow width. The entrance opened right into the living room, and the parents were plagued with children opening and closing the door, leaving boots and sports equipment all over the place, giving the general impression of chaos. Colors were "safe neutrals," which did nothing to express the bright vitality of the people living there.

Solution was to alter inexpensively the room's architectural character by shortening it with a series of slimlined arches. Thus, he created a separate entrance passageway, blocking off the home's heaviest traffic area from the living room. To retain the impression of space, provide unity and to sound condition the room, he wanted a multi-level, random sheared pile carpet to cover both areas. Since his choice of all furnishings had to be determined by the wear and tear they would receive from the youngsters, he selected Mohawk's Theme, an elegant "handful" of carpet at surprisingly low price. Its pile is made of U. S. Rubber's Polycrest, the new olefin fiber which chemically resists practically every household stain. The upholstered pieces in the room were slipcovered in stain-resistant fabrics, while the walnut tables, desk and chair from Basic-Witz were purchased not only to add to the handsomeness of the decor, but also because of their simple, sturdy construction.

THE COLOR SCHEME, incidentally, was a joy to develop. The VIP of the house, when asked what most pleased her in the original room, spontaneously named her lovely oil painting, an outdoor scenic in a medley of greens and blues. Culbreth, immediately recognizing that she psychologically reacted pleasantly to these colors, translated them into the room using a soft blue for the walls and a pleasant moss green for the carpet. To introduce complementary design, a pair of chairs were done in a Persian floral, highlighting blue on green, while the sofa gained importance in a cornflower blue, accented with toss pillows in greens and whites. A generous splash of white in the sheer window curtaining all along one wall added a pleasant airiness.

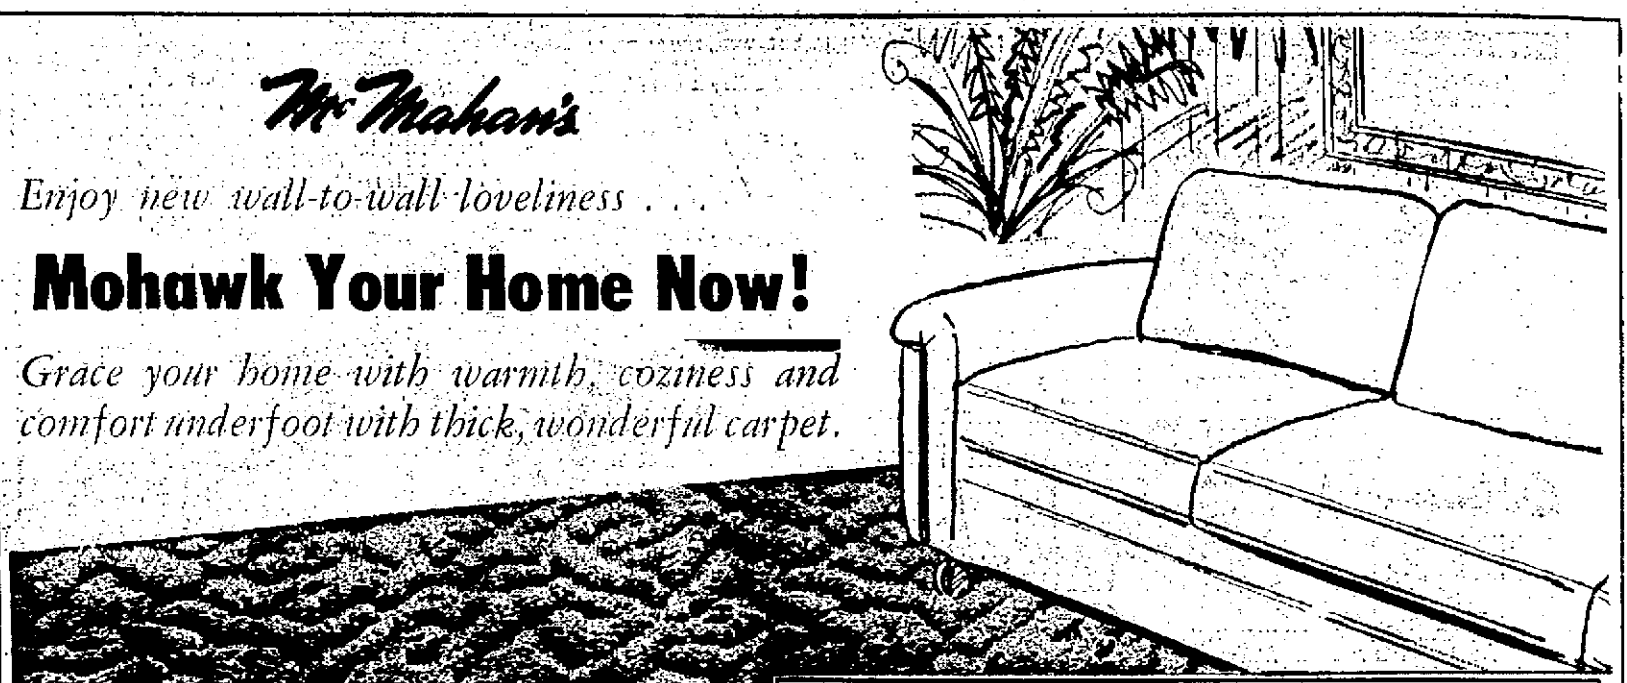

A great believer in the softening touch of greenery in a room, and blessed with a green-thumbed client, Culbreth placed a potted plant arrangement all along the front of the window area, creating an eye-catching silhouette. When asked why this job was so satisfying, he commented, "It's so obvious that the brightened spirit of this room is now alive and in tune with the owners' personalities, yet has been planned to take all the rough-house treatment it will surely get from the children and come up with a smile."

COIN CORNER

Multiple Cent

By Maurice M. Gould

CONTROVERSY rages and continues to grow about the recently discovered 1964 Cent with multiple impressions. This piece has been continually in the news, with claims and charges coming from both sides involved in the matter.

The U. S. Mint claims that these coins could never have been released by the government in this condition, and were evidently tampered with. On the other hand, the party distributing these coins—and who has a large investment at stake—is willing to put his reputation on the line as to these coins being genuine mint errors.

Some of the top experts in the country say the pieces are genuine, while others, including The Error Collectors of America, say the cents are fakes and refuse to sanction them or list them as an "error" variety.

THE STAGE was set when what was officially called a "bag-opening" was staged at the Henry Hudson Hotel in New York; specimens of this unusual coin were displayed for all to see.

It seems logical to assume that the parties sponsoring this display were firmly convinced that this coin was genuine and would not risk flaunting the law if there was any question in their minds. But the government is on the other side of the fence in this matter, and all the facts should be brought out in the open by both parties in determining if the Multiple Cent is genuine.

Multiple-struck?

We all know that the government does make errors; it was not too long ago that there was a controversy among stamp collectors regarding a stamp error which the government tried to declare null and void—even to the point of printing thousands more to make a rare error common.

A stamp dealer refused to accept this decision and fought it to a victorious end in the courts. The stamps were allowed to remain in his possession and they are now a highly publicized item in the philatelic world.

THE COLLECTOR is the one usually left out on the limb in these controversies. He does not know whether to buy the item or even whether it belongs in his collection. A freak strike of this type is naturally of interest to many collectors looking for the unusual in numismatics.

Orders for the Canadian Proof-like Sets were taken starting Jan. 6, 1966.

The price of each set is $4, Canadian funds, and the orders are limited to five sets per customer.

Everyone well remembers the furor created by the 1965 Canadian Proof-like Sets when people converged on Ottawa from all over North America, and the feverish pitch, the excitement and hysteria which accompanied the first release.

SUBSEQUENTLY, when the Canadian Mint returned millions of dollars to the collectors and investors and announced their intention of supplying all demands for these sets, the hullabaloo was lulled to a whisper and the market became saturated.

Millions of dollars were lost in speculative deals for these sets, something which the mint wants to avoid in the future.

We hope that the United States will again manufacture proof sets in the not-too-distant future, and that the collector will be able to satisfy his needs normally for all these sets.

IT WAS a sorry lesson for many people whose speculative greed was their undoing, and we hope that this will not happen again on the future proof sets, whether Canadian or U. S.

If you wish to order the 1966 Canadian Mint Sets, make check or money order payable in Canadian funds to the Receiver General of Canada and mail to Coins Uncirculated, P. O. Box 470, Ottawa 2, Ontario. There is a maximum of five sets to a customer.

According to the mint, sets will be available to meet all demands through Oct. 31, 1968.

WORKSHOP

Hang Books on the Wall

By Steve Ellingson

IF BOOKS are among your cherished possessions, make them important in your decorating. For sheer variety of color and design, pocket books regularly outdo their hard cover cousins. Better binding methods and plastic coated covers have extended the useful life of a pocket book to equal that of a hard cover.

These advances have not been gifts from the publishers. The average price of pocket books has risen to a point where it is no longer good sense to toss the book away after reading it. So it is that we find in most homes, they are competing for shelf space. Consequently it's time to put your walls to work.

The pocket book library, shown with Jackl Ray of Walt Disney's forthcoming moving picture "The Gnomobile," (see illustration), is suitable for use in any room in your home. Use of "idle" wall space this way helps to give a room a refreshing and gay note while solving a where-to-put-it problem at the same time. In addition to books, the shelf is suitable for holding objets d'art and all sorts of decorative pieces.

"BIRD CAGE" sides lend a look of beauty and lightness which belies shelf's great strength. The shelf pictured was made from left-over pieces of birch plywood, but you may use any one of the exotic plywoods now available. The cost is slight and it's a project that any amateur can undertake with success. The full size pattern and illustrations take all the guess work out of building.

To obtain the full size pocket book library pattern No. 391, send $1 in currency, check or money order to Steve Ellingson, Southland Magazine Pattern Dept., Box 2383, Van Nuys, Calif. 91409.

Washington, Farmer

By Enola Chamberlin

GEORGE WASHINGTON was at heart a farmer. In a letter to a friend, Arthur Young, he wrote:

"The more I am acquainted with agriculture affairs, the more I am pleased with them; inasmuch as I can nowhere find so great satisfaction as in those innocent and useful pursuits."

In proof of this we know that Washington left his beloved Mt. Vernon only when his duty to his country called him away. In another letter he wrote:

"I AM LED to reflect how much more delightful to the undebauched mind is the task of making improvements on the earth than all the vain glory which can be acquired from ravaging it, by the most uninterruped career of conquests."

And although Washington has been thought of as a farm supervisor, riding his horse over his acres, he could and did turn his hand to farm labor as need or his own desire dictated. An excerpt from his diary shows an instance.

"Spent the greater part of the day in making a new plow of my own invention. Peter, my smith, and I, after several efforts to make a plow model, partly of my own contriving, were fain to give it over, at least for the present. Fitted a two-eyed plow instead of a duck-bill plow, and with much difficulty made my wheel-horses plow."

WASHINGTON'S desire to kep the soil in top producing shape comes to light in his plan to dredge mud from the Potomac River bottom and spread it over the the land. Although he never succeeded in this, he was so sincere about it that a standing toast at Mt. Vernon was, "Success to the Mud."

As Washington was always ready for an emergency when he was on the field of battle, he was the same on the farm. The following diary excerpt shows this:

"Seven o'clock a messenger came to inform me that my mill was in great danger of being destroyed. I immediately hurried off all hands with shovels, etc., to its assistance. I got there myself just in time enough to give a reprieve for this time by wheeling gravel into the place where the water washed."

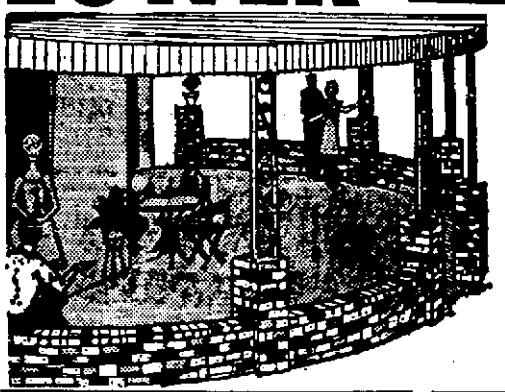

All in all, Washington was one of the most up-to-date, forward-looking farmers of his time. Were he alive today he probably would be studying how to improve farm conditions, how to do the best with what we have.

WORKSHOP

Hang Books on the Wall

By Steve Ellingson

IF BOOKS are among your cherished possessions, make them important in your decorating. For sheer variety of color and design, pocket books regularly outdo their hard cover cousins. Better binding methods and plastic coated covers have extended the useful life of a pocket book to equal that of a hard cover.

These advances have not been gifts from the publishers. The average price of pocket books has risen to a point where it is no longer good sense to toss the book away after reading it. So it is that we find in most homes, they are competing for shelf space. Consequently it's time to put your walls to work.

The pocket book library, shown with Jackl Ray of Walt Disney's forthcoming moving picture "The Gnomobile," (see illustration), is suitable for use in any room in your home. Use of "idle" wall space this way helps to give a room a refreshing and gay note while solving a where-to-put-it problem at the same time. In addition to books, the shelf is suitable for holding objets d'art and all sorts of decorative pieces.

"BIRD CAGE" sides lend a look of beauty and lightness which belies shelf's great strength. The shelf pictured was made from left-over pieces of birch plywood, but you may use any one of the exotic plywoods now available. The cost is slight and it's a project that any amateur can undertake with success. The full size pattern and illustrations take all the guess work out of building.

To obtain the full size pocket book library pattern No. 391, send $1 in currency, check or money order to Steve Ellingson, Southland Magazine Pattern Dept., Box 2383, Van Nuys, Calif., 91409.

Study Art Hazards

By Ben Zinser

Southland Magazine Medical-Science Writer

THE AMA's Council on Occupational Health is taking a new look at hazards faced by artists and sculptors.

Preliminary evidence indicates that the hazards are numerous because of their exposure to various art materials such as paints, chemicals, metals, woods and plastics.

The hazards to these persons are greater because most of these artists work alone or in small units and do not have the advantages of modern industrial hygiene and engineering safety information.

COCKLEBURS from the common burdock plant can cause eye trouble if the needles get into the eye, Boston physicians warn.

The tiny needles become imbedded in the eyelid lining and proceed to scratch the cornea, the transparent coating of the eyeball.

The condition occurs more commonly than hitherto thought, according to two doctors at Harvard Medical School. In the past two years they have seen eight patients with these foreign objects lodged in the eye.

The tiny needles are difficult to see, and they become firmly imbedded by virtue of the barbs along the shaft.

When the needles are found, they are removed by a jeweler's forceps, the doctors report in Archives of Ophthalmology.

THE INCIDENCE of bladder cancer is on the increase, and doctors now have additional evidence that the increase is related to cigarette smoking.

A new study of 136 bladder-cancer patients at Seattle Veterans Administration Hospital shows that 123 of the victims were either medium or heavy smokers.

Researchers believe that the man most likely to develop bladder cancer appears to be the one who has smoked more than one pack of cigarettes daily for 30 years.

"We do not propose that heavy tobacco usage is the sole cause of bladder carcinoma (cancer)," the researchers say in the Journal of the American Medical Association. "These tumors occasionally do occur in nonsmokers just as lung cancer occasionally occurs in nonsmokers."

However, they say, statistical findings linking bladder cancer and tobacco use are "highly suggestive."

ALTHOUGH a relatively rare situation, food allergy can sometimes simulate symptoms of rheumatoid arthritis, a doctor reminds.

Dr. Bernard M. Zussman of the University of Tennessee Allergy Clinic notes that the vast majority of rheumatic patients have joint symptoms which cannot be related to allergy.

However, he describes four patients in whom rapid relief of symptons was obtained by use of a diet eliminating some fruits, cereal, milk, wheat and eggs.

If arthritic symptoms are due to food hypersensitivity, symptoms can be relieved by proper food exclusion or reproduced by eating the offending foods on repeated occasions.

A SIMPLE home test developed by Boston researchers may make the rhythm method of birth control more reliable.

The test, carried out daily, shows when ovulation occurs. It does this through color changes that take place when a sample of cervical mucus is applied to a strip of test paper.

Ovulation must occur before conception can take place.

The report is in Medical World News.

There is a gasoline pump, a doctor, and a tiny jail which serves solely as atmosphere.

Postmistress Connie Post, whose husband George operates the market next door to the post office, counts slightly over 300 post office boxes in regular use, but some of them are assigned to residents of Red Mountain and Johannesburg, so there is no strictly accurate count of Randsburg's population. It is probably somewhere in the neighborhood of 300 to 400, counting every freckle-faced youngster. Washington, Farmer

By Enola Chamberlin

GEORGE WASHINGTON was at heart a farmer. In a letter to a friend, Arthur Young, he wrote:

"The more I am acquainted with agriculture affairs, the more I am pleased with them; inasmuch as I can nowhere find so great satisfaction as in those innocent and useful pursuits."

Beware of That Gun

spect for firearms."

There has been a tremendous increase in the number of guns bought for private homes during the past year, police say. During the recent riots in Watts, and racial tension across the Southland area, homeowners flocked to hardware and sporting goods stores to buy any available kind of gun.

"Plenty of those people didn't know a firing pin from a frying pan," one police officer commented wryly.

A NATIONALLY known firearms manufacturing firm reported recently that the sale of handguns, produced by his company, has almost doubled in a single year. More than 75,000 guns are currently registered with the Long Beach Police Department. Thousands more are being kept in night stands, dresser drawers, glove compartments and cabinets, without being registered.

Law enforcement officials feel there is a generally lax attitude about guns, and gun safety. Mail order firms sell hundreds of cheap pistols and revolvers to anybody with $15 or $20, and the return postage. An unstable Dallas man bought a mail order rifle—and killed the President of the United States.

Men buy and keep guns to protect their homes from burglars and prowlers. Women carry guns in their purses, or keep them in dressing tables, to prevent attacks by sex criminals.

The easy availability of guns in the home often results in violent crimes which would never happen without a weapon at hand. Murders, suicides and assaults with a gun are among these crimes.

As previously mentioned, guns are not dangerous—but the people handling them sometimes are—especially children. Most men, veterans of a tour in the Army, Marines, Navy or Air Force, probably have a fair knowledge of gun safety—although they may be a bit rusty.

But, even police officers and gun experts need refresher courses in gun safety. Proper handling of firearms is a mature art, which improves with practice. Children certainly need a strong course in gun handling and safety.

ONE OF THE first lessons for everybody is, according to experts, to consider every gun loaded. This strengthens respect for the weapon and helps eliminate the "I didn't know it was loaded" situation.

There are plenty of good firing ranges in the Long Beach area, where every member of a family can practice and become familiar with the family guns. One of the best is the Long Beach Police Pistol Range at 7390 E. Carson St., where more than 35,000 persons go each year to brush up on their gun habits.

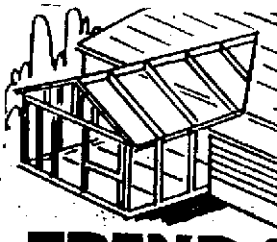

The range is open to the public daily from 8 a. m. to 3:30 p. m., and Sgt. Bob Shaw, police rangemaster, and his crew are on hand to assist and instruct. Sgt. Shaw encourages father-and-son participation in sport shooting.

In addition, the Long Beach Police Department conducts a six-week course in firearms instruction for boys and girls between the ages of 12 and 19, under the direction of Officer Jack DeAlba. Applications for the course are available at the range or police headquarters. The police department also recommends membership in the National Rifle Association, and the Long Beach Junior Rifle Club.

As a final reminder the rangemaster warns: "A gun is designed and manufactured as an instrument of death. It becomes specially dangerous in untrained hands. You have only one life to protect, protect it well."

BOOK REVIEWS

A Taste of Fantasy

By Vera Williams
Southland Magazine Book Editor

BRITAIN'S John Fowles, whose first novel served notice of an extraordinary new talent, has returned with an even more startling tale of fantasy and reality, illusion and revelation.

"THE MAGUS" (Little, Brown, $7.95) captures the reader just as it captures Nicholas Urfe, restless and amorous graduate of Oxford, who takes a teaching post in an English boarding school on the Isle of Phraxos in Greece to close out his tempestuous affair with Alison.

Better he should have stayed with Alison because on Phraxos, despite warnings, he is drawn into "the domaine" of Maurice Conchis, wealthy, elderly English-born Greek — and a magician, mountebank, "rich in forgotten powers . . . strange desires."

Soon aware that Conchis' story of his life—his sweetheart Lily died in her teens about 1915, he deserted from the army in World War I and was unjustly accused as a collaborator in WW II — is open to doubt, Urfe nevertheless becomes the fly in Conchis' web of mystery, or the "godgame," as Conchis calls it. Because, reincarnated, or just dubbed into the act, Lily appears, artfully decked out as a belle of 1915, and in duplicate, with a twin sister, Rose. Lily is also Julie and Rose is also June, but Urfe's in love with Lily-Julie and confident he's just the man to take her away from all this. He's fair game, therefore, for all that happens to him.

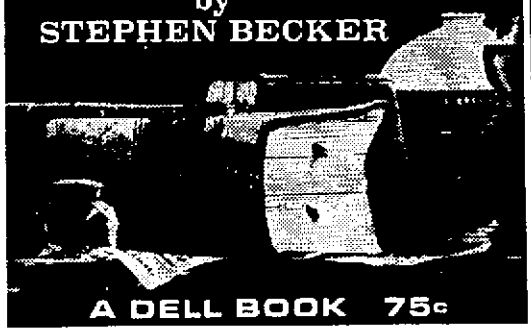

Plenty does, for Conchis' story comes to life nightly, as illusions or hoaxes, nightmares or carefully and expensively plotted make-believe, with a touch of hypnotism, a whiff of World War I and an actual capture of Urfe by "Nazi" soldiers. Lily-Julie glides about, a tempting reward at lottery odds. She could be explained as a young English actress, even though Conchis confides to Urfe she's a schizophrenic who really fancies herself Lily, come to life.

There is a suicide, of sorts, by Alison, shunted aside by the more alluring Lily, inducing a guilt complex, but shock and horror inspire in Urfe aggressive responses he never learned at Oxford or in his bored philanderings in England.

"The Magus," a literary achievement, is as impressive as Fowles' first novel, "The Collector," which was a best-seller acclaimed by critics as well as reading public.

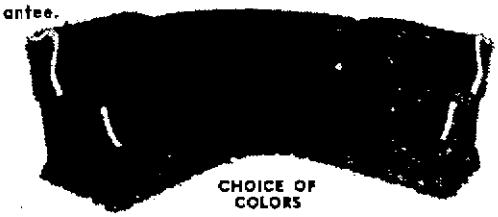

DRAWING upon the rich source of Celtic lore, Ann Moray in "A FAIR STREAM OF SILVER" (Morrow, $5) lyrically recreates 11 love stories from ancient Irish manuscripts and from fragments, tales and ballads found in Scotland, the Hebridean Isles, the Shetland Isles and Brittany.

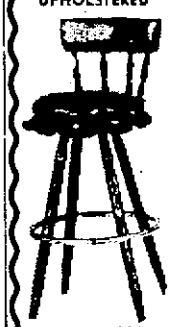

IN "VERTEBRATES: Their Structure and Life" (Oxford, $8.50), W. B. Yapp, senior lecturer in the Department of Zoology and Comparative Physiology, University of Birmingham, shows the relationship of structure to function, enabling the student to see the evolutionary value of parts of the body as they change with time. The text calls upon histology, embryology, physiology, ecology and ethnology. Figures of animals and dissections are drawn from specimens. A glossary and a classification table of the chordates serve as useful guides.

Beware of That Gun

spect for firearms."

There has been a tremendous increase in the number of guns bought for private homes during the past year, police say. During the recent riots in Watts, and racial tension across the Southland area, homeowners flocked to hardware and sporting goods stores to buy any available kind of gun.

"Plenty of those people didn't know a firing pin from a frying pan," one police officer commented wryly.

A NATIONALLY known firearms manufacturing firm reported recently that the sale of handguns, produced by his company, has almost doubled in a single year. More than 75,000 guns are currently registered with the Long Beach Police Department. Thousands more are being kept in night stands, dresser drawers, glove compartments and cabinets, without being registered.

Law enforcement officials feel there is a generally lax attitude about guns, and gun safety. Mail order firms sell hundreds of cheap pistols and revolvers to anybody with $15 or $20, and the return postage. An unstable Dallas man bought a mail order rifle—and killed the President of the United States.

Men buy and keep guns to protect their homes from burglars and prowlers. Women carry guns in their purses, or keep them in dressing tables, to prevent attacks by sex criminals.

The easy availability of guns in the home often results in violent crimes which would never happen without a weapon at hand. Murders, suicides and assaults with a gun are among these crimes.

As previously mentioned, guns are not dangerous—but the people handling them sometimes are—especially children. Most men, veterans of a tour in the Army, Marines, Navy or Air Force, probably have a fair knowledge of gun safety—although they may be a bit rusty.

But, even police officers and gun experts need refresher courses in gun safety. Proper handling of firearms is a mature art, which improves with practice. Children certainly need a strong course in gun handling and safety.

ONE OF THE first lessons for everybody is, according to experts, to consider every gun loaded. This strengthens respect for the weapon and helps eliminate the "I didn't know it was loaded" situation.

There are plenty of good firing ranges in the Long Beach area, where every member of a family can practice and become familiar with the family guns. One of the best is the Long Beach Police Pistol Range at 7390 E. Carson St., where more than 35,000 persons go each year to brush up on their gun habits.

The range is open to the public daily from 8 a. m. to 3:30 p. m., and Sgt. Bob Shaw, police rangemaster, and his crew are on hand to assist and instruct. Sgt. Shaw encourages father-and-son participation in sport shooting.

In addition, the Long Beach Police Department conducts a six-week course in firearms instruction for boys and girls between the ages of 12 and 19, under the direction of Officer Jack DeAlba. Applications for the course are available at the range or police headquarters. The police department also recommends membership in the National Rifle Association, and the Long Beach Junior Rifle Club.

As a final reminder the rangemaster warns: "A gun is designed and manufactured as an instrument of death. It becomes specially dangerous in untrained hands. You have only one life to protect, protect it well."

KORAT cats were imported from Thailand and inherit their name from the city of Korat, capital of Nakorn Rajasima, the northeastern province of Thailand. To the Thai people, these silver-blue felines spelled good luck to their owners, perhaps because they were thought of as "living silver." They were called Si-sawat cats, a word that came from the seed of the sawat fruit which is similarly colored. Si-sawat also translates into "cat of a lovable color."

No monetary value was put on the Korat in years past, but upon occasion cats were given as an expression of high regard of the recipient. A royal gift of a pair of Korats was presented by a Thai prince to Mrs. Austin Flegel, wife of a director of the U.S. Aid Mission in Thailand. These cats became the

Science for You

By Bob Brown

PROBLEM: The skating glasses.

NEEDED: A piece of smooth glass, a drinking glass, cool water and very hot water.

DO THIS: Place the glass on a level surface, and cover it with cool water. The water should be in an unbroken layer. Heat a drinking glass as hot as possible under the hot water, and stand it inverted on the cool water film. It will be seen to glide over the smooth glass as if skating on ice.

HERE'S WHY: The hot water warms the air inside the glass. This air expands and presses down on the water film so that the glass itself is actually held up on water and air. There is little friction, and on one side can act as a jet and push the glass so the glass glides around. A little air escaping in the other direction.

This can be performed in a sink with a flat bottom, or on another flat and fairly level surface.

A collection of the "Science for You" experiments is in book form under the name "Science Circus." It is on sale in bookstores.

A Taste of Fantasy

By Vera Williams
Southland Magazine Book Editor

BRITAIN'S John Fowles, whose first novel served notice of an extraordinary new talent, has returned with an even more startling tale of fantasy and reality, illusion and revelation.

"THE MAGUS" (Little, Brown, $7.95) captures the reader just as it captures Nicholas Urfe, restless and amorous graduate of Oxford, who takes a teaching post in an English boarding school on the Isle of Phraxos in Greece to close out his tempestuous affair with Alison.

Better he should have stayed with Alison because on Phraxos, despite warnings, he is drawn into "the domaine" of Maurice Conchis, wealthy, elderly English-born Greek — and a magician, mountebank, "rich in forgotten powers . . . strange desires."

Soon aware that Conchis' story of his life—his sweetheart Lily died in her teens about 1915, he deserted from the army in World War I and was unjustly accused as a collaborator in WW II — is open to doubt, Urfe nevertheless becomes the fly in Conchis' web of mystery, or the "godgame," as Conchis calls it. Because, reincarnated, or just dubbed into the act, Lily appears, artfully decked out as a belle of 1915, and in duplicate, with a twin sister, Rose. Lily is also Julie and Rose is also June, but Urfe's in love with Lily-Julie and confident he's just the man to take her away from all this. He's fair game, therefore, for all that happens to him.

Plenty does, for Conchis' story comes to life nightly, as illusions or hoaxes, nightmares or carefully and expensively plotted make-believe, with a touch of hypnotism, a whiff of World War I and an actual capture of Urfe by "Nazi" soldiers. Lily-Julie glides about, a tempting reward at lottery odds. She could be explained as a young English actress, even though Conchis confides to Urfe she's a schizophrenic who really fancies herself Lily, come to life.

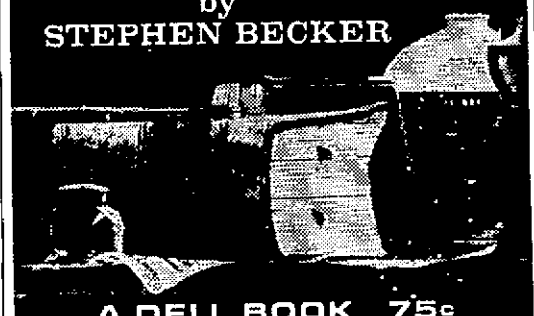

There is a suicide, of sorts, by Alison, shunted aside by the more alluring Lily, inducing a guilt complex, but shock and horror inspire in Urfe aggressive responses he never learned at Oxford or in his bored philanderings in England.

"The Magus," a literary achievement, is as impressive as Fowles' first novel, "The Collector," which was a best-seller acclaimed by critics as well as reading public.

DRAWING upon the rich source of Celtic lore, Ann Moray in "A FAIR STREAM OF SILVER" (Morrow, $5) lyrically recreates 11 love stories from ancient Irish manuscripts and from fragments, tales and ballads found in Scotland, the Hebridean Isles, the Shetland Isles and Brittany.

IN "VERTEBRATES: Their Structure and Life" (Oxford, $8.50), W. B. Yapp, senior lecturer in the Department of Zoology and Comparative Physiology, University of Birmingham, shows the relationship of structure to function, enabling the student to see the evolutionary value of parts of the body as they change with time. The text calls upon histology, embryology, physiology, ecology and ethnology. Figures of animals and dissections are drawn from specimens. A glossary and a classification table of the chordates serve as useful guides.

WHY ANTHONY?

We believe Anthony's growth has been due to a business philosophy of honest value, service, and the recommendation of satisfied pool owners. Here are some of the reasons:

DEPENDABLE ACCESSORIES. At our 15 acre facility we manufacture an exclusive, top-quality line of pool parts and accessories. What we save on extra transportation, warehousing, and two or three middlemen's profits, we can put into finer materials, finer craftsmanship. Our reputation for the dependability of our filters, heaters, water purifier, and pool cleaner—plus the assurance of service on all equipment from one source—is one of the big reasons many people recommend Anthony Pools.

SERVICE. The warranties of a builder or manufacturer depend on his financial ability to back them up. Ask any builder for his financial statement. Here is an example of Anthony's current financial back-up: Cash, $1,265,567; Total net worth, $3,050,832.

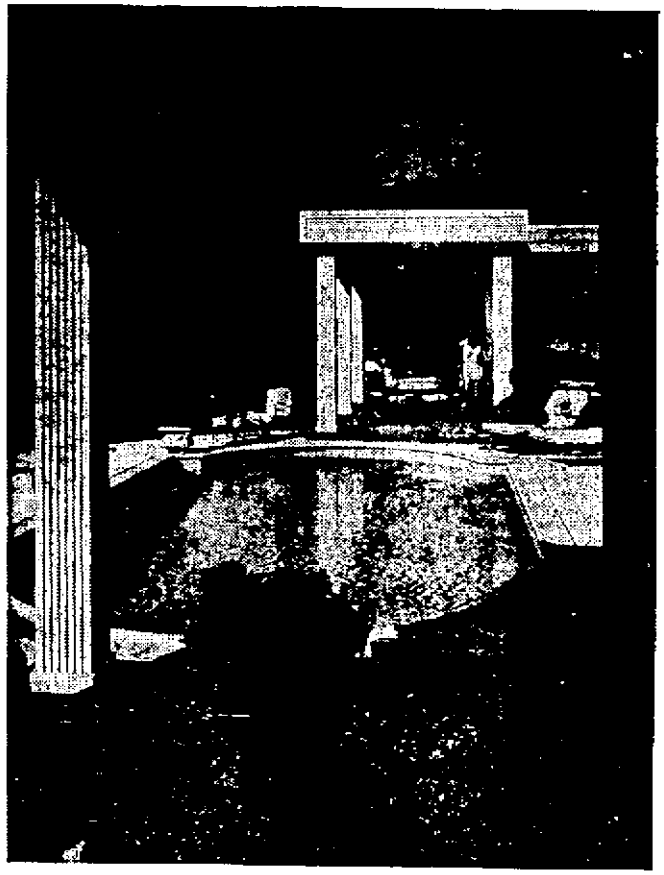

IT'S EASY TO JOIN THE POOL OWNER SET. On ten-year financing, a complete pool can be yours for very low monthly payments. For example, a loan balance of $2000 runs only $26.67 a month. Is it any wonder so many young families add a pool to their way of life?

*Per building permits first ten months of 1965 in all of Southern California, where more pools are built. Anthony also built more pools than all franchised pool builders combined!

The excellence of Anthony's designs for pools and for accessories, such as boards and slides, is an important reason many people pick Anthony.

MONTH-END SPECIAL SALE!

154,000 BTU HEATER WITH EVERY POOL*

You can get more for your money from Anthony right now. (It's our "off-season.") During the last two weeks of February, with every pool we sell, we'll include a 154,000 BTU heater. Retail value is $395.00. It's just like getting a whopping discount on the pool. No matter what is the list price of the pool you select, we will include the heater with your pool for the price of the pool alone.* Here's what makes this offer more fabulous yet: you don't pay a penny down. First payment is not till May. And you'll be swimming in your own pool long before then. You can grab a head start on a full season's pool pleasure by building your pool now—and save big money besides.

If you're ever planning to add the pleasure and prestige of owning a pool to your way of life, this is a value you can't beat—or afford to pass up. Call Anthony. You owe it to yourself at least to get all the pleasant facts.

*Installation of heater is not included. Offer applies only to pool bids made within sale period. California only.

The Right Time

Half the fun of amateur photography is being at the right place at the right time. Orville Andrews of Cupertino, Calif., offers these snapshots as proof of this old adage.

Better Living

If you have moved into an older home and find outdoor living space cluttered with overgrown shrubbery and unpruned trees, call in your nurseryman for advice and help in saving the desirable and disposing of the problem plants.

You will find that with the elimination of a few plants and the addition of more restrained substitutes you will get the ideal garden in which to enjoy your family and entertain your friends.

SOLUTION TO TODAY'S PUZZLE (See Page 30.)

Fish for Food and Light

By Helen Smith

ALTHOUGH fish has been a food staple in man's diet down through the ages, only one species can offer him a means of illumination as well.

This is the oily smelt, Eulachon Thaleichthys pacificus, called the "candlefish" by the Del Norte area Indians of Northern California who relished them for the sweetly flavored flesh and utilized them for the lard-like oil content used for lighting.

Spawning starts early in March with the run lasting through April. The natives caught the smelt, dried them throughout the summer, and in winter, when the long, black nights arrived, they merely inserted a wick in the fish's mouth and lit it.

NOWADAYS, the candlefish are just as eagerly sought due to the superb flavor which is said to be, even by experts, "better than trout."

Found only on the Pacific coast mainly along the Klamath River but occasionally as far south as the Mad River and up into the Fraser River country of Canada, the smelt ascend eight or more miles up river to spawn. Measuring from seven to 12 inches in length, the fish can be recognized by its silver-white sides and dark brown back.

Sometimes the fish are trapped in the tidewaters and caught on the way to their spawning grounds. Such an event was found to be newsworthy in an issue of the Mendocino "Beacon" dated 1890.

THE REPORT stated, "At the beginning of the week it was discovered that the bay was full of fish which were easy prey even for the novice fisherman. The news soon spread over the town and in the twinkling of an eye nearly all who could wield a rod were at the scene.

"After only a few hours sport many had gunny sacks well filled with the finny tribe. As they swarmed along the coast, the fish did not take bait but were easily snagged by a line holding a dozen good-sized hooks."

Although today the fish are netted instead of snagged, the exuberance of spirits stimulated by the arrival of the candlefish still exists.

Usually wearing waders, the fishermen now manipulate a net some three feet wide attached to lightweight wooden poles eight feet long. Holding onto the handles, the netter reaches upstream and then pulls the net downstream as far as possible. Each dip averages four to six fish. However, when the run is big, a take of 40 at a time is not unusual.

A TRIBUTE to the gourmet caliber of the candlefish was offered by David Starr Jordan, famous ichthyologist and president of Stanford University for many years, and B. W. Evermann in their book, "American Food and Game Fishes."

They described this true smelt as an "excellent panfish unsurpassed by any fish whatsoever in delicacy of the flesh which is far superior to that of trout."

They wrote that the oil is sometimes extracted as a substitute for codliver oil but it remains solid at ordinary temperatures. This fact proved a boon to the Indians.

Garden Clubs

Charles Manoogian, soil fertilizer technician and chemist, Downey, will speak at a meeting of the Dominguez Lincoln Village Garden Club at 7:30 p.m. Monday in Dominguez Building, 21156 S. Santa Fe. There will be a plant table. Visitors are welcome.

Lakewood Garden Club members will have an illustrated talk on the culture of carnations and chrysanthemums by William Ishizu of San Gabriel, a mum expert, at a meeting at 12:30 p.m. Thursday in Lakewood Youth Center, Woodruff Avenue and Arbor Road.

Tips on Gardening

Garden tips for the week . . . Bareroot planting time will soon be running out. Choose among the new varieties of roses now. Set out birch trees in small groups this month while they are dormant and you'll be rewarded with fresh, lacy foliage as soon as the weather warms up, and a graceful landscape effect in every season. Put birches where they'll get plenty of water and some shade.

It's time to put in ground covers. Consider the new junipers for a beautiful show in difficult spots.

Lawns will come to life any week now. A feeding at this time will get them off to a good start.

Dormant pruning should be completed now. Roses, fuchsias, deciduous fruit trees, grapes, berries. Cut fuchsias back at least one-third to be sure of plenty of new growth to carry blooms.

There is still time to plant a cover for bulb beds. Annual alyssum is quick and good at drawing attention from ripening foliage. Pansies and violas can be set out from flats. For a striking effect now and after the bulbs have faded, set blooming Marguerite plants among your daffodils.

Beauty Indoors

You would be surprised at how many people, no matter in what line of business, are gardeners in their own right, reports the California Association of Nurserymen. While yard and entrance areas around a home or place of business afford large areas for landscaping and "green thumb" activity, indoor areas such as offices and conference rooms are becoming more beautiful with container gardening.

Merchants in many California cities have discovered that large containers offer an easy way to grow medium size street trees and smaller tubs will add a growing decor inside and outside the shop. Home gardeners have discovered that containers offer a chance to have year-round color in strategic areas. Apartment dwellers seem ever more aware of the container as a means for gardening on decks and balconies.

Container gardens offer the imaginative person an unlimited creative range, too. In the choice of materials for making the containers and in the choice of plant material to plant in them, he has a golden opportunity to let his imagination run wild.

Potted poinsettias need not be just things of the holidays; they can be set in the garden.

YOUR GARDEN

Save Those Christmas Flowers

By Joe Littlefield

POINSETTIAS, known as the "Christmas Flower," carry their beauty far beyond the holiday season, and recipients of these beauties may transfer them into the outdoor garden or planter, provided the poinsettias are rooted into pots. Two courses are open:

Living Plant Growers say that potted poinsettias can be kept indoors at fairly cool room temperatures (65-74 degrees), watered slightly, they'll continue blooming almost until Easter time. When the leaves fall in the spring, for a second year's bloom, store the plant on its side in a cool place until warm weather. It should then be cut down to within four inches of the soil.

It may be replanted in a prepared soil mix in the pot and sunk in a garden in a sunny spot. Bring the plant indoors in August and it will start active growth again.

OR—TAP the plant out of the pot. Separate the plants if more than one in a pot, and plant them preferably against a garden or house wall in sunny location. Poinsettias tolerate cold down to around 28 degrees but not night after night. This means poinsettias should not be planted in areas where heavier frosts are prevalent in the winter.

GARDENING is a hobby practiced by even busy folk in all walks of life. As an example recently I visited with Larry Sisk, San Diego newspaper editor. Knowing his specialty is dahlias, I asked when dahlias should be planted. He recommends planting them in mid-March. This means the gardener still has time to prepare the soil right away in order to be ready for next month's planting.

Spread five to six inches of manure over the sunny garden area where you plan to set out dahlias. Dig it into the soil a spade depth, and water down well. Dig it over a second time several weeks later.

While we plan our flower plantings ahead, nonetheless, we must take care of the plants we're already growing. Two plants that are really bothering some gardeners are pansies and violas.

THOSE yellow-leafed, limp pansy or viola runner branches, almost invariably incidate the plant crowns are set too deep in the soil when first set out. To prove our point, notice the roots as you dig up the sickly plant. The roots are perfectly healthy, but the runner branches at base of plant are rotting off, which proves the point. Worse still, the gardener no doubt finds many sow bugs around the sickly branches.

Sow bugs also called pill bugs roll up into a ball when disturbed. They are scavengers mainly, and prefer to feed on decaying vegetation. They will at times, feed on young seedling plants. The gardener may think that the bugs caused the pansy or viola decline, whereas actually he was careless by not setting out those plants properly!

The Good Luck Cat

parents of the first two Korats imported by Mrs. Jean Johnson of Gresham, Ore.

* * * *

THE KORAT is a gentle feline that moves softly and is not a chatterbox. He is cautious rather than timid, and dislikes loud, sudden, or harsh noises. To the everlasting delight of fortunate owners, the Korat is so sweet and even tempered, he is not inclined to destroy furnishings in the home. Yet he is playful and responds to love and forms a deep attachment to his human family. He gets along with other family pets, but never by so much as a flick of a whisker does he feel that another animal can usurp his place in the household.

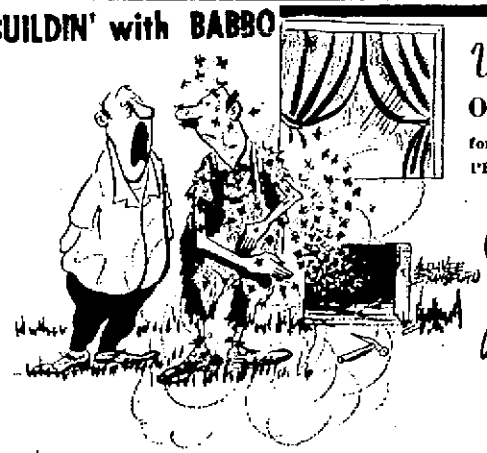

* * * *

THE KORAT'S coat is soft, short, close lying, and the silver sometimes has a lavender hue. Owners say he does not shed enough to notice. He is a medium-sized cat with a semi-cobby body, large pricked-forward ears, prominent and expressive eyes that change twice in color: From blue at birth to a lovely soft amber, then to a brilliant green at maturity, sometimes with a slight amber cast in certain lights. His head is heart-shaped, and the males have an indentation in the forehead, said to come from his heritage of being a cherished pet.

Breeders are pleased to have been able to develop this cat in America, as he is now less easy to find in his native country than he is here, although occasionally one is available. There are a few cats from Korat in Oregon, Indiana, Ohio, New York, New Jersey, Florida, Tennessee Louisiana and California.

California South Coast Retriever Club has a field trial Feb. 25 through 27 at Hidden Valley Gun Club, Corona. A dog show is scheduled Feb. 27 at Community Concourse, Convention Center, San Diego.

What Your Name Means

Raphael, 1483-1520. However Raphael was a pseudonym, as he was actually surnamed Santi.

MISS RULE: Please give genealogy on HERRING.—H. H., H. W., Long Beach; E. H., Compton.

HERRING was initiated in Britain as "Here-Ing" which deciphers from Anglo-Saxon as "army warrior's son." Reymund Heryng was recorded in Writs of Parliament for the year 1307. The Herring armorial shield is blue, covered with a pattern of silver crosses, overlaid with three silver herringfish These fish were a mistaken symbol for the name origin.

MISS RULE: Kindly give the background of MESSMER.—E. M., Lomita.

MESSMER traces to an archaic German word "Meszner" which indicated that the ancestor was a "porter" or "steward" of a manorial home and estate. The Messmer armorial shield from Berne, Switzerland is divided crosswise. The upper half has a gold fleur-de-lis on a silver background; the lower half is decorated with three silver diamonds on black.

MISS RULE: Please explain MONTANDON. — R. M., Lakewood.

MONTANDON of France was a complimentary appellation for the medieval forefather, for this name means "proud one." The Mantandon shield is red, crossed by a silver stripe emblazoned with two red roses.

Potted poinsettias need not be just things of the holidays; they can be set in the garden.

YOUR GARDEN

Save Those Christmas Flowers

By Joe Littlefield

POINSETTIAS, known as the "Christmas Flower," carry their beauty far beyond the holiday season, and recipients of these beauties may transfer them into the outdoor garden or planter, provided the poinsettias are rooted into pots. Two courses are open:

Living Plant Growers say that potted poinsettias can be kept indoors at fairly cool room temperatures (65-74 degrees), watered slightly, they'll continue blooming almost until Easter time. When the leaves fall in the spring, for a second year's bloom, store the plant on its side in a cool place until warm weather. It should then be cut down to within four inches of the soil.

It may be replanted in a prepared soil mix in the pot and sunk in a garden in a sunny spot. Bring the plant indoors in August and it will start active growth again.

OR—TAP the plant out of the pot. Separate the plants if more than one in a pot, and plant them preferably against a garden or house wall in sunny location. Poinsettias tolerate cold down to around 28 degrees but not night after night. This means poinsettias should not be planted in areas where heavier frosts are prevalent in the winter.

GARDENING is a hobby practiced by even busy folk in all walks of life. As an example recently I visited with Larry Sisk, San Diego newspaper editor. Knowing his specialty is dahlias, I asked when dahlias should be planted. He recommends planting them in mid-March. This means the gardener still has time to prepare the soil right away in order to be ready for next month's planting.

Spread five to six inches of manure over the sunny garden area where you plan to set out dahlias. Dig it into the soil a spade depth, and water down well. Dig it over a second time several weeks later.

While we plan our flower plantings ahead, nonetheless, we must take care of the plants we're already growing. Two plants that are really bothering some gardeners are pansies and violas.

THOSE yellow-leafed, limp pansy or viola runner branches, almost invariably incidate the plant crowns are set too deep in the soil when first set out. To prove our point, notice the roots as you dig up the sickly plant. The roots are perfectly healthy, but the runner branches at base of plant are rotting off, which proves the point. Worse still, the gardener no doubt finds many sow bugs around the sickly branches.

Sow bugs also called pill bugs roll up into a ball when disturbed. They are scavengers mainly, and prefer to feed on decaying vegetation. They will at times, feed on young seedling plants. The gardener may think that the bugs caused the pansy or viola decline, whereas actually he was careless by not setting out those plants properly!

The Good Luck Cat

parents of the first two Korats imported by Mrs. Jean Johnson of Gresham, Ore.

* * * * *

THE KORAT is a gentle feline that moves softly and is not a chatterbox. He is cautious rather than timid, and dislikes loud, sudden, or harsh noises. To the everlasting delight of fortunate owners, the Korat is so sweet and even tempered, he is not inclined to destroy furnishings in the home. Yet he is playful and responds to love and forms a deep attachment to his human family. He gets along with other family pets, but never by so much as a flick of a whisker does he feel that another animal can usurp his place in the household.

* * * * *

THE KORAT'S coat is soft, short, close lying, and the silver sometimes has a lavender hue. Owners say he does not shed enough to notice. He is a medium-sized cat with a semi-cobby body, large pricked-forward ears, prominent and expressive eyes that change twice in color: From blue at birth to a lovely soft amber, then to a brilliant green at maturity, sometimes with a slight amber cast in certain lights. His head is heart-shaped, and the males have an indentation in the forehead, said to come from his heritage of being a cherished pet.

Breeders are pleased to have been able to develop this cat in America, as he is now less easy to find in his native country than he is here, although occasionally one is available. There are a few cats from Korat in Oregon, Indiana, Ohio, New York, New Jersey, Florida, Tennessee Louisiana and California.

California South Coast Retriever Club has a field trial Feb. 25 through 27 at Hidden Valley Gun Club, Corona. A dog show is scheduled Feb. 27 at Community Concourse, Convention Center, San Diego.

"APPEAL of laughter fills the air, the universal language of a dozen international beauties. A ship lies in our harbor, its bow heavy with barnacles, ready to unload a cargo of fashions from Italy. A doctor sets down his Bonanza, returning from a weekend of service across the Mexican border. Long Beach, a truly international city, our city, and the inspiration for our exciting new International Menu. Come with us on a culinary tour to the world's most exciting places . . ."

Those phrases do a remarkable job of stimulating the appetites of guests sitting down to dine in the fashionable Regency Room of Rochelle's Restaurant, located near Long Beach Municipal Airport at 3333 Lakewood Blvd. Printed on the menus, the words were composed by Mel Keleman, manager and co-owner, a gracious, soft-spoken young host who knows the secrets of pleasing discriminating guests.

Tieing his cuisine in with a tribute to Long Beach's global theme, Mel offers such treats as coq au vin rouge (chicken cooked in red wine, from France); veal parmigiano with spaghetti (Italy); roast sauerbraten of beef (Germany); breast of chicken Cordon Bleu (Switzerland); beef Stroganoff (Russia); bocadillos al Pescador (a medley of shellfish, from Sjaln) and shishebob on a flaming sword (Turkey). Priced from $2.75 to $3.95, the entrees are accompanied by delightful hors d'oeuvres served from a refrigerated cart; French onion soup or mixed green salad, assorted hot breads and beverage.

The restaurant — which serves Sunday dinners from 4 p.m. on—has an outstanding staff directed by handsome maitre d' Marcel Pepin and Lorraine McDuffie, beauteous daytime manager of the dining room. The establishment's extensive facilities include a coffee shop, lounge and banquet rooms.

SUNDAY TREAT — Long one of Long Beach's most distinguished restaurants, Hoefly's, 4911 E. Second St., offers cuisine of matchless quality, including veal scallopini ($3.75) in a rich wine-mushroom sauce, charcoal-broiled spring chicken ($3.50), prime rib au jus, sea foods and steaks of epicurean character. Also prepared are these treasures: chateaubriands, Caesar salads and such flaming desserts as crepes Suzette and cherries jubilee.

What Your Name Means

Raphael, 1483-1520. However Raphael was a pseudonym, as he was actually surnamed Santi.

MISS RULE: Please give genealogy on HERRING.—H. H., H. W., Long Beach; E. H., Compton.

HERRING was initiated in Britain as "Here-Ing" which deciphers from Anglo-Saxon as "army warrior's son." Reymund Heryng was recorded in Writs of Parliament for the year 1307. The Herring armorial shield is blue, covered with a pattern of silver crosses, overlaid with three silver herring-fish These fish were a mistaken symbol for the name origin.

MISS RULE: Kindly give the background of MESSMER.—E. M., Lomita.

MESSMER traces to an archaic German word "Meszner" which indicated that the ancestor was a "porter" or "steward" of a manorial home and estate. The Messmer armorial shield from Berne, Switzerland is divided crosswise. The upper half has a gold fleur-de-lis on a silver background; the lower half is decorated with three silver diamonds on black.

MISS RULE: Please explain MONTANDON. — R. M., Lakewood.

MONTANDON of France was a complimentary appellation for the medieval forefather, for this name means "proud one." The Mantandon shield is red, crossed by a silver stripe embiazoned with two red roses.

"APEAL of laughter fills the air, the universal language of a dozen international beauties. A ship lies in our harbor, its bow heavy with barnacles, ready to unload a cargo of fashions from Italy. A doctor sets down his Bonanza, returning from a weekend of service across the Mexican border. Long Beach, a truly international city, our city, and the inspiration for our exciting new International Menu. Come with us on a culinary tour to the world's most exciting places . . ."

—Caricature by PETE WILLETTE

MEL KELEMAN
International Treats

Those phrases do a remarkable job of stimulating the appetites of guests sitting down to dine in the fashionable Regency Room of Rochelle's Restaurant, located near Long Beach Municipal Airport at 3333 Lakewood Blvd. Printed on the menus, the words were composed by Mel Keleman, manager and co-owner, a gracious, soft-spoken young host who knows the secrets of pleasing discriminating guests.

Tieing his cuisine in with a tribute to Long Beach's global theme, Mel offers such treats as coq au vin rouge (chicken cooked in red wine, from France); veal parmigiano with spaghetti (Italy); roast sauerbraten of beef (Germany); breast of chicken Cordon Bleu (Switzerland); beef Stroganoff (Russia); bocadillos al Pescador (a medley of shellfish, from Sjain) and shishebob on a flaming sword (Turkey). Priced from $2.75 to $3.95, the entrees are accompanied by delightful hors d'oeuvres served from a refrigerated cart; French onion soup or mixed green salad, assorted hot breads and beverage.

The restaurant — which serves Sunday dinners from 4 p.m. on—has an outstanding staff directed by handsome maitre d' Marcel Pepin and Lorraine McDuffie, beauteous daytime manager of the dining room. The establishment's extensive facilities include a coffee shop, lounge and banquet rooms.

SUNDAY TREAT — Long one of Long Beach's most distinguished restaurants, Hoefly's, 4911 E. Second St., offers cuisine of matchless quality, including veal scallopini ($3.75) in a rich wine-mushroom sauce, charcoal-broiled spring chicken ($3.50), prime rib au jus, sea foods and steaks of epicurean character. Also prepared are these treasures: chateaubriands, Caesar salads and such flaming desserts as crepes Suzette and cherries jubilee.

Q. A few questions about the late Aly Khan. Wasn't he illegitimate? Who was his mother? Why did he waste his life in the conquest of women?—F. L., Bethesda, Md.

A. Aly Khan (shown here with second wife, Rita Hayworth) was born out of wedlock. His mother was Teresa Magliano, daughter of a furniture varnisher in Turin, Italy. His father was the Aga Khan. Young Aly was sent to school in England. Of his formative years there he said: "They called me a bloody nigger and I paid them out by winning all their women."

Q. What is the salary of the Prime Minister of India?—Louis Klein, Baltimore, Md.

A. Mrs. Indira Gandhi, the new Prime Minister, receives 3000 rupees or approximately $630 a month.

Q. Someone told me that the real name of Robert Goulet is Stanley Appelbaum. Please advise.—Joseph Goldstein, Elmhurst, N.Y.

A. His real name is Robert Gerard Goulet.

Q. The Statue of Liberty—was it not originally designed for the opening of the Suez Canal?—Vincent Ellsworth, Montclair, N.J.

A. It was not. It was designed by Frédéric Auguste Bartholdi at the request of the Franco-American Union as a gift to the U.S. to commemorate the centennial of American independence in 1886. The Suez Canal opened in 1869.

Q. It has been rumored for some time that Lawrence Welk will not hire a non-Catholic for his TV show. True or false?—C. W. Pottorf, Clarksdale, Miss.

A. Completely false. Welk has long employed men and women of all religious faiths.

Q. Is it true that Wilhelm Harster, the Gestapo leader responsible for the rounding up of 83,000 Dutch Jews including little Anne Frank—is it true that after the war this monster was hired by the West German government as a financial adviser? — Hillel Gold, Miami, Fla.

A. Harster served six years of a 12-year sentence in a Dutch prison after World War II as a war criminal. Following his release the Bavarian government hired him as a financial adviser. When the Dutch government subsequently advised the Bavarians about Harster's past, the government pensioned him off for "reasons of health."

Q. I used to date a girl in London named Dagmar Wynter. Is she the same Dana Wynter who went to Hollywood and married a Hollywood lawyer named Bautzer? — G. T., New York, N.Y.

A. Yes, she changed her name to Dana Wynter, married Greg Bautzer from whom she is now separated although they continue to live under the same roof for the benefit of their son, Mark, 6.

Q. What's happened to the boxer Archie Moore?—David Elkins, San Antonio, Tex.

A. Moore works as a public relations man for a savings and loan outfit in San Diego.

Q. Every year when the winter becomes unbearable in England the royal family takes a trip to warmer climates like the West Indies or the South Seas. What is the official reason given for Prince Philip's visit to the U.S. this March?—D. L., London, England.

A. The same one given for the recent trip of Princess Margaret and her husband—to boost British exports. Another purpose for coming to this country is to raise money for International Variety Club charities.

Q. Before Courrèges, the Paris couturier, became famous, what did he do?—Mrs. Elaine Gottfried, Milwaukee, Wis.

A. He started life as an engineer, then joined Balenciaga whose chief cutter he was for 10 years.

Q. Who said: "The most difficult secret for a man to keep is the opinion he has of himself."? —Helen Levinson, Chicago, Ill.

A. Marcel Pagnol.

Q. Michael Landon who plays "Little Joe" in the Bonanza TV series—does he also write the scripts? What is his salary as actor and writer?—Freda Stewart, Cape Girardeau, Mo.

A. Landon has written two of the Bonanza series which pays $3500 for a completed script. As an actor he receives $10,000 per week plus residuals. If two Bonanza programs are put together and sold overseas as a full-length film he receives an additional $20,000. He earns an extra $200,000 annually playing fairs, rodeos, nite spots, is partnered with Lorne Greene and Dan Blocker in real estate, lumber, manufacturing, apartment houses, etc.

Q. When actor Tony Quinn married Jolanda Addolari, the mother of his two sons, was she not pregnant with their third child?—G. Roberts, Los Angeles, Calif.

A. Yes, she is.

Q. I would like to know why news coverage on TV is not shown in color. Certainly it would be more appealing.—Henry Burdette, Washington, D.C.

A. Two years from now practically all newscasts will be shown in color. Right now there's a shortage of color film.

A NEW AND FRIGHTENING TREND:

WASHINGTON IS SWARMING WITH INVESTIGATORS

by JACK ANDERSON

WASHINGTON, D.C.

In the tradition of the United States the government's power of investigation is to be used for the good of the taxpayers, to ferret out the dishonest and the disloyal. But in all too many cases today this power is being turned against the citizens. It is being used to intimidate, coerce and strike back at persons who challenge the rulings or oppose the policies of the government.

A contractor who won't accept government terms, a taxpayer who contests a government ruling, even the associate of another person under investigation—all may now find themselves hounded by gumshoes. In one recent and ominous instance a number of persons exercising their constitutional right to protest the war in Vietnam were ordered investigated. In another case an official used the investigatory power as a club in a private squabble.

Of course, some of the targets of investigation are Reds, racketeers and others not wholly deserving of sympathy. And in theory an innocent man has nothing to fear from investigators. But few have the resources or funds to stand up against relentless government prying. Moreover, once investigators have come around questioning a citizen's neighbors and associates, a cloud of suspicion is raised that may never be dispelled. His reputation may be ruined even though he is innocent of any wrongdoing.

The coercive investigation, it should be noted, is not practiced in all cases by any means, nor is it followed by all government agencies. The examples remain in the minority. But they are multiplying alarmingly.

One reason is that the federal bureaucracy is literally crawling with investigators who, if they are to earn their salaries, must investigate someone. Many agencies have become top-heavy with investigators. No one can say exactly how many have found their way onto the government payroll, for they are often camouflaged as attorneys, accountants or consultants. But a top official of one federal procurement agency confessed to PARADE: "We used to have a large staff of engineers and a few lawyers and investigators. Now we have a large staff of lawyers and investigators and a few engineers."

Additionally, this has become an age of investigation, in which the "routine background investigation" has become accepted, and other forms of prying and snooping are widespread.

The policy of intimidation-by-investigation has many facets. A favorite harassment of investigators is to toss difficult cases, no matter how unrelated to taxes they may be, to the Internal Revenue Service. "A lot of other agencies try to use us," Commissioner Sheldon Cohen acknowledged to PARADE. "We try to discourage this."

When the government moved to take over private homes on military bases, owners who resisted complained that they were suddenly besieged by tax agents. The Justice Department's Land Acquisition Section brought tax pressure, for example, on Nashville builder Edward Carmack, who was unwilling to sell 600 homes at Sewart Air Force Base, Tenn., at the government's price. Ralph Luttrell, then section chief, admitted to PARADE that he had drafted an official letter to Internal Revenue, pointing out "the possibility of tax evasion" in the Carmack case. The builder was subjected to an intensive investigation, which ended in dismissal of the charges. (A civil settlement is still awaiting the judgment of the Tax Court.)

One high official even used the Internal Revenue Service to take revenge on a driver whose car bumped his Cadillac at Washington National Airport. The official copied the license number of the other car, traced it to the owner, then ordered an investigation of his taxes.

PARADE talked to several attorneys who defended clients in federal cases. All but one complained of the government's tactics. The most outspoken was Urbana, Ill., attorney Joseph M. Williamson, who declared: "The government is the most unfair and corrupt opponent that you will ever have in a courtroom. Federal agencies have conducted investigations of my clients that were unbelievably improper."

Certainly most federal officials try to be fair. But the bureaucratic system tends to uphold the abuses of those few entrenched officeholders who regard themselves as the masters rather than the servants of the people. These latter usually are able to summon the massive weight of the U.S. government behind their rulings and recommendations because most agency heads, unfamiliar with the details of a case, are inclined to accept the judgment of their subordinates.

And once investigators start bloodhounding a case, only the boldest bureaucrat would dare intervene. "This is the Age of the Investigator," said one official. "The investigator is king."

"It isn't safe to stick your nose into an investigation," explained another. "What if the guy turns out to be guilty? The next thing you know, the inspectors will be trying to link you to the case."

BUCK PASSING

When one regulatory agency rejected an investigator's recommendation that a Connecticut company be indicted for fraud, the investigator resubmitted his recommendation in stronger words. The commissioners, nervous that they might be accused of a whitewash, passed the buck to the Justice Department.

The case went to a U.S. attorney, who later admitted there was insufficient evidence for an indictment. But he didn't want to take the responsibility for overruling the agency. Playing it safe, he submitted the decision to a grand jury, which in turn felt he wouldn't have presented the case if an indictment weren't justified. Result: Company officials were duly indicted, though no one except the original investigator thought they deserved to be. The trial jury found them innocent—but not until they had gone through two years of mental anguish, federal harassment and legal expense.

How many individuals can stand up against the awesome power of the federal government? No private bank account can match the bottomless vaults of the Treasury. No private staff can marshal the manpower available to the government. Once caught in the federal vise, a private citizen must rely upon the restraint and fairness of the authorities to get an even break.

Some contend that the government should offer no quarter to Reds and racketeers who will twist every comma in the Constitution to thwart justice. But others warn that any tactics the government is permitted to use against them could be turned against anyone.

Many attorneys who would like to see Teamsters boss Jimmy Hoffa behind bars, for example, believe the government has carried its campaign to put him there too far. His every move has been shadowed, his every transaction scrutinized, his every associate investigated. Even two congressmen who defended Hoffa on the House floor suddenly had their taxes audited.

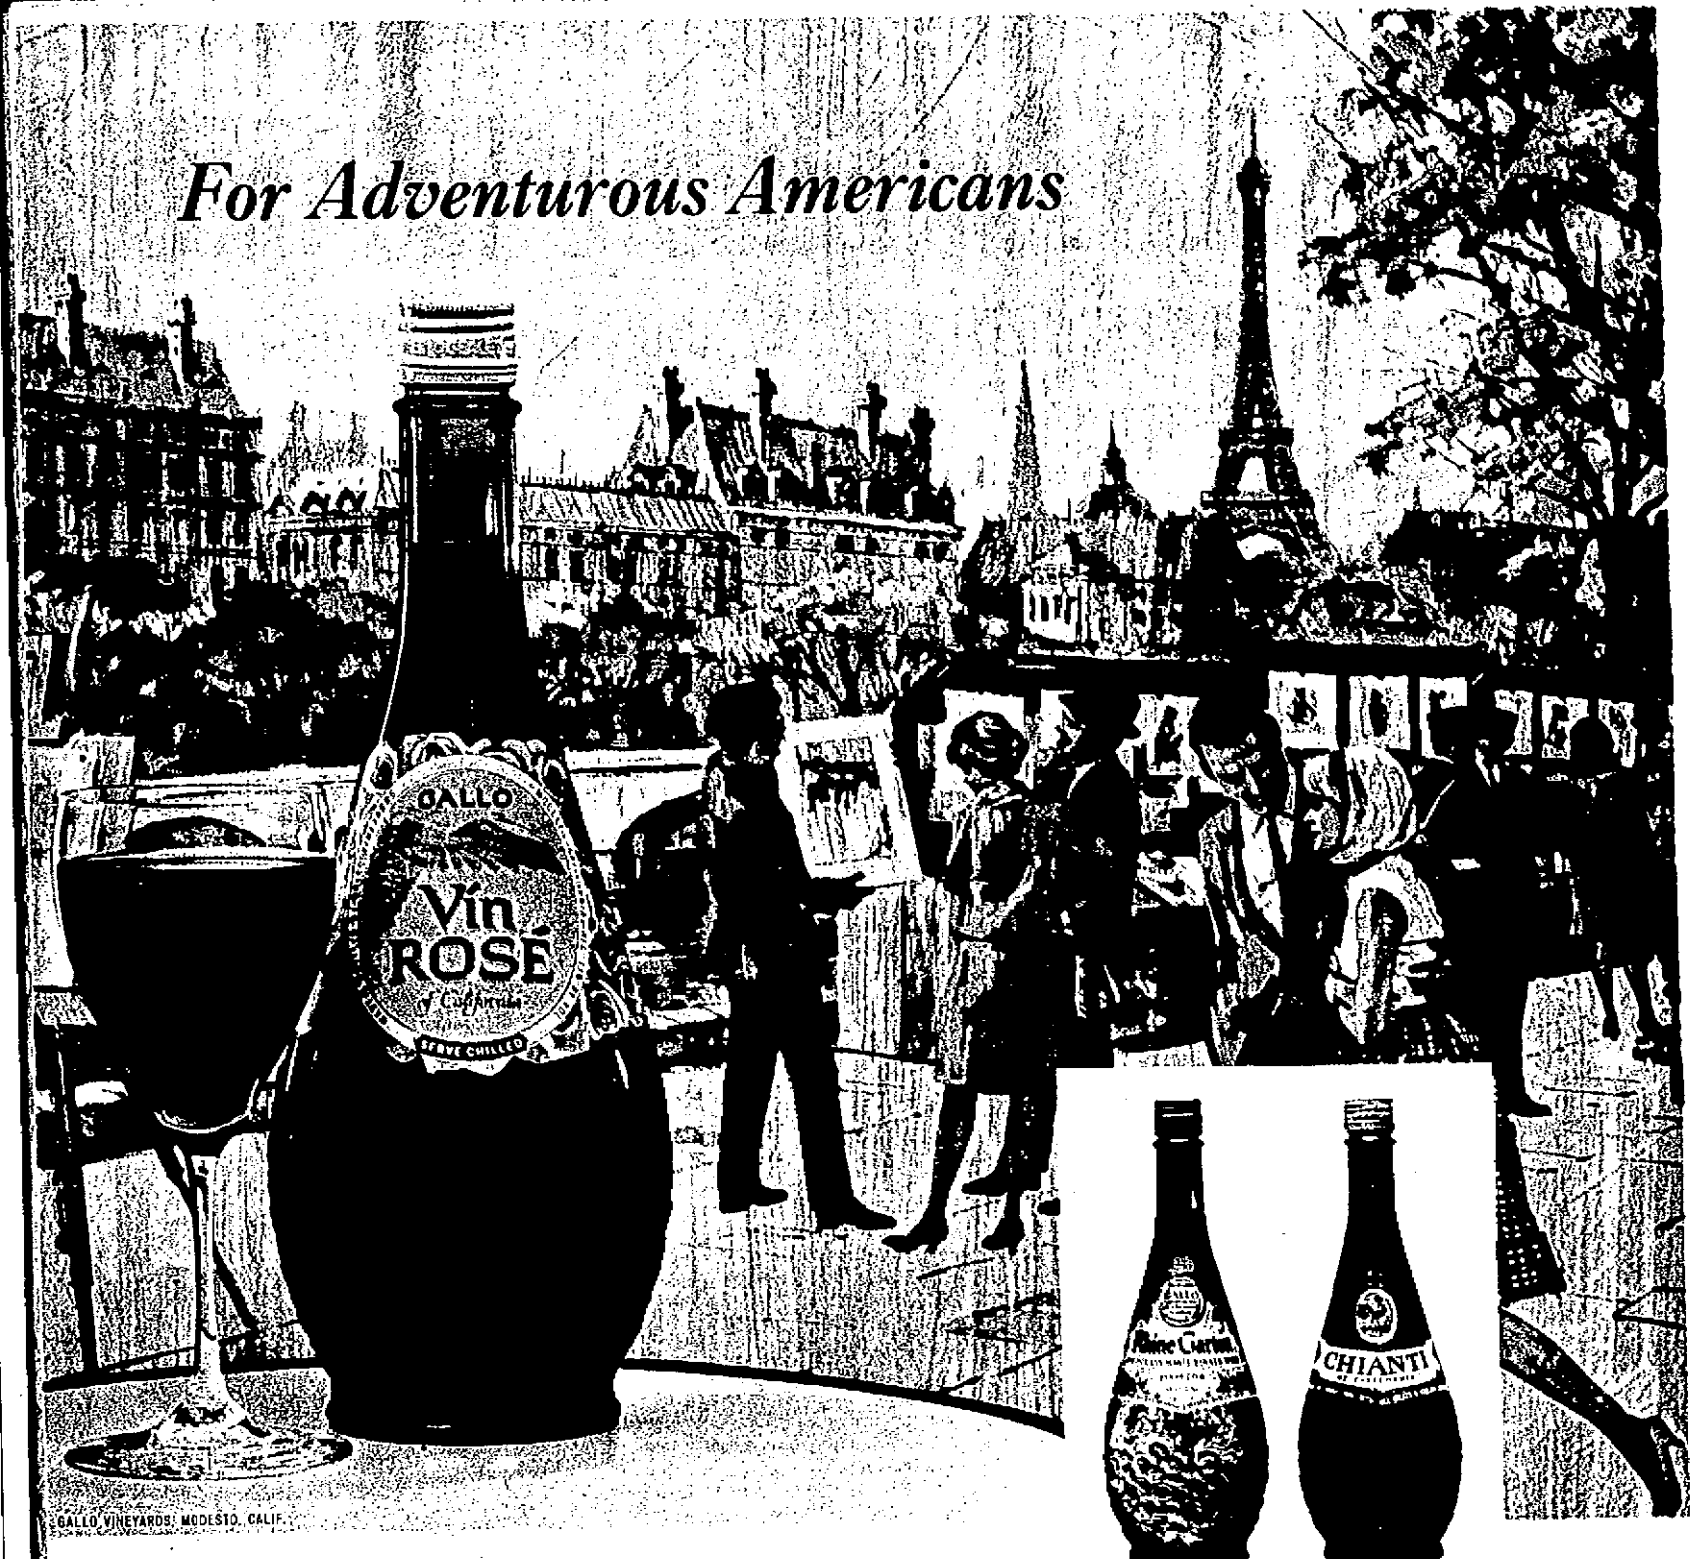

The Justice Department has indicted some of his business associates, then offered to drop the indictments if they would testify against him. A Miami banker who had never been accused of anything worse than a traffic offense until he got involved in a deal with Hoffa, was hauled before a grand jury on tax evasion charges. The evidence wouldn't support a tax indictment, so the grand jury indicted him for perjury instead. Even this charge was later dropped. But meanwhile the banker was so discredited that he was forced to sell his banking interests at a sacrifice.

A Baltimore insurance man who did business with Hoffa was so harassed that he told PARADE bitterly:

Teamster president James Hoffa has been frequent target of investigators. Government has also investigated his asso

A NEW AND FRIGHTENING TREND: INTIMIDATION BY GOVERNMENT

WASHINGTON IS SWARMING WITH INVESTIGATORS

READY TO HARASS THOSE WHO CHALLENGE THE U.S.

by JACK ANDERSON

WASHINGTON, D.C.

In the tradition of the United States the government's power of investigation is to be used for the good of the taxpayers, to ferret out the dishonest and the disloyal. But in all too many cases today this power is being turned against the citizens. It is being used to intimidate, coerce and strike back at persons who challenge the rulings or oppose the policies of the government.

A contractor who won't accept government terms, a taxpayer who contests a government ruling, even the associate of another person under investigation—all may now find themselves hounded by gumshoes. In one recent and ominous instance a number of persons exercising their constitutional right to protest the war in Vietnam were ordered investigated. In another case an official used the investigatory power as a club in a private squabble.

Of course, some of the targets of investigation are Reds, racketeers and others not wholly deserving of sympathy. And in theory an innocent man has nothing to fear from investigators. But few have the resources or funds to stand up against relentless government prying. Moreover, once investigators have come around questioning a citizen's neighbors and associates, a cloud of suspicion is raised that may never be dispelled. His reputation may be ruined even though he is innocent of any wrongdoing.

The coercive investigation, it should be noted, is not practiced in all cases by any means, nor is it followed by all government agencies. The examples remain in the minority. But they are multiplying alarmingly.

One reason is that the federal bureaucracy is literally crawling with investigators who, if they are to earn their salaries, must investigate someone. Many agencies have become top-heavy with investigators. No one can say exactly how many have found their way onto the government payroll, for they are often camouflaged as attorneys, accountants or consultants. But a top official of one federal procurement agency confessed to PARADE: "We used to have a large staff of engineers and a few lawyers and investigators. Now we have a large staff of lawyers and investigators and a few engineers."

Additionally, this has become an age of investigation, in which the "routine background investigation" has become accepted, and other forms of prying and snooping are widespread.

The policy of intimidation-by-investigation has many facets. A favorite harassment of investigators is to toss difficult cases, no matter how unrelated to taxes they may be, to the Internal Revenue Service. "A lot of other agencies try to use us," Commissioner Sheldon Cohen acknowledged to PARADE. "We try to discourage this."

When the government moved to take over private homes on military bases, owners who resisted complained that they were suddenly besieged by tax agents. The Justice Department's Land Acquisition Section brought tax pressure, for example, on Nashville builder Edward Carmack, who was unwilling to sell 600 homes at Sewart Air Force Base, Tenn., at the government's price. Ralph Luttrell, then section chief, admitted to PARADE that he had drafted an official letter to Internal Revenue, pointing out "the possibility of tax evasion" in the Carmack case. The builder was subjected to an intensive investigation, which ended in dismissal of the charges. (A civil settlement is still awaiting the judgment of the Tax Court.)

One high official even used the Internal Revenue Service to take revenge on a driver whose car bumped his Cadillac at Washington National Airport. The official copied the license number of the other car, traced it to the owner, then ordered an investigation of his taxes.

PARADE talked to several attorneys who defended clients in federal cases. All but one complained of the government's tactics. The most outspoken was Urbana, Ill., attorney Joseph M. Williamson, who declared: "The government is the most unfair and corrupt opponent that you will ever have in a courtroom. No private staff can marshal the manpower available to the government. Once caught in the federal vise, a private citizen must rely upon the restraint and fairness of the authorities to get an even break.

Some contend that the government should offer no quarter to Reds and racketeers who will twist every comma in the Constitution to thwart justice. But others warn that any tactics the government is permitted to use against them could be turned against anyone.

But meanwhile the banker was so discredited that he was forced to sell his banking interests at a sacrifice.

A Baltimore insurance man who did business with Hoffa was so harassed that he told PARADE bitterly: "Five years ago I would have been willing to die for my country. Now I hate my country for what it has done to me."

There was sworn testimony, disputed by the Justice Department, that agents had even used voodoo in an effort to persuade Thomas Ewing Parks, an uncle of a Teamsters official, to testify against Hoffa. A Nashville voodoo doctor, Bishop St. Psalm, was allegedly retained to perform the mystic rites. He lit two candles on a portable altar, according to the testimony, then placed upon the altar an article of Parks's clothing borrowed from a dry cleaning shop. But the superstitious Parks, though a believer, apparently didn't respond to the voodoo spell.

Congressional investigators have turned up some astonishing facts about government snooping. Investigators have planted secret microphones in everything from picture frames and desk sets to lamps and telephones. Listening devices have even been slipped into pillows for eavesdroppers who like pillow talk. Even more remarkable is a set of low-frequency coat buttons that can be fitted to a victim's coat in a matter of minutes. The top button is a microphone, the second a transmitter, the third a miniature battery unit. These will turn the wearer into a walking radio station whose every word is broadcast to the snoopers.

One government agency made arrangements with Washington trash collectors to turn in all the trash picked up at some 50 addresses. When Rep. Cornelius Gallagher (D., N.J.) learned about it, he demanded an explanation from the Sanitation Department. Commissioner C. M. Duke wrote back that the trash was segregated "to determine from typical household units the characteristics of refuse for statistical and design purposes." He didn't explain why the trash for this study should be collected only from people under federal investigation.

The government also seems increasingly tempted to use its investigative powers to intimidate its critics. Many a newsman after writing a critical article has suddenly become aware of federal watchdogs sniffing his trail. Several citizens who wrote to President Johnson expressing sympathy for the Vietnam demonstrators received replies from the Internal Security Division of the Justice Department. A spokesman blandly denied this was an attempt to intimidate anyone. But Jack Ferriss Jr. of Chattanooga, who exercised his inalienable American right to call the President "tyrannical, dictatorial and domineering," was promptly visited by Secret Service agents.

Dr. Carlton Fredericks has felt the hot breath of the federal government on his neck ever since he started feuding with the Food and Drug Administration 17 years ago. The agency has called him "a crackpot, culturist, food faddist and dispenser of nutritional nonsense." Yet amazingly, it has never taken him into court to prove the charges but has tried his case instead in the newspapers. The record against him consists almost entirely of press releases. More than once, agents have raided food-supplement producers who had absolutely nothing to do with Fredericks; yet the press releases, announcing the raids, have been devoted almost wholly to attacks on him. Food and Drug officials have warned newspapers and radio stations against him, have enlisted the help of the Federal Communications Commission to drive him off the air, and, of course, have initiated an investigation into his taxes. Laments Fredericks: "Food faddists have a right to their beliefs. They have a right to buy the foods they want. They should not be made half criminals."

$2.35, PLEASE

One of the most insidious federal weapons is the jeopardy assessment, which is supposed to be used to tie up the funds of taxpayers who might try to skip the country. Agents have used this power indiscriminately to force settlements out of reluctant taxpayers. In Missouri, one agent barged into a bank with a $2.35 assessment on a businessman's account, though the agent could have collected the money merely by calling on the businessman a few doors down the street.

Noel Smith, a Taylor, Mo., farmer, had his funds tied up for four years after he refused to pay a $570,000 tax claim. He was obliged to live off the proceeds of a business deal in Canada. The government finally offered to settle the claim for less than 10¢ on the dollar. Though he stoutly insisted he didn't owe anything, he coughed up $54,000 in order to get access to his own bank account again. He complained that the four-year ordeal had ruined his reputation, broken his health and cost him $1 million in lost profits. "If I had it to do over again," he says, "it would be easier to go to jail."

Several government contractors complained to PARADE that some agencies have become obsessed with audits and investigations. They have seized upon technical violations and treated respectable businessmen like criminals. In a case that has become all too typical, the Court of Claims recently "lectured" a federal contracting official for his arrogance and arbitrariness. "He nearly took a shillelagh and struck the contractor down," declared the court.

For many contractors, government profits are no longer worth the harassment. More than one told PARADE they would never bid on a government contract again. A top General Services Administration official said he doesn't blame them. "We're fighting with every contractor we do business with," he said wearily.

STRONG ARM STUFF

Frequently Uncle Sam holds up payment until the contractor, desperate for money to meet his bills, settles for less than he was supposed to get. One contractor, in order to rush work on the Bomarc missile, lived for four months in a trailer and worked around the clock at the missile site. But the government was in no such rush to pay him. Eight years after the contract was completed, he is still trying to collect what is due him. Worse, Uncle Sam doesn't hesitate to use criminal charges to coerce a contractor into accepting civil settlement. "You will find," said an attorney, "that a fraud investigation almost always follows civil dispute." S. Harvey Klein, a Philadelphia electronics manufacturer, got into a legal hassle with the government over the termination of a contract. Not until he had rejected the government's settlement offer did he find himself under investigation for allegedly filing a false claim.

The Brussel Sewing Machine Company had a government contract reviewed by the Renegotiation Board, which concluded that the company's profits had not been excessive. After the case was closed an informer charged that the company had overstated its estimated cost. Investigators immediately swarmed all over the company, and the government filed a false-claim charge. Unimpressed with the government's arguments, the court concluded that it wasn't "the intention of the statute [governing such contracts] to make dealing with the government hazardous, should someone later conceive the notion that the government had paid too much."

John A. Maxwell, a Michigan manufacturer, was actually fined $30,000 and sentenced to a three-year prison term because he followed the government's own suggestion and filed estimated instead of exact costs. It had been agreed that the exact figure would be determined later. Though the government had been a party to his act, it brought criminal charges against him for submitting estimated, hence false figures. The Appeals Court found the government's position so outrageous that it set aside the guilty verdict.

Most Americans look upon Uncle Sam as a benevolent Big Brother, which he usually tries to be. But lately our federal uncle has been developing an alarming vindictive streak.

Teamster president James Hoffa has been frequent target of investigators. Government has also investigated his associates, casual acquaintances. Even some Hoffa opponents think the campaign against him has been carried too far.

Fabrics will be as light as a May breeze, and styles will feature their own innate charm. Fashions for tots between infant and child stages—sizes 3 to 6x—are often adopted from grown-up styles without losing small fry allure. Little boys look like miniature men in Ivy League-type suits. Mothers who like to keep their sons boyish will dress them in one-piece high V-neck shorts outfits with button fastenings at the shoulder. Little girls will wear dresses much like their mothers' with ruffles, sleeves and smocking. Latest tot fashions featured on this page show sleeves—puffed or long and cuffed smocks with gathered or pleated fullness falling into an A-line, and rippling ruffles. Hemlines, too, copy mother, with tots emerging with skirts that are a wee bit shorter than usual.

I was on my way up to the top—227 pounds—when this picture was taken. Every time I went shopping for a dress, I knew I'd have to buy it bigger. When I hit size 22½, I knew it was time to come down.

Here I am at 130. My husband never thought I could lose so much weight. But I did. And I feel great!

I stopped crash dieting and lost 97 pounds

By Edith Henderson—as told to Ruth L. McCarthy

I never thought when I went to work in the bakery that I'd turn into a 227-pound cream puff. But that's exactly what happened. Of course, it didn't happen overnight. For fifteen years, I'd been overeating. My job, however, was what tipped the scales. From nine to three, I lived in a world of Danish rolls, sugar-coated doughnuts and plump apple turnovers. The temptation was terrific. And I had little will power. When I wasn't selling, I ate. And when I went home, I didn't stop. In fact, I ate even more.

My husband is a baker. He and I and our three children live on a small farm in Rice Lake, Wisconsin. We have ten acres. On six, we grow corn and oats. On the rest, we have livestock. There's always plenty to do, but the exercise I got doing chores only helped to build up my appetite more.

Our evening meal was the big one. And I really mean big. Meat. Heaps of potatoes, smothered in gravy. Sometimes macaroni and cheese or spaghetti. And plenty of pastry—prune kolachy, berry pie or my favorite, homemade chocolate layer cake.

You can see what made me fat. It wasn't heredity. My six sisters are all slim. It wasn't glandular. It wasn't lack of exercise. It was simply my own oversized appetite that was to blame for the shape I was in.

What made me decide to do something about my weight? Strangely enough, my job, the very job that was helping to make me fatter. You see, at the bakery I was "out in public." I was no longer seeing just chickens and rabbits and calves every day. I was seeing people. And they were seeing me. That's when I began to see myself. There I was—Edith Henderson, in my early thirties, wearing a size 22½ dress. The other girls I worked with were all slim. The contrast was enough to move me to action.

I'd tried dieting before, but never with much success. Once, many years ago, I took a drug. It wasn't for me. Later, I tried crash dieting. Eggs and grapefruit . . . day after day after day until I couldn't stand it anymore. I was so ugly with my family, even they encouraged me to go back to my chocolate layer cake.

This time, however, I was determined to take off the weight gradually and sensibly. I knew, though, that I'd need help. That's when I turned to a vitamin and mineral reducing-plan candy to curb my appetite. I'd read in a magazine about movie stars using it. And our local druggist thought it would help me. Oh yes, one thing more. Misery loves company. So I called a few of my overweight friends to ask if they wouldn't be interested in trying to reduce along with me. They were. So we formed the "Chub Club." Some took reducing drugs. Others tried liquid diet drinks. Still others used will power alone. I was the only one to take the candy, Ayds. And I was the only one to achieve a major weight loss.

What did I have to do on the Ayds Plan? It was really quite simple. The candy contains no drugs. There's nothing in it that made me nervous. I just followed directions — took one or two Ayds before meals, with a hot drink. For me, that was usually a cup of coffee or tea. Fifteen minutes later, I was able to sit down at the table with the rest of my family and eat what they ate. Only I ate less, because my appetite had been curbed and I wanted less.

Where cake and coffee used to be routine when we watched television in the evening, I now take a cup of coffee and an Ayds. It comes in two flavors, you know. There's the caramel kind. And there's the chocolate fudgy kind. I like the caramel kind best, because it's chewier. I have to have something to chew when I'm reducing. I just can't drink a meal.

How much weight did I lose in all? 97 pounds! And I've maintained the weight loss, too. My husband told me later that he never thought I could do it. But I did! And I feel great. I felt good-natured, too, all the time I was on the Ayds Plan. Not irritable like the other times when I dieted.

My whole family is just delighted with the new "me." And so am I. I seem to be more popular and have more friends than I ever did. My new figure has caused quite a lot of talk in the town where I was raised, too. A few months ago, I went back for a visit. Someone who'd known me for years stopped me on the street. Only she thought I was my sister. My "skinny" sister. What a compliment that was for me! And so it would be for you, if you'd gone from a size 22½ to a size 12! Thank you, Ayds.

George Washington, born 234 years ago this Tuesday, was in love with the same woman all his adult life. The familiar portrait of round-faced, white-haired Martha, his devoted wife for 40 years, comes to mind at once. But it was not she. The true love of The Father of His Country, recent research indicates, was the wife of a close friend.

But none of the never-ending investigation into the life of our first President has uncovered any hint of scandal. He kept himself a safe distance from dangerous entanglement. He remains, as Gladstone called him, "the purest figure in history."

Washington's secret love was lovely, spirited Sally Cary Fairfax. When he met her, she was the young wife of George William Fairfax, brother-in-law of Lawrence Washington, George's elder half-brother.

When George was 14, his father died, and Lawrence took the boy to live with him on his Virginia estate, the historic Mount Vernon. A few years later, the Fairfaxes came to live at nearby Belvoir.

Probably Sally Fairfax had little occasion to notice George until he was 20 and, almost overnight, became the owner of Mount Vernon and of vast stretches of Virginia land. Lawrence Washington died, so did his child, and the widow remarried. The widow received a small cash settlement and George inherited the rest. He now could meet the Fairfaxes as an equal, not as the dependent of a relative.

In this setting, Washington appears to have fallen victim at once to the charm and attractiveness of Mrs. Fairfax, who was two years his senior. He did not hide the fact from her, though he was careful to conceal it from others.

Sally Fairfax was genuinely fond of Washington. And she was in a position that any pretty young woman might enjoy. She was happily married, secure in her social standing and sure of her virtue; she possessed the heart and attentions of a virile and determined young neighbor.

Very soon he was a young neighbor of some fame, too. Washington distinguished himself in border skirmishes between the Virginia militia and French colonial forces—the beginning of a military career that led to his command of the Continental Army in the American Revolution.

NOTES TO GEORGE

Sally Fairfax flirted with him. She teased him. If he tried to wrench himself free she had only to send a teasing little note to bring him trotting back. But for Washington it was all anguish.

Many times he gave himself the opportunity to fall in love with someone else. There was a sister of Sally's. But, Washington recorded at the time, the proximity to Sally "makes me the more uneasy." There was Mary Bland and Lucy Grymes and Betsy Fauntleroy. When he rode to Boston seeking a pre-Revolution royal commission from the English, he met Mary Philipse. Washington's friend, Joseph Chew, tried hard to make a match between them.

But Washington's heart was not in any of these courtships, and nothing came of them. It was Sally with whom he exchanged letters (discreetly addressed to an intermediary) while he was away on military campaigns. He served as an aide to the British general, Edward Braddock, in an engagement with the French and came home dejected because, though he personally fought well, Braddock lost. Sally at once dispatched word that she would walk to Mount Vernon unless he came to see her immediately. It was the visits to Sally's house (and no other visits) and his dances with Sally (and with no other woman) that he habitually recorded in his diary.

Yet it was a hopeless affair, and Washington knew it. Since he could not have Sally and could not love anyone else, he married in 1759 at the age of 27, for convenience. A lot of comfort went along with the convenience. For plump, dumpy, widowed Martha Custis was devoted to her bridegroom's welfare—and she brought to the marriage so much wealth that Washington became the richest man in Virginia. Martha also brought her own two small children; she and Washington were never to have any.

When Sally teased him about his choice of the unglamorous Martha, Washington wrote her a touching reply in the stilted language of the time. He told Mrs. Fairfax he was too sensitive to her charms "to deny the power [I feel] and was ever to submit to." He recalled "a thousand tender passages that I would wish to obliterate, till I am bid to revive them . . . ." He concluded:

"The world has no business to know the object of my love, declared in this manner to—you, when I want to conceal it . . . . I dare believe that you are as happy as you say . . . . I wish I was happy also . . . ."

Not long after George and Martha were wed, Sally went to live in England with her Tory husband. Washington pursued the life of a Virginia gentleman. He foxhunted, dined, danced and entertained. Once a year he went to Annapolis for the race meet. He was a member of the Virginia House of Burgesses and twice a year traveled to Williamsburg for its meetings. Martha sometimes joined him or sometimes did not, as he wished or as convention dictated.

Washington worked far harder than was customary for a gentleman. He was at his desk at 4 in the morning going over his accounts. He rode over his huge estate, inspecting its mills, stables and crops. Occasionally it was necessary to visit his other plantations in neighboring counties.

ARMY CHIEF

Rebelliousness against British control heightened among the American colonists. The First and then the Second Continental Congresses were called, and Washington was elected to participate each time. At the Second, his inspirational qualities and outstanding record as a militia officer were recognized in his election as commander in chief of the Continental Army.

From 1775 to 1781 Washington led his meager, ill-equipped forces to victory and defeat, through the bitter suffering of the winters, until the independent existence of the United States of America was won. In 1789 came the start of the first of his two terms as president. Then, eight years later—retirement at last to Mount Vernon. Martha was still at his side.

Through these most momentous years of Washington's life, Sally Fairfax had remained in England. But memories of her were always with him. Not long before his death in 1799 at the age of 67 he penned a letter to Sally, now grown old as he had, which revealed how much meaning the memories held.

". . . So many important events have occurred and such changes in men and things have taken place," Washington wrote modestly, "as the compass of a letter would give you but an inadequate idea of. None of which events, however, nor all of them together, have been able to eradicate from my mind the recollection of those happy moments, the happiest of my life, which I have enjoyed in your company."

The author, a collateral descendant of George Washington, has made a lengthy study of his distinguished ancestor.

INTELLIGENCE REPORT

BECAUSE OF VOLUME OF MAIL RECEIVED, PARADE REGRETS IT CANNOT ANSWER QUERIES ABOUT THIS COLUMN.

WOMAN AND HER ROLES. Ask the average American wife which role in her life she considers most important -- wife or mother. Chances are she will admit that to her the most important people are her children. Helen Lopata of Roosevelt University questioned 522 housewives. Only 33% of these allotted their role of wife to the top position. According to the Lopata study most of the wives polled regard their husbands first as providers, then as fathers, lastly as husbands. Miss Lopata suggests that married women in America today may be classified into the following types: (1) The husband-oriented wife who builds her entire life around her husband and his job. (2) The life-cycle wife who enjoys a husband-oriented honeymoon, graduates to an intensive period of motherhood, reverts to wifehood after her children leave home. (3) The family mother who concentrates on a unit consisting of herself and children with the husband external to the group. (4) The home-oriented housewife who is more interested in her house and its furnishings than anything else and regards both children and husband as infringements upon her basic area of interest.

HIGH SCHOOL DROPOUTS. What happens to U.S. high school students who fail to graduate? According to a report by Forest Bogan in the Monthly Labor Review, male dropouts get low-paying jobs as agricultural or construction laborers. Female dropouts get jobs as domestic servants in private homes if they get any jobs at all. Female dropouts have the highest unemployments rate: 18.9%. For Negro youths a high school diploma affords no great help. The unemployment rate among Negro graduates is 16.1%. The unemployment rate for Negro dropouts is almost identical: 16.3%. High school dropouts generally come from the poorest families. About 40% of dropouts' families have annual incomes less than $3000 compared to 12% of the graduates' families.

SENTRY DOGS. The armed services have decided that for sentry duty in Vietnam no dog is more qualified in terms of size, strength, and intelligence than the German shepherd. More than 2000 will be flown in to help guard American military bases and work night patrols. The Air Force gives each dog eight weeks of basic training at Lackland Air Force Base, San Antonio, Tex., before flying them overseas. The cream of the German shepherds, assigned to night patrol duty, are trained at Fort Benning, Ga.

GEN. FRANCISCO FRANCO AND WIFE

30 YEARS OF FRANCO. This year the Franco regime in Spain is 30 years old. What has Franco accomplished in three decades of dictatorship? Under the iron rule of the diminutive caudillo, no great Spanish painters, writers, doctors, scientists, teachers or musicians have come to the fore. Unrest continues in student and labor circles. Galloping inflation is rampant. There has been peace but also fear, lack of freedom and the resultant cultural stagnation. Franco at 73 has no intention of stepping down. He says he is willing to share some of his powers with a premier and that one day Spain will again have a king. But both will be of his choosing.

BRITISH GAMBLING. The number-one social evil in Great Britain today is gambling. Ever since the government legalized gambling clubs, those who can afford least to lose have been losing the most. George Thomas, parliamentary secretary at the Home Office, recently declared: "There are families whose lives are being ruined because of gambling. The time has come to strike a note of warning to the nation. Unless a halt is called now, we will be on the way to decadence from which it will be very difficult to recover."

FRENCH TEENAGERS A large group of teenagers in France were asked in a recent poll to name their favorite leisure time activities. They replied as follows:

Movies	25%
Reading	22%
Group outings	21%
Dancing	13%
Sports	6%
Television	5%
Dating	5%

In the U.S., television and dating rank on top.

READ AND WRITE. The following pamphlets are worth sending for. They contain useful and timely advice: "All About Knives and Carving," a six-page pamphlet explaining by words and illustration how to carve 10 different kinds of roasts and meat cuts, how to care for knives and blades. Free from Ekco Housewares Co. Dept. PP, 9234 W. Belmont, Franklin Park, Ill. 60131.

PARADE'S SPECIAL

INTELLIGENCE REPORT

BECAUSE OF VOLUME OF MAIL RECEIVED, PARADE REGRETS IT CANNOT ANSWER QUERIES ABOUT THIS COLUMN.

WOMAN AND HER ROLES. Ask the average American wife which role in her life she considers most important -- wife or mother. Chances are she will admit that to her the most important people are her children. Helen Lopata of Roosevelt University questioned 522 housewives. Only 33% of these allotted their role of wife to the top position. According to the Lopata study most of the wives polled regard their husbands first as providers, then as fathers, lastly as husbands. Miss Lopata suggests that married women in America today may be classified into the following types: (1) The husband-oriented wife who builds her entire life around her husband and his job. (2) The life-cycle wife who enjoys a husband-oriented honeymoon, graduates to an intensive period of motherhood, reverts to wifehood after her children leave home. (3) The family mother who concentrates on a unit consisting of herself and children with the husband external to the group. (4) The home-oriented housewife who is more interested in her house and its furnishings than anything else and regards both children and husband as infringements upon her basic area of interest.

HIGH SCHOOL DROPOUTS. What happens to U.S. high school students who fail to graduate? According to a report by Forest Bogan in the Monthly Labor Review, male dropouts get low-paying jobs as agricultural or construction laborers. Female dropouts get jobs as domestic servants in private homes if they get any jobs at all. Female dropouts have the highest unemployments rate: 18.9%. For Negro youths a high school diploma affords no great help. The unemployment rate among Negro graduates is 16.1%. The unemployment rate for Negro dropouts is almost identical: 16.3%. High school dropouts generally come from the poorest families. About 40% of dropouts' families have annual incomes less than $3000 compared to 12% of the graduates' families.

SENTRY DOGS. The armed services have decided that for sentry duty in Vietnam no dog is more qualified in terms of size, strength, and intelligence than the German shepherd. More than 2000 will be flown in to help guard American military bases and work night patrols. The Air Force gives each dog eight weeks of basic training at Lackland Air Force Base, San Antonio, Tex., before flying them overseas. The cream of the German shepherds, assigned to night patrol duty, are trained at Fort Benning, Ga.

GEN. FRANCISCO FRANCO AND WIFE

30 YEARS OF FRANCO. This year the Franco regime in Spain is 30 years old. What has Franco accomplished in three decades of dictatorship? Under the iron rule of the diminutive caudillo, no great Spanish painters, writers, doctors, scientists, teachers or musicians have come to the fore. Unrest continues in student and labor circles. Galloping inflation is rampant. There has been peace but also fear, lack of freedom and the resultant cultural stagnation. Franco at 73 has no intention of stepping down. He says he is willing to share some of his powers with a premier and that one day Spain will again have a king. But both will be of his choosing.

BRITISH GAMBLING. The number-one social evil in Great Britain today is gambling. Ever since the government legalized gambling clubs, those who can afford least to lose have been losing the most. George Thomas, parliamentary secretary at the Home Office, recently declared: "There are families whose lives are being ruined because of gambling. The time has come to strike a note of warning to the nation. Unless a halt is called now, we will be on the way to decadence from which it will be very difficult to recover."

FRENCH TEENAGERS A large group of teenagers in France were asked in a recent poll to name their favorite leisure time activities. They replied as follows:

Movies	25%
Reading	22%
Group outings	21%
Dancing	13%
Sports	6%
Television	5%
Dating	5%

In the U.S., television and dating rank on top.

Make life easier—take a look at these new ideas for your home and family ■ BY PETER DRYDEN

Painting aid: Here's a handy gadget (above, left) for your painting jobs—a shield that fits on a paint can lid to prevent drip, gives you better control of amount of paint on brush and keeps can grooves clean for resealing. It snaps on, has a lift-off tab for easy removal, can be cleaned and reused. Qt.-size: 49¢; gal.-size: 69¢. Halo Industries, Dept. PP, Box 6141, Providence, R. I. 02904.

Photocontrol and timer: This photocell-timer combination (above, right) will automatically turn a light on at dusk, then off at a time you set on the dial. And when you're not using it to control a lamp—so your house will not be dark to come home to—you can convert it to an all-purpose timer by covering the photocell. As a timer, it can automate radio, TV, coffee percolator and other home appliances. You can set on and off time once and have automatic day after day operation. About $15 in stores. Paragon Electric Co., Dept. PP, Two Rivers, Wis. 54241.

Flexible power shaft: New for your home workshop, this 40"-long flexible shaft (above) fits any ¼" drill and many bench motors—allowing you to work in areas otherwise too small to reach and providing control for fine work on models, arts and handicrafts. You can use it to drive ¼" shank drills, grinding wheels, wire wheels, rotary files, polishing and sanding heads. With ¼" Jacobs chuck, chuck key and holder, instructions: $12. Coastal Abrasive & Tool, Dept. PP, 42-33 Northern Blvd., Long Island City, N. Y. 11101.

For your car: You can make permanent repairs on mufflers and tailpipes, often saving need for replacement, with a new self-sealing mending material, claims the maker. It's a heavy-duty fiberglass strip impregnated with a special bonding agent that adheres immediately, then bonds permanently in place within 30 minutes after you start the engine and exhaust heat acts on it. A repair is said to last the life of muffler or tailpipe. $1.98 postpaid. Merienart, Dept. PP, 2615 W. 21 St., Erie, Pa. 16506.

Parade of Progress items are NOT advertising. Write manufacturer if not available in stores. Manufacturers & Distributors: PARADE will be happy to consider your new ideas but regrets that it cannot correspond about them.

My Favorite Jokes

by Zsa Zsa Gabor

EDITOR'S NOTE: Zsa Zsa Gabor, born in Budapest, Hungary, some 50-odd years ago, is a café society figure who first made her American show business debut in 1952. Married four times—her first husband was Burhan Belge, Turkish diplomat in Hungary; her second was hotelman Conrad Hilton; her third was actor George Sanders; her fourth is financier Herbert Hutner—Zsa Zsa is a Continental sex symbol who intermittently appears on nightclub stages, TV screens, and in major motion pictures, murdering the English language and providing comedy relief in the process. Recently she provided the voice of the wicked "Queen of Hearts" in a TV special, Alice in Wonderland, to be telecast on March 30th. An authority on life, love, and the acquisition and care of jewelry, Zsa Zsa over the years has developed an excellent comedy timing and is in constant demand by film and show producers. Herewith some of her favorite funnies:

One of my favorite jokes concerns a factory behind the Iron Curtain, I believe, in Rumania. Every day the factory was robbed of vital materials. Finally the commissars stationed a guard to watch every worker. The guard reported that one particular laborer departed each night with a wheelbarrow filled with sand.

For 31 evenings, guards searched the sand for hidden valuables and found nothing. Finally they challenged the worker. "We give you total immunity," they told him. "You will not be punished if you tell us the truth. What are you stealing?"

"You fools," the worker replied. "I'm stealing wheelbarrows!"

I've always been amused by a golden plaque in a producer's office at MGM Studios which reads: "It's not enough to be Hungarian; you must have some talent, too."

My friend Bob Hope likes to tell stories about me. Once, in presenting me to an audience of servicemen, he said, "They liked her so much in Hungary they named her twice." Another time Bob asked if I ever accepted diamonds from a perfect stranger and how I got all of mine. I told him, "Darling, no one is perfect."

I was robbed once in New York. The burglar broke in and tried to wake me. "Go away," I protested, "Can't you see I'm sleeping? It's too early." He managed to convince me it was a robbery. He tied me to the bed, and while he was looking for my jewel box, I tried to talk to him. "You shouldn't do this," I said, "You are still a young man. This is a great country. If you're American-born you can even become President. Look at me. I came to this country with practically nothing."

I talked on and on. But he didn't react at all. Finally he found the jewel box. He opened it and whistled in surprise. "You know," he said, "for a dame who came to this country with nothing, you haven't done bad at all."

Several years ago I went to a famous Hollywood physician. "Miss Gabor," he asked, "do you mind if I have you X-rayed? I'd like to find out what people see in you."

I once asked a famous Hungarian songwriter, "Do you believe in those fabulous lie-detecting machines?"

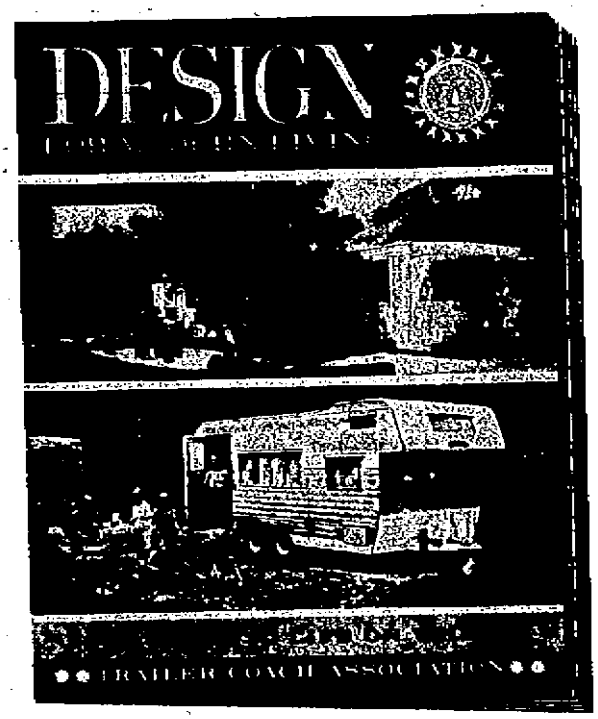

"Yes," he quickly answered. "I married one."

One of my husbands some years back was teaching me how to drive. "Darling," I said to him one afternoon, "don't you think I've made marvelous progress in driving?"

"I can't really tell," he said. "This is a rather broad sidewalk."

Some time ago I was invited to a party in London attended by some of the richest families in the country. The ladies were wearing their best jewels, and so was I. After dinner, one royal lady, trying terribly hard to impress me, said "Zsa Zsa, do you know how I clean my trinkets? For diamonds I use ammonia. For the emeralds I use whiskey, to clean my rubies I dip them in Bordeaux wine, and to clean my sapphires I simply use plain milk."

"That's very interesting," I acknowledged. "When my jewels get a bit dirty, I just throw them away."

Cold or no cold, I promised my wife a trip to Florida. Contac saved the day.

Why take sneezes, sniffles, and a stuffy nose on vacation with you? Take Contac instead.

Just one Contac capsule the morning you leave will check your sneezes and sniffles all day. Another at bedtime helps you have a comfortable night's sleep. There's good medicine in Contac—over 600 tiny "time pills" to help relieve your cold symptoms. Some work right away—others wait till later. Altogether they keep working for up to 12 hours.

Of course the best thing to do is keep your cold at home. But when something special comes along that you just can't miss, you'll be glad you have Contac. It's at your pharmacy.

NOW...a washer and dryer that give proper care to Permanent Press garments ...you can even let the dryer do the ironing

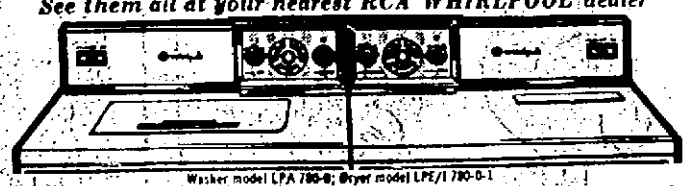

ORDINARY CARE—Here's a pair of Permanent Press slacks washed in a regular cycle of an average washer and dried. They look like they would need pressing before you'd want to wear them. (These photographs are all untouched.)

BETTER CARE—These same pants with Permanent Press were washed in a Wash 'N Wear cycle and drip-dried. They look better. Seams are smoother and there's a better crease, but they still don't live up to that "no ironing" promise.

PROPER CARE—Here they were washed in the Wash 'N Wear cycle of an RCA WHIRLPOOL washer and tumble dried in the Wash 'N Wear cycle of an RCA WHIRLPOOL dryer. You can see the amazing difference. Fabric is smooth, seams and waistband are flat, creases are sharp. The dryer really "did the ironing".

Proper care for Permanent Press is only one reason why you get more for your money when you buy an RCA WHIRLPOOL washer and dryer. They have lots more exclusive features to help you do a better laundry job on everything in your wardrobe.
